Consolidation

The Pastoral Measure 1968, the Pastoral (Amendment) Measure 1982 and related enactments have been consolidated with minor amendments in the Pastoral Measure 1983. For destination of consolidated provisions see table, PARA 1435A.

Local government: transfer of functions

The Greater London Council and the metropolitan county councils have been abolished by the Local Government Act 1985. Their functions are transferred to local authorities in the corresponding areas and, in some cases, to other bodies. The provisions of the 1985 Act are dealt with in the relevant paragraphs of LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 1 et seq and LONDON GOVERNMENT, rather than in individual titles.

301. Meaning of 'ecclesiastical law'.

The term 'ecclesiastical law' may be used both in a general and in a technical sense. In its general sense it means the law relating to any matter concerning the Church of England administered and enforced in any court; in its technical sense it means the law administered by ecclesiastical courts and persons¹. This distinction is important, as different sanctions apply². Thus an order of certiorari does not lie to bring up to be quashed an order of a consistory court, but where it is alleged that an ecclesiastical court has exceeded its jurisdiction the prerogative remedy of prohibition is available³.

This title deals with the law relating to churches, members of churches, spiritual persons and ecclesiastical officers, to divine services, and to benefices and the property⁴ of churches, whether that law is within the sole cognisance of the ecclesiastical courts or is enforced by the temporal courts of law; the title also extends to ecclesiastical courts and their proceedings⁵.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/1. INTRODUCTION/(1) CHURCH AND LAW/(i) Definitions/302. Meaning of 'church'.

302. Meaning of 'church'.

In ecclesiastical law 'church'¹, when used in relation to a religious body², has two distinct meanings: it may mean either the aggregate of the individual members of the church or it may mean the quasi-corporate institution which carries on the religious work of the denomination³ whose name it bears⁴.

The term 'Church of England' has sometimes been loosely used to refer to the Anglican Communion⁵ and to include churches which, though not part of the Church of England, are in communion with it and accept the same standards of faith and doctrine⁶. This is, however, incorrect⁷, and in Church Assembly or General Synod Measures⁸ 'Church of England' does not include the Church in Wales⁹.

1 In legal parlance 'church' is no longer confined to Christian churches; it is used eg in reference to an association for the purposes of the Mahomedan religion: Ibrahim Esmael v Abdool Carrim Peermamode [1908] AC 526 at 535, PC. For the original meaning of the term and the diversity of meanings which it acquired, see Oxford English Dictionary, 'Church'.

2 In the Interpretation Measure 1925 and in every Measure passed thereafter, unless the contrary intention appears, 'church' is confined to buildings, and means any church or chapel which has been consecrated for the purpose of religious worship according to the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England: s 3.

3 Although 'church' and 'denomination' are sometimes used in juxtaposition from which it might appear that they are distinguishable, there is no legal definition of 'denomination' to support this. 'Denomination' is only 'sect' writ large: MacLaughlin v Campbell [1906] 1 IR 588 at 598, CA. Under the National Service Act 1948, Sch. 1, PARA.2, exemption from compulsory service is given to 'a regular minister of any religious denomination'. The following have been held to be religious denominations: the Strict Baptist Church (Offord v Hiscock (1917) 86 LJB 941; cf. Nock v Malins (1917) 87 LJB 62); Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (Hawkes v Moxey (1917) 86 LJB 1530, DC); Jehovah's Witnesses (Walsh v Lord Advocate [1956] 3 All ER 129, [1956] 1 WLR 1002, HL). The following have been held not to be religious denominations: Seamen and Boatmen's Friends Society (Bratt v Auty (1917) 86 LJB 305); Evangelisation Society (Flint v Courthope (1918) 87 LJB 504, DC); Undenominational Church (Kick v Donne (1917) 81 JP 191, DC). See also Oaten v Auty [1919] 2 KB 378, DC; and see R v Registrar General, ex parte Segerdal [1970] 2 QB 697, [1970] 3 All ER 886, CA, where it was held that a building in which took place the ceremonies of the Church of Scientology was not a place of meeting for religious worship.

4 This passage was adopted in Re Barnes, Simpson v Barnes (1922) [1930] 2 Ch 80n, and Re Schoales, Schoales v Schoales [1930] 2 Ch 75. If used in conjunction with the name of the denomination (eg the Church of Rome or Church of Ireland) 'church' prima facie imports the operative institution which ministers religion and gives spiritual edification to its members: MacLaughlin v Campbell [1906] 1 IR 588 at 597, CA, followed in Re Barnes, Simpson v Barnes (1922) [1930] 2 Ch 80n, and Re Schoales, Schoales v Schoales [1930] 2 Ch 75.

5 For the meaning of 'Anglican Communion', see PARA 313 post.

6 Cf. Re Clergy Orphan Corpn Trusts, Clergy Orphan Corpn v Christopher [1933] 1 Ch 267; and see PARA 313 et seq post.

7 Re Colonial Bishopricks Fund 1841 [1935] Ch 148, where it was held that the Archbishop of Cape Town was not a bishop of the Church of England as by law established.

8 The Church Assembly, which was established under the Church of England Assembly (Powers) Act 1919, was in 1970 renamed and reconstituted as the General Synod of the Church of England: Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 2. As to the General Synod and its legislative powers, see PARA 384 et seq post.

9 Interpretation Measure 1925, s 2 proviso (b). The Revised Canons Ecclesiastical declare that the Church of England established according to the laws of the realm under the Queen's Majesty belongs to the true and apostolic Church of Christ; and, as our duty to the said Church of England requires, we do constitute and ordain that no member of it shall be at liberty to maintain or hold the contrary: Canon A1. See also PARA 345 post.

(ii) Ecclesiastical Law as Part of the Law of England

303. Common law and statute law.

The laws of England may be divided into two kinds, the unwritten (or common) law, and the written (or statute) law¹. The ecclesiastical law which forms part of the law of England is not a foreign law², and naturally falls into the same divisions. It consists of statute law and common law. The statute law consists of Acts of Parliament that affect the church and of Measures passed by the Church Assembly or the General Synod³ that have received the assent of Parliament and the royal assent in accordance with the provisions of the Church of England Assembly (Powers) Act 1919⁴.

The common law of the realm (which is none other than the common custom of the realm⁵) must not be confused with the common law (jus commune) of the Church of Rome. When used by canonists 'common law' means the law common to the Church of Rome generally and universally, as opposed to the special customs and privileges of any provincial church⁶.

See further PARA 384 et seq post. Subordinate legislation made under statutory authority is also part of the statute law. As to interpretation, see PARA 401 post.

5 Sir J. Davy's Reports, Preface. A post-Reformation usage (like that of the black gown for preaching which has ranged over 300 years may be lawful, although no positive law on the subject exists, if no objection to its legality can be found and there is no decision that it is illegal. A warrant for the use of the black gown is found in its constant user for several centuries: see Re Robinson, Wright v Tugwell [1897] 1 Ch 85, CA. Great importance was attached to post-Reformation custom in the Privy Council decisions that the chasuble, alb etc. are illegal. It was said that there had been non-user of these vestments for over 300 years (ie since the Reformation): see Hebbert v Purchas (1872) LR 4 CP 301; and see Ridsdale v Clifton (1877) 2 PD 276 at 331, PC, citing Westerton v Liddell, Horne etc (1855) Moore's Special Report: usage, for a long series of years, in ecclesiastical customs especially, is entitled to the greatest respect; it has every presumption in its favour; but it cannot contravene or prevail against positive law, though, where doubt exists, it might turn the balance. It is thought that it was in accordance with this presumption that the power of a deacon to solemnise matrimony (now undoubtedly legal) exists (see PARA 664 post). The old canon law rule as to the formalities necessary to constitute a marriage was dropped, or rather was 'utterly abolished' and 'became frustrate and of non-effect'; a new one took its place at the Reformation and has been acted upon ever since: see R v Millis (1844) 10 Cl & Fin 534, HL, especially the difficulty expressed at 746 et seq. by Lord Campbell. See also 37 Hen 8 c. 17 (Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction) (1545) (repealed).

6 Rennell v Bishop of Lincoln (1825) 3 Bing 223 at 271, per Best CJ: 'Lyndwood means the ecclesiastical law or common law of Christendom by jus commune'. See also Maitland, Roman Canon Law in the Church of England 4: and Evers and Owen's Case (1627) Godb 431 at 432. 'Jus commune' thus includes what common lawyers call statute law. As to Lyndwood, see PARA 304 post.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/1. INTRODUCTION/(1) CHURCH AND LAW/(ii) Ecclesiastical Law as Part of the Law of England/304. The origin of ecclesiastical law.

304. The origin of ecclesiastical law.

Ecclesiastical law in England derives its immediate origin largely from the canon law of papal Rome and the civil law of imperial Rome. Whatever in these codes is essential to the laws of England has long since been incorporated into either the statute or common law of the realm¹. The principal source of our knowledge of the application of the canon law within England is the Provinciale of Lyndwood². The constitutions contained in Lyndwood, the general usages of the church and certain portions of the canon law admitted by those usages are still part of the law of the Church of England³. In accordance with local custom recognised by the canon law of papal Rome⁴ the rules of the general canon law were, however, considerably modified in their introduction to England⁵.

The ecclesiastical law of England⁶ is as much the law of the land as any other part of the law⁷. It may be, and is, altered from time to time by statute or Measure.

1 Caudrey's Case (1591) 5 Co Rep 1a: 'Albeit the kings of England derived their ecclesiastical laws from others, yet as many as were proved, approved and allowed here by and with a general consent are aptly and rightly called the king's ecclesiastical laws of England'. See the Ecclesiastical Licences Act 1533, preamble, now mainly repealed. See further A-G v Dean and Chapter of Ripon Cathedral [1945] Ch 239, [1945] 1 All ER 479; and see PARAS 306, 307 post.

6 When the question arises as to what is the English ecclesiastical law it is not ascertained by calling witnesses to prove it, as if it were foreign law, but, taking judicial notice of what the law is, it is ascertained by argument founded on legal principles and authorities: Mackonochie v Lord Penzance (1881) 6 App Cas 424 at 446, HL, per Lord Blackburn. This was the course pursued by the Court of King's Bench, when Lord Hardwicke was Chief Justice, in Middleton v Crofts (1736) 2 Atk 650. It was expressly approved in the House of Lords in R v Millis (1844) 10 Cl & Fin 534 at 681, HL; and Bishop of Exeter v Marshall (1868) LR 3 HL 17, as to which see PARA 307 note 3 post, See also Caudrey's Case (1591) 5 Co Rep 1 a.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/1. INTRODUCTION/(1) CHURCH AND LAW/(iii) Canon Law/305. Canons and the jus commune.

(iii) Canon Law

305. Canons and the jus commune.

There existed from very early times in Western Europe collections of canons of an unsystematic and incomplete character drawn up mainly to meet local and temporary needs¹. Except as to purely local matters these local canons were superseded in the English ecclesiastical courts by the codification of the canon law in the Corpus Juris Canonici, which was the foundation of the *ius commune*². After the time of Gratian, such canons as were made in England were made simply for the purpose of emphasising the rules of the Corpus Juris Canonici and of applying them to local needs, and devising new means of enforcing them³.

1 This early history is discussed in the Report of the Archbishops' Commission on Canon Law, 'The Canon Law of the Church of England' (SPCK 1947), Chapter II.

2 The following account of this compilation is taken from Wright and Neil's Protestant Dictionary: The Corpus Juris Canonici begins with what is known as the 'Decretum Gratiani', the private work of Gratian, a Benedictine monk of Bologna, who is known as 'the father of canon law'. Published in about 1150 in three books entitled 'Concordia Discordantium Canonum', it was a successful attempt to codify the scattered and conflicting canons of the Roman Patriarchate on the lines of the civil law, and superseded all previous works. The first book, entitled 'De Jure Naturae et Constitutionis', deals with the sources of canon law and of ecclesiastical persons and officers, and is divided into 101 distinctiones, which are subdivided into canones. The second book consists of thirty-six causae (cases for solution), subdivided into quaestiones (the points solved in each case, together with authorities). The third book, entitled 'De Consecratione', gives in five distinctiones the law on church ritual and the sacraments. Gratian's original notes (dicta Gratiani) are of great weight, as also are the passages headed 'Palea' and supposed to be the notes of his pupil Paucapalea. Gratian's book contained the canons of the second council of Lateran 1139 and decretals of Innocent II, which seem to have been written between 1130 and 1148 (Richter x). The next hundred years were very fruitful in legislation, so that at the end of that time the Decretum had become antiquated. During this period Innocent III alone (Dr Hunter says) published 4,000 laws, entitled 'Decretales Extravagantes', ie extra (decretum Gratiani) vagantes, some of which are incorporated in the 'Compilationes Antiquae'. The Compilatio Prima has formed a pattern for all subsequent compilations, the matter being divided into five books, the subject of each being sufficiently indicated in the following hexameter: 'Judex, Judicium, Clerus, Connubia (or Sponsalia), Crimen'. Neither the Decretum nor the Compilationes (except tertia and quinta) ever received solemn papal sanction; they did not form part of the papal statute law in the same way as the collections promulgated by the Popes themselves.

The second part of the Corpus Juris Canonici comprises the Decretals of Gregory IX, officially promulgated in 1234. They are known as the 'Libri extra' (Decretum) and comprise decided cases in five books. The Decretals of Boniface VIII were promulgated in 1298 as a sort of supplement to Gregory's five books, and were called 'Liber sextus'. The Decretals of Clement V, promulgated in 1313, but withdrawn and promulgated again in 1317 by John XXII, are known as the 'Clementinae'. Each of these papal Decretals was a statute book deriving its force from the Pope who published it, and who being Pope was competent to ordain binding statutes for the Catholic Church and every part of it: Maitland, Roman Canon Law in the Church of England 3.

The Corpus Juris Canonici closes with the Extravagantes of John XXII, and with seventythree Decretals of Popes from Boniface VIII to Sixtus V (1298 to 1484), known as 'extravagantes communes'. The method of citing the canon law is very complicated and varies for the different parts; see Ayliffe's explanation set out in note 3 infra.

3 Eg Archbishop Richard's canons made at London in 1175 consist of extracts from the decrees of some Pope or council (see Johnson, Ecclesiastical Laws, where these canons are set out in full). These were followed in 1195 by canons made by the Archbishop of Canterbury, as papal legate, at York, and from this date onwards to the Reformation there was a continual stream of legatine and archiepiscopal canons, the most important being those of the papal legates Otho and Othobon, who came to England in 1237 and 1268 respectively.

Much of the canon law set forth in archiepiscopal constitutions is merely a repetition of the papal canons for the purpose of making them better known in remote localities; part is ultra vires, and the rest consists of local regulations which are only valid insofar as they do not contravene the ius commune, ie the law common to the universal church as opposed to the constitutions or special customs or privileges of any provincial church: see

Maitland, Roman Canon Law in the Church of England 4. In England the legatine and provincial constitutions do not even touch upon half the recognised topics of ecclesiastical jurisprudence. The legatine constitutions are those of Otho and Othobon. Together with the provincial constitutions (principally of Canterbury) they are collected in John of Athon; Lyndwood's Provinciale; Johnson, Ecclesiastical Laws; Wilkins, Concilia; Spelman, Concilia; Powicke and Cheyney, Councils and Synods.

The following explanation of the method of reference to the canon law is derived from Ayl Par xlv. A similar explanation as to the civil law will be found in Ayl Par xliii.

'X. 1, 9, 6, 4' means book 1, title 9, chapter 6 and PARAGRAPH 4 of the Decretals of Pope Gregory IX. 'X' denotes the Decretals of that pope.

'VI. 3, 4, 23' means book 3, title 4 and chapter 23 of the sixth book of the Decretals by Pope Boniface VIII.

'Cl. 2, 5, 2' means book 2, title 5 and chapter 2 of the Clementinae.

'Extra. 14, 3' means title 14 and chapter 3 of the Extravagantes of Pope John XXII.

'Com. 3, 2' means book 3 and chapter 2 of the Communes.

'Dist. 26, c. 2' means distinction 26 and chapter 2 of the first part of the Decrees.

'16, Q. 7, 3' means cause 16, question 7 and chapter 3 of the second part of the Decrees.

'Con. 1, 2' means distinction 1 and chapter 2 of the third part of the Decrees.

All these books of the canon law are sometimes quoted by the initial words of the law or chapter itself, and by the words of the title, thus: ex specialis, extra de Judaeis, ie cap. 17, tit. 6, of the fifth book of Gregory's Decretals; the words 'extra' imports these Decretals as well as the Extravagantes.

306. The canon law of Europe and the law of England.

Historically speaking the canon law of papal Rome was applied, subject to modifications by local custom¹, within the realm of England and was enforced by a separate system of courts Christian². The canon law has never, however, as a body of laws, formed part of the law of England³.

At the Reformation such of the canon law as applied in England and was not 'repugnant, contrariant or derogatory' to the laws or statutes of the realm, nor to the prerogatives of the Crown, received statutory recognition⁴. The ecclesiastical law, including such of the canon law as was embraced at the Reformation, is thus now part of the law of the realm⁵. Its authority, however, depends not upon its statutory recognition but upon its incorporation as such⁶ into the laws of the land at the Reformation⁷.

307. Conditions of continued acceptance.

Since the Reformation common lawyers have explained the application of the canon law of papal Rome within England on the basis of its reception¹. For this reason, in order to show that any directive, rule or usage of pre-Reformation canon law is now binding, it must be pleaded and proved² to have been recognised, continued and acted upon in England since the Reformation³.

1 See Le Case de Commendam (1612) Dav Ir 68; Hale, History of the Common Law 24. As to the historical position, see PARA 306 ante.

2 See PARA 304 note 6 ante.

The older domestic canons (eg Peckham (1288)) 'can hardly be considered as carrying with them all their first authority': see Burgess v Burgess (1804) 1 Hag Con 384 at 393, per Sir William Scott. Apostolic canons, which nowhere now survive in use, could nowhere be acted upon: Read v Bishop of Lincoln (1889) Roscoe's Rep 1 at 17, per Archbishop Benson. This rule of pleading and practice may be seen either as an example of the application of desuetude ('Sicut enim moribus utentium in contrarium nonnullae leges hodie abrogatae sunt ita moribus utentium ipsae leges confirmantur': Decretum Gratiani, distinctio IV, canon 3), or, more probably, as a procedural convenience: see Bursell, The Fusion of the Common Law and the Ecclesiastical Law (1972), Oxford D. Phil. thesis 176. See also PARA 1262 post, and PARA 1264 note 3 post.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/1. INTRODUCTION/(1) CHURCH AND LAW/(iii) Canon Law/308. Post-Reformation canons.

308. Post-Reformation canons.

The canons now in force are the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical of 1964 and 1969 as subsequently added to and amended¹. These are in part, like earlier post-Reformation canons, directives for the guidance of the Church in ecclesiastical matters and in part subsidiary legislation² made under the direction of the Crown³, originally in the Convocations of Canterbury and York⁴ and now, since 1970, by the General Synod⁵. The Queen's assent and licence is necessary before canons can be promulgated⁶, and no canon may be made which is contrary or repugnant to the Queen's royal prerogative or the customs, laws or statutes of the realm⁷.

The Revised Canons are, like those of 1603, binding on the clergy in ecclesiastical matters⁸. As regards their application to the laity in general, it is still the position⁹ that the canons are not of their own force binding upon them¹⁰, but they may, it seems, form the basis of legal obligation in the case of lay person who have accepted office in the Church¹¹.

Insofar as any of the canons may be a reiteration or declaration of ancient usages and laws of the Church which had previously been received into common law¹², they obtained no additional force by their incorporation into the post-Reformation canons¹³. Insofar as any canon embodies provisions of¹⁴, or is authorised by¹⁵, an Act of Parliament or Measure, reference must be made to that Act or Measure in order to ascertain the force of those provisions.

The Revised Canons Ecclesiastical do not provide a complete statement of the law of the Church of England¹⁶. They are a revision of the Code of Canons issued in 1603 and cover roughly the same areas of church life, but like that code they presuppose both the common and statute law of England and the general pre-Reformation canon law of the western Church, except where that canon law has been affected by contrary statute or custom in England¹⁶. In this they differ to some extent from the much more comprehensive code of the Roman Catholic Church, and they follow the English secular legal tradition in their dislike of complete codification¹⁶.

1 These are referred to in this title as Revised Canons Ecclesiastical. They were published in 1969 under the title 'The Canons of the Church of England' (SPCK), and have been amended by Canons promulgated 6th October 1969, 9th July 1972, 20th February 1973 and 4th February 1975, Amending Canon No. 1 promulgated 10th November 1972, Amending Canon No.2 promulgated 4th February 1975, and Amending Canons Nos. 3 and 4 promulgated 4th July 1975. These last (Nos. 3 and 4) come into operation on the day appointed by the archbishops under the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 7 (2), for the coming into force of that Measure. At the date (1st May 1975) at which this volume states the law no such date had been appointed, but the law stated in this volume is that which will be in force when that Measure is in force.

The previous canons were those of 1603. They were amended from time to time and a new canon was added in each of the years 1892, 1921 and 1948. In relation to the canons of 1603 it should be noted that it was the latin text which was accepted by both Houses of the Convocation of Canterbury and was confirmed by letters patent under the royal seal; the usual current translation has no formal authority: Bullard, Constitutions and Canons Ecclesiastical 1604, Introduction p. xvii. As to the position of the Convocation of York with regard to the Canons of 1603, see Bullard, Constitutions and Canons Ecclesiastical 1604, Introduction p. xvii. The history of those is described in the Report of the Archbishops' Commission on Canon Law, 'The Canon Law of the Church of England' (SPCK 1947) 72-75.

Canons Ecclesiastical (1603), Canon 113 proviso, remains unrepealed: this requires a minister not to reveal or make known to any person any crime or offence revealed to him by confession, 'except they be such crimes as by the laws of this realm his own life may be called into question for concealing the same'. As to absolution, see PARA 1047 post.

5 Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 1 (1), (3), Sch. 1; Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon H1 para 1. This canon was added by canon promulgated 7th October 1969.

6 Submission of the Clergy Act 1533, s 1; Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 1 (3) (a). Indeed the Queen's licence was required before the convocations could even confer to enact a canon: see Case of Convocations (1611) 12 Co Rep 72.

7 Submission of the Clergy Act 1533, s 3; Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 1 (3) (b). This provision does not, however, apply to any rule of ecclesiastical law relating to any matter for which provision may be made by canon in pursuance of the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974: s 6 (1). These matters are worship (see s 1, and PARA 935 post), and assent to doctrine (see s 2, and PARA 660 post).

8 Matthew v Burdett (1703) 2 Salk 412.

9 Cox's Case (1700) 1 P Wms 29 at 32; Middleton v Crofts (1736) 2 Atk 650; More v More (1741) 2 Atk 157; R v Dibdin [1910] P 57, CA; affd. sub nom. Thompson v Dibdin [1912] AC 533, HL.

10 The original reason was that the laity were not represented in convocation: Case of Convocations (1611) 12 Co Rep 73; Bishop of St David's v Lucy (1699) Carth 484; Matthew v Burdett (1703) 2 Salk 412; Cox's Case (1700) 1 P Wms 29. Although the laity are now represented on the General Synod (see PARAS 390, 418 et seq post) the general force of the canons has been settled for too long for any alteration of that position without an Act of Parliament or a Measure having equivalent force and effect.

Until the coming into force of the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 disciplinary proceedings might be brought against a layman in the spiritual courts although this jurisdiction had become virtually obsolete: Phillimore v Machon (1876) 1 PD 481 at 487-489, per Lord Penzance, Dean of the Arches; Redfern v Redfern [1891] P 139 at 145, CA, per Lindley LJ and at 147, per Bowen LJ; Elliott v Albert [1934] KB 650 at 660, CA, per Scrutton LJ and at 666, per Maugham LJ; Cole v Police Constable 443A [1937] 1 KB 316 at 333, [1936] 3 All ER 107 at 118, DC, per Goddard J; Blunt v Park Lane Hotel Ltd [1942] 2 KB 253 at 256, [1942] 2 All ER 187 at 188, CA, per Lord Clauson and at 257, 259, and at 189, 190, per Goddard LJ; Manchester Corp'n v Manchester Palace of Varieties Ltd [1955] P 133 at 149, 150, [1955] 1 All ER 387 at 393, 394, Court of Chivalry, per Lord Goddard, Surrogate. This jurisdiction was not expressly abolished by the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 save as regards the jurisdiction of consistory courts to hear and determine proceedings against lay officers of a church: s 82 (2) (c). The practical effect of that Measure, however, seems to be that although the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts over the laity in disciplinary matters is not specifically abolished (see ss 49, 82 (4)), there is no machinery for its implementation: cf. ss 14, 17, 69, and PARA 1350 et seq post.

11 Prior to 1963 such persons as deaconesses, readers and licensed lay workers had no separate legal status but, no doubt, if need had arisen, the judicial discretion as to whether disciplinary proceedings might have been promoted against them would have been exercised so as to permit such proceedings. Since then these persons have been accorded legal recognition (see PARA 759 et seq post). Although there is no procedure for the implementation of disciplinary proceedings against them (see supra) there can be no doubt that deaconesses, readers, licensed lay workers, churchwardens, lay judges of ecclesiastical courts and lay holders of other offices admission to which is for the time being regulated by canon are under an obligation to observe such canons as apply to them: see the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 2. It seems that by accepting an office or position within the church such persons become consensually bound: see Forbes v Eden (1867) LR 1 Sc & Div 568 at 576, HL, per Lord Chelmsford; but cf. the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 2, art. 6 (a) (ii). The appropriate sanction applicable to such a person for breach of the ecclesiastical law (save where a statutory sanction is provided) would usually be deprivation of his office or the revocation of his licence, and it seems that civil proceedings (eg for an injunction) could, if necessary, be instituted in the temporal courts. As to the removal of a chancellor, see PARA 1277 post.

12 See PARAS 306, 307 ante. For assistance on this question, see Bullard, Constitutions and Canons Ecclesiastical 1604.

13 R v Allen (1872) LR 8 QB 69 at 75, per Blackburn J, where it was decided that the usage stated in Canons Ecclesiastical (1603), 89, concerning the election of churchwardens was valid, 'and this can only be so, because the rule of the canon law had been adopted by our law'. See also R v Bishop of Salisbury [1901] 2 KB 225, CA; Harris v Buller (1798) 1 Hag Con 463n (Court of Arches); Escott v Mastin (1842) 4 Moo PCC 104 at 128.

14 See eg the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canons G 1-G 3 (amended by Amending Canon No. 4), the authority for which is derived from the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, ss 1-3. For an earlier example, see the Canons Ecclesiastical (1603) 14 (repealed), the authority for which originally flowed from the Act of Uniformity 1558 (repealed) and later from the Act of Uniformity 1662 (largely repealed).

(iv) Recognition of Religious Bodies

309. Recognition of religious bodies by the state.

The extent to which ecclesiastical bodies other than the Church of England are recognised by the state may be gauged by reference to the statutory facilities afforded to any congregation or society or body of persons associated for religious purposes¹, even though they object to being designated by any distinctive religious appellation².

1 See the Trustee Appointment Act 1850, s 1 (repealed with savings by the Charities Act 1960, ss 35 (6), 48, Sch. 7, Part I; Education Act 1973, s 1 (4), Sch. 2, Part I). The Charities Act 1960, s 35, makes similar provisions to those contained in the Trustee Appointment Act 1850, s 1: see CHARITIES vol 8 (2010) PARA 280. See PARAS 343-344 post.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/1. INTRODUCTION/(1) CHURCH AND LAW/(iv) Recognition of Religious Bodies/310. Elements involved in recognition.

310. Elements involved in recognition.

Recognition necessarily presupposes that individual persons can express their religious beliefs in some recognisable form, that such expression may reasonably be taken to be characteristic of them as individuals, and that a society of persons having some religious tenets in common, expressed in some recognisable form, can have a continued existence independent of the individuals comprising the society¹. It therefore presupposes a statement or other outward expression of the common faith, and some organisation by means of which the individuals comprising the society may be retained in or brought into relationship with this outward expression².

1 'There is a presumption of consistency of opinion on serious, especially religious, questions': Shore v Wilson (1842) 9 Cl & Fin 355 at 531, HL, per Coleridge J.

2 A person born and bred a protestant and of a protestant family must be presumed to be a protestant unless he has done some act to denote a change in his religious persuasion: Yelverton v Longworth (1864) 10 Jur NS 1209, HL.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/1. INTRODUCTION/(1) CHURCH AND LAW/(iv) Recognition of Religious Bodies/311. National churches.

311. National churches.

The development of territorial states after the dissolution of the Roman Empire led in many states, including England, to the recognition of separate national churches¹. The accepted legal doctrine is that the Church of England is a continuous body from its earliest establishment in Saxon times². A church formed by separation on a national or territorial basis may be identical with the portion of the church existing before the acts resulting in separation³, and may retain all the powers of organisation, discipline and self-government which previously existed; its identity is not necessarily affected by any changes which may result from the united action of the civil power and of its own power of self-government⁴. Where a church has been established its continuity is not destroyed by a mere divorce from civil control⁵.

1 For an instance of the qualifying effect of a system of civil government on the organisation of a church, see Zacklinsky v Polushie [1908] AC 65, PC; see also Merriman v Williams (1882) 7 App Cas 484 at 507, PC.

2 See PARA 345 post.

3 Merriman v Williams (1882) 7 App Cas 484 at 510, PC.

4 The identity of the Church of England from the Reformation to the present day cannot be questioned, whatever changes may have been made by the united action of Parliament and Convocation: Baker v Lee (1860) 8 HL Cas 495 at 504.

5 Re Clergy Orphan Corp'n Trusts, Clergy Orphan Corp'n v Christopher [1933] 1 Ch 267; but not, it seems, if the disestablished church should cease to recognise the existing articles, doctrines, rites and religious ordinances: see at 273, per Farwell J; cf. para 333 note 1 post; and see infra, and PARAS 314, 335 post. Thus the Irish Church Act 1869 dissolved the union created by Act of Parliament between the churches of England and Ireland (s. 2; see PARA 348 post), but left the Church of England untouched; and while it abolished in Ireland the existing ecclesiastical corporations and all jurisdiction of ecclesiastical courts and vested all property of any ecclesiastical person in the commissioners appointed by the Act, it preserved the continuity of the church by enacting that the existing ecclesiastical law, articles, doctrines, rites, rules, discipline and ordinances of the church, with such modifications as should after the disestablishment of the church be made according to its constitution, should be deemed to be binding on the members for the time being as if those members had mutually contracted and agreed to abide by and observe them, and should be capable of being enforced by the temporal courts in relation to any property reserved or given to or taken and enjoyed by the church under the Act as if that property had been expressly given upon trust to be held, occupied and enjoyed by persons who should observe and keep and be in all respects bound by the said ecclesiastical law, articles, doctrines, rites, rules, discipline and ordinances. Cf. Re Marshal Beresford's Trust Fund, Lord Aldenham v Archbishop of Armagh (1917) 33 TLR 208 (title of Lord Primate of All Ireland held not to be taken from Archbishop of Armagh by disestablishment of the Church of Ireland); and Re Friend of the Clergy's Charters, Friend of the Clergy v A-G [1921] 1 Ch 409.

A similar provision is contained in the Welsh Church Act 1914, s 3; cf. Re Clergy Orphan Corp'n Trust, Clergy Orphan Corp'n v Christopher supra (children of clergymen in Wales ordained both before and after the Welsh Church Act 1914 held entitled to be admitted to the benefits of a charity incorporated in 1809 for the benefit of orphans of clergymen of the established church); and Re Friend of the Clergy's Charter, Friend of the Clergy v A-G supra (clergymen ordained to the ministry of the established church held to retain their status and to be entitled to benefit from a charity for clergymen of the established Church of England and Ireland while holding a consistent cure in the disestablished Churches of Wales or Ireland, or in the Episcopal Church of Scotland or in the British dominions; so also, having regard to the Irish Church Act 1869, s 68, clergymen ordained to the ministry of the disestablished Church of Ireland).

The courts will not interfere with the rules and regulations of a disestablished church unless to protect some civil right or interest which is said to be infringed by their operation; and the only remedy a dissatisfied member of that church has is to withdraw: Forbes v Eden (1867) LR 1 Sc & Div 568, HL.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/1. INTRODUCTION/(1) CHURCH AND LAW/(iv) Recognition of Religious Bodies/312. Other religious bodies.

312. Other religious bodies.

All religious bodies enjoy the same general recognition by law, strengthened in the single case of the Church of England by the circumstances of its connection with the state¹, and modified in the case of other religious bodies by such special enactments as survive to mark in each case the history of its evolution².

1 For a recent review of this connection, see the Report of the Archbishops' Commission on Church and State (CIO 1970).

2 As to religious bodies other than the Church of England, see PARA 1386 et seq post.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/1. INTRODUCTION/(2) THE ANGLICAN COMMUNION/(i) In general/313. Meaning of 'Anglican Communion'.

(2) THE ANGLICAN COMMUNION

(i) In general

313. Meaning of 'Anglican Communion'.

The Anglican Communion is a fellowship of churches historically associated with the British Isles¹ which have certain characteristics in common, including standards of faith and doctrine and, to some extent, forms of worship². It embraces all those churches and dioceses which are in communion with the see of Canterbury, recognise the Archbishop of Canterbury as the focus of unity, and uphold and propagate the catholic and apostolic faith based upon the scriptures interpreted in the light of Christian tradition, scholarship and reason as expressed in the Book of Common Prayer and the Ordinal and their derivatives.

It includes the Church of England, the Episcopal Church in Scotland³, the Church in Wales⁴, the Church of Ireland⁵, the Church of England in Australia, the Anglican Church of Canada, the Church of the Province of New Zealand, the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States and numerous other Churches in the Commonwealth and overseas which share the same traditions of doctrine and worship⁶.

There are also certain Churches with which the Church of England has relations of full communion⁷ but which are not within the Anglican Communion, for example the Old Catholic Churches and the Church of South India⁸.

1 Report of Lambeth Conference 1930, p. 153.

2 See PARA 302 ante, 332-336 post; and cf. Bishop of Natal v Gladstone (1866) LR 3 Eq 1 at 47, and Re Clergy Orphan Corp'n v Christopher [1933] 1 Ch 267. See the Church of England Year Book 1975, p. 187.

3 The Episcopal Church in Scotland is a free church. Formerly the established Church of Scotland, it was disestablished in 1689. The Crown may not appoint bishops in Scotland, and the Episcopal Church in Scotland may not be a branch of the established Church of England: Union with Scotland Act 1706, s 2. As to restrictions on the admission of its ministers to preferment in England, see PARA 670 post. As to the status of ministers, see PARA 311 note 5 ante.

4 As to the Church in Wales, see PARA 322 et seq post.

5 As to the Church of Ireland, see PARA 348 post.

6 See PARA 318 post. A church organised on a consensual basis may without ceasing to be in communion with the Church of England cease to be legally a church in connection with the Church of England. Thus the Church of the Province of South Africa forms part of the Anglican Communion although it is not in connection with the Church of England as by law established (Merriman v Williams (1882) 7 App Cas 484, PC; and cf. Darroll v Tennant 1932 CPD 406); and the Archbishop of Cape Town is not bishop of the Church of England as by law established, but a bishop of the Consensual Church of the Province of South Africa in communion with the Church of England (Re Colonial Bishopricks Fund 1841 [1935] Ch 148). Although the Republic of South Africa is no longer a member of the Commonwealth, the Church of the Province of South Africa extends beyond the republic and falls under many different administrations: see Church of England Year Book 1975, p. 214. That a church may be severed from the Church of England and yet remain in communion with it has been recognised by statute: see the Indian Church Act 1927, s 4.

Other Churches and councils within the Anglican Communion are the Episcopal Church of Brazil, the Church of the Province of Burma, the Church of the Province of Central Africa, the Holy Catholic Church in China, the Church of the Province of the Indian Ocean, the Holy Catholic Church in Japan, the Episcopal Church in Jerusalem and the Middle East, the Church of the Province of Kenya, the Province of Melanesia, the Anglican Council of South America, the Council of the Church of South East Asia, the South Pacific Anglican Council, the Church of the Province of Tanzania, the Church of Uganda, Rwanda, Burundi and Boga-Zaire, the Church of the Province of West Africa and the Church of the Province of the West Indies. See the Church of England Year Book 1975, pp. 187, 188, 191-232.

7 As to the meaning of 'full communion' as distinguished from 'inter-communion' etc., see the Report of the Archbishops' Commission on Intercommunion, 'Intercommunion Today' (1968) at 17 et seq.

The phrase 'in communion with the Church of England' is used in eg the Overseas and Other Clergy (Ministry and Ordination) Measure 1967, ss 3, 4 (1), 6 (2). The Church Representation Rules, r 44 (1), contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3 (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865), uses the phrase 'the Church of England or a church in communion with the Church of England'. In its original form this rule used the phrase 'Church of England or... another church of the Anglican Communion or any overseas church in communion with the Church of England', suggesting that, at any rate for the purpose of the rules, the distinction between actual membership of the Anglican Communion and being in communion with the Church of England is no longer significant.

8 Churches within this category include those which have evolved from the union of Anglican churches with Churches of other Christian traditions; eg the Church of South India (formed in 1947 when Anglican and Methodist Churches in India united with the South India United Church, itself the product of an earlier union between Congregational, Presbyterian and Reformed Churches), the Church of North India (formed in 1970 of Anglican, Presbyterian, Congregational, Baptist, Methodist and other Churches), the Church of Pakistan (formed in 1970 of Anglican, Methodist, Presbyterian and Lutheran Churches), and the United Church of Sri Lanka (currently being formed). In addition the Church of England is in communion with the Old Catholic Churches (ie in the Netherlands, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Germany, Poland, Switzerland, the United States and Yugoslavia), with the Spanish Reformed Episcopal Church, the Lusitanian Church of Portugal, the Philippine Independent Catholic Church, and with the Churches of Norway, Denmark, Iceland, Sweden and Finland. See the Church of England Year Book 1975, pp. 232-237.

UPDATE

313 Meaning of 'Anglican Communion'

NOTE 7--Rule 44 now r 54; SI 1994/3118.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/1. INTRODUCTION/(2) THE ANGLICAN COMMUNION/(i) In general/314. The Lambeth Conference and other bodies.

314. The Lambeth Conference and other bodies.

To co-ordinate the work of the Anglican Communion there meets periodically at Lambeth a conference of bishops under the presidency of the Archbishop of Canterbury¹. This body has no legal basis, and depends for the carrying into effect of any resolutions that it passes on the voluntary acts of the individuals composing it and their acceptance by the churches represented by them, but various resolutions passed by the conference have been received with general acceptance by all the churches represented, and have thereby derived on a consensual basis an authoritative character in the churches which have accepted them². To bridge the gap between conferences the Central Consultative Body of the Lambeth Conference was formed, consisting of not less than eighteen members appointed by the Archbishop of Canterbury with due regard to regional requirements after consultation with metropolitans and presiding bishops³.

Pan-Anglican Congresses have also been held, attended by ordained and lay representatives from all the dioceses in the Anglican Communion⁴, and in 1969 an Anglican Consultative Council was set up under the presidency of the Archbishop of Canterbury, with members from each Church or province in the Anglican Communion. It meets in alternate years. It has no legislative powers, but provides a forum for consultation, liaison and the sharing and dissemination of information. It co-operates with the World Council of Churches and encourages Anglican participation in the ecumenical movement⁵. The Anglican Communion maintains an Anglican Centre in Rome⁶.

2 Notably eg the Lambeth Quadrilateral, which established as four fundamental conditions for church unity (1) the Holy Scriptures; (2) the Apostles' and Nicene Creeds; (3) the sacraments of baptism and the Lord's Supper; and (4) the historic episcopate: see the Report of the Lambeth Conference 1888, pp. 24, 81-91.

3 Report of the Lambeth Conference 1930, Resolution 50.

4 Congresses were held in London in 1908, in Minneapolis in 1954, and in Toronto in 1963.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/1. INTRODUCTION/(2) THE ANGLICAN COMMUNION/(ii) Anglican Churches in the Commonwealth/315. English ecclesiastical law in the Commonwealth.

(ii) Anglican Churches in the Commonwealth

315. English ecclesiastical law in the Commonwealth.

The introduction of English law into a colony¹ does not carry with it English ecclesiastical law².

The various churches in the Commonwealth³ which are in communion with the Church of England are voluntary bodies⁴ organised on a consensual basis, but their own national legislatures have given many of them statutory recognition and powers⁵. Their rights, apart from statutes, will be protected by the courts and their discipline enforced exactly as in the case of any other voluntary body whose existence is legally recognised⁶.

The supremacy of the Crown in ecclesiastical affairs extends to all the Queen's dominions⁷. The Crown may not confer coercive jurisdiction, inasmuch as it has no power to create any new jurisdiction to administer any law other than the common law⁸. Where a church of any denomination was established in a colony before acquisition its rights might be maintained by the courts after acquisition⁹.

1 See COMMONWEALTH vol 13 (2009) PARA 807.

2 Re Lord Bishop of Natal (1865) 3 Moo PCCNS 115 at 152. The Queen's troops, however, carry with them ecclesiastical as well as civil law: R v Brampton (1808) 10 East 282 at 288.

3 The word 'Commonwealth' is here used in its widest sense to designate the whole of those territories of which the Queen is recognised as the head: cf. COMMONWEALTH vol 13 (2009) PARA 701.

4 See Bishop of Natal v Green (1868) LT 112.

5 Until 1866 the Crown on the advice of the imperial government granted letters patent creating dioceses and appointing bishops where it was expedient and where funds were available (Bishop of Natal v Gladstone (1866) LR 3 Eq 1 at 25), but this practice has since ceased. In order to ascertain the legal nature of the several church organisations abroad and their precise relation to the Church of England it is necessary to study the history and constitutions of each particular body and the local legislation affecting it. For much valuable historic information, see the Report of the Archbishops' Committee on Church and State (SPCK 1916), 94-192. See also the Church of England Year Book 1975, pp. 187 et seq.

6 See PARAS 338-342 post.

7 Articles of Religion 37. As to the royal supremacy, see PARAS 318, 352 et seq post. The effect of this provision is limited, however, by the constitutional developments of modern times. As to the Crown's powers after the granting of an independent legislature, cf. Re Lord Bishop of Natal (1865) 3 Moo PCCNS 115 at 148, and Bishop of Natal v Gladstone (1866) LR 3 Eq 1 at 42; and see also Darroll v Tennant 1932 CPD 406. See also note 5 supra.

As a general rule no person can be consecrated in England to the office of bishop without the licence of the Crown for his election to that office and the royal mandate under the Great Seal for his confirmation and consecration, and formerly every person so consecrated was required to take the oaths of allegiance and supremacy and of due obedience to the Archbishop of Canterbury: see the Appointment of Bishops Act 1533, s 5; Evans and Kiffins v Askwith (1627) W Jo 158; R v Archbishop of Canterbury (1848) Jebb's Report 1; R v Archbishop of Canterbury [1902] 2 KB 503. See also PARA 320 post.

It is lawful for the Archbishop of Canterbury or the Archbishop of York in consecrating any person to the office of bishop for the purpose of exercising episcopal functions elsewhere than in England to dispense, if he thinks fit, with the oath of due obedience to the archbishop (Colonial Clergy Act 1874, s 12); and it is now customary, when it is proposed that the bishop should exercise his functions in a sphere under another metropolitan, for the oath of due obedience to that metropolitan to be substituted and a declaration made of deference to the Archbishop of Canterbury, as approved by the Lambeth Conference 1897. There are numerous missionary and extra-provincial bishops not attached to any dominion or colonial province who are under the jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Canterbury.

If a person is to be ordained to exercise his ministry in an overseas diocese and he is not a citizen of the United Kingdom and colonies the bishop who ordains him may dispense with the taking of the oath of allegiance (Overseas and Other Clergy (Ministry and Ordination) Measure 1967, s 5 (2): see PARA 317 post); neither is the oath required to be taken by an overseas clergyman who has been granted permission to officiate in the province of Canterbury or York (see ss 1, 2), nor by a subject or citizen of a foreign state who is consecrated to officiate as a bishop in a foreign state: Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C13 para 2; see PARAS 667, 669 post. As to the oath of allegiance, see further PARA 464 post.

Where a bishop is to serve in a colony the practice has prevailed of consecrating him in the colony without any licence or mandate from the Crown, which was necessary when he was consecrated in England: see Parliamentary Paper C (1873 no. 259-II) 51. The Crown does not dissent from this practice. Cf. the Indian Church Measure 1927, s 2. It was held in South Africa that a bishop elected by a synod and not appointed by the Crown was not the legal successor to a predecessor appointed by the Crown: Darroll v Tennant 1932 CPD 406; and cf. Re Marshal Beresford's Trust Fund, Lord Aldenham v Archbishop of Armagh (1917) 33 TLR 208.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/1. INTRODUCTION/(2) THE ANGLICAN COMMUNION/(ii) Anglican Churches in the Commonwealth/316. Synodical organisation.

316. Synodical organisation.

The churches of overseas Commonwealth countries are organised on a synodical basis¹. It is the accepted policy of the Anglican Communion that dioceses should be grouped into provinces and provincial synods instituted².

1 The diocesan synod as the basis of the organisation of a colonial church was instituted at Toronto and Melbourne in 1851, at Adelaide in 1855, at Cape Town in 1856, at Auckland in 1857, at Sydney in 1866 and at Colombo in 1885. Synods are now established at the creation of every new see, and dioceses have where possible been grouped together into provinces, and provincial synods have been instituted in eg New Zealand, Canada, Australia, the West Indies and South Africa, while in Canada and Australia there are general synods embracing several provinces. The basis of representation in diocesan synods is the parish. Within the limits of the several constitutions synods have power to make rules for the regulation and discipline of the church. The constitutions usually provide for the election of bishops by diocesan synods, subject usually to confirmation by provincial synods, and contain a specific declaration of principles and doctrines which cannot be changed. Such declaration is based on the Lambeth Quadrilateral: see PARA 314 note 2 ante. As to the powers of synods, see Lang v Purves (1862) 15 Moo PCC 389; Long v Bishop of Cape Town (1863) 1 Moo PCCNS 411; Murray v Burgess (1867) LR 1 PC 362.

2 Report of Lambeth Conference 1930, pp. 157-160. The minimum number of dioceses suitable to form a province is four: Report of Lambeth Conference 1930, p. 159. While many of the churches in the Anglican Communion within the Commonwealth are self-governing and fully independent of control of the Archbishop of Canterbury, there are a number of missionary sees which are extra-provincial dioceses under the metropolitan jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Canterbury, eg Bermuda, Gibraltar (which includes southern Europe) and The Sudan. Church of England chaplaincies in northern and central Europe form an extra-diocesan jurisdiction of the Bishop of London, exercised on his behalf by the Bishop of Fulham. See the Church of England Year Book 1975, p. 229.

317. Ordination for ministry abroad.

Any bishop of a diocese in the province of Canterbury or York, on receiving a request from the bishop of an overseas diocese¹ that he should ordain as priest or deacon a person named in the request with a view to his exercising his ministry in the overseas diocese, may ordain that person and must indorse on his letters of orders that he has been ordained in pursuance of the request of the overseas bishop². If the person to be ordained is not a citizen of the United Kingdom and colonies, the oath of allegiance may be dispensed with³. Where it is desired that a person so ordained should exercise his ministry for a limited period in the province of Canterbury or York before going overseas, the archbishop may grant him temporary permission⁴ to do so⁵.

1 'Overseas diocese' means the diocese of an overseas bishop, and 'overseas bishop' means a bishop of the Church of England or a church in communion with the Church of England having a diocese or office elsewhere than in the province of Canterbury, the province of York, Ireland, Wales or Scotland: Overseas and Other Clergy (Ministry and Ordination) Measure 1967, s 6 (1).

TEXT AND NOTES--The 1967 Measure has effect as if the diocese in Europe (see PARAS 316, 455) were in the province of Canterbury and, accordingly, for the purposes of the 1967 Measure neither the bishop of the Diocese nor any other bishop holding office therein is an overseas bishop, nor is a clergyman who has been ordained priest or deacon by any such bishop an overseas clergyman: Diocese in Europe Measure 1980 s 6.

The doctrine of the Church of England that the supreme government of all estates, whether ecclesiastical or civil, appertains to the sovereign power¹, applies not only to the Crown's power within the overseas dominions, but also to the supreme government of a foreign state within that state, and accordingly the direct application of the supremacy of the Queen is expressly limited to the realm and her other dominions¹, and in territories subject to a different sovereign power the doctrine has no application, either direct or indirect, which would interfere with the exercise of the supreme authority of that power².

2 The Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America, the Church in China and the Church in Japan are entirely self-governing and free from external authority.

319. Clergy ministering abroad.

A priest of the Church of England, while expressly authorised to preach the Word of God and to minister the sacraments in the congregation where he shall be lawfully appointed, is at the same time ordained for the office and work of a priest in the Church of God¹ without any limitation, and he is therefore justified when abroad in carrying on his work as a priest in any congregation which accepts his ministrations and is not under the jurisdiction of any duly appointed bishop without any express appointment thereto, provided that his so doing is consistent with due obedience to his Ordinary and other chief ministers to whom is committed the government over him and with due diligence in serving the cure, if any, committed specially to his charge, and that he has at his ordination duly complied with the canonical requirements in respect of the title of such as are to be made ministers².

320. Consecration of bishop to a spiritual sphere abroad.

In order to meet the needs of citizens of foreign countries residing abroad who profess the worship of God according to the principles of the Church of England and who, for the purpose of providing a regular succession of ministers for the service of their church, are desirous of having citizens of those countries consecrated bishops, the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, without any licence or mandate for election having been obtained, together with such other bishops as they call to their assistance, under Her Majesty's licence naming the person to be consecrated, may consecrate British subjects or the subjects of any foreign state to be bishops in any foreign country without requiring such of them as may be subjects of a foreign state to take the oaths of allegiance and supremacy and the oath of due obedience to the archbishop¹.

Bishops so consecrated may exercise, within such limits as may from time be assigned for that purpose in such foreign countries by Her Majesty, spiritual jurisdiction over the ministers of British congregations of the Church of England, and over such other protestant congregations as may be desirous of placing themselves under his or their authority², and the name of the church in which the bishop is appointed is certified to each bishop by the archbishop who consecrates him³.

This is the procedure followed where no part of the bishop's jurisdiction is within the realm⁴. In other cases a bishop having a diocese within a colony or dependency is given a spiritual sphere outside the colony with the approval of the Crown, and this may be done by a commission from the Archbishop of Canterbury naming the additional jurisdiction⁵.

When a bishop already consecrated is appointed to serve in a foreign country any territorial limitations of his jurisdiction are defined by warrant from the Crown if he has been consecrated under the foregoing provisions or, if not so consecrated, by the Archbishop of Canterbury with the consent of the Crown and in consultation with the society or body providing the endowment when submitting the appointment to the archbishop for his approval.

1 Bishops in Foreign Countries Act 1841, s 1. No person may, however, be so consecrated until the archbishop has obtained the Queen's licence, by warrant under her royal signet and sign manual, authorising the consecration and expressing the name of the person to be consecrated, nor until the archbishop has been fully ascertained of the sufficiency of that person in good learning, of the soundness of his faith and of the purity of his manners: s 3. The powers given by the Act have been used in relation to the consecration of bishops for service entirely in foreign parts, and the licence for the consecration specifies the territorial limits of the jurisdiction. If it becomes desirable to alter these territorial limits while the see is full, a fresh warrant specifying the new limits of the jurisdiction is issued under s 2.

2 Ibid s 2. The Act does not apply to the consecration of a bishop for a charge in India: Indian Church Measure 1927, s 2 (ii).

3 Bishops in Foreign Countries Act 1841, s 5. When a bishop is consecrated by the Queen's licence with the intent that he shall exercise the episcopal office in one of Her Majesty's possessions abroad, but no particular possession or territory is mentioned in the licence, it is usual for the Archbishop of Canterbury to issue to the bishop a commission assigning a sphere of action, but the bishop is not entitled to any territorial designation nor to be addressed as Lord Bishop. In such cases bishops commonly adopt a territorial designation for convenience of reference, but this not officially recognised, and the bishop should be described as 'the Right Reverend Bishop...': cf. Parliamentary Paper C (1882 no. 3228).

4 Where no part of a bishop's jurisdiction is within the realm he is styled 'Bishop in...'. Where the part of his jurisdiction from which he derives his title is within the realm he is styled 'Bishop of...'.⁵

5 This course was followed in 1906 when the Bishop of Victoria, Hong Kong, was given a spiritual sphere outside that colony.

321. Churches formed in foreign countries.

In some cases the representatives of existing churches of the Anglican Communion in a foreign country have entered into an agreement for the formation of one church out of the existing bodies¹, but a church so formed has no legal basis beyond that which is derived from the agreement and such sanction as is given by the laws of the particular country.

The Church of England, so far as it extended to and existed in Wales and Monmouthshire (now known as the Church in Wales), ceased to be established by law on 31st March 1920¹. Since 18th September 1914² no person may be appointed or nominated by the Queen or any person to any ecclesiastical office³ in the Church in Wales by virtue of any right of patronage⁴ existing before disestablishment⁵. On the date of disestablishment all cathedral and ecclesiastical corporations⁶ in the Church in Wales were dissolved⁷. The title and precedence of existing holders of ecclesiastical offices were preserved, but no bishop of the Church in Wales⁸ is as such summoned to sit in the House of Lords⁹. A priest or deacon who holds an ecclesiastical office in the Church in Wales, or whose last ecclesiastical office was in the Church in Wales, may sit in the House of Commons¹⁰. From the date of disestablishment ecclesiastical courts and persons in Wales ceased to exercise jurisdiction, and the ecclesiastical law of the Church in Wales ceased to exist as law¹¹. The bishops and clergy of the Church in Wales ceased to be represented in convocation¹² and are not represented in the General Synod

324. Constitution of the Church in Wales.

The bishops, clergy and laity of the Church in Wales were empowered to hold synods¹ and elect representatives to them, and to frame, either by themselves or by their representatives, constitutions and regulations for the general management and good government of the Church in Wales².

The Constitution of the Church in Wales is set forth in and consists of (1) a number of chapters respectively entitled the Governing Body, which is the supreme legislative body, the Representative Body³, whose functions are administrative and financial, the Diocesan Conference, the Ruridecanal Conference, the Vestry Meeting, Parochial Church Council and the Electoral Roll, Appointments and Patronage, the Election of Bishops, the Election of an Archbishop, Dilapidations, the Courts of the Church in Wales⁴, and Pensions; (2) any further chapter or alteration in any chapter or amendment by the Governing Body; (3) all canons of the Church in Wales; and (4) all rules and regulations made from time to time by or under the authority or with the consent of the Governing Body.

3 As to the establishment of the Representative Body, see PARA 325 post.

4 Under the constitution the courts are called respectively the Archdeacon's Court, the Diocesan Court, the Provincial Court, the Special Provincial Court and the Supreme Court of the Church in Wales. The Supreme Court consists of the Archbishops of Canterbury, York, Armagh and Dublin and the Primus of the Scottish Episcopal Church with four assessors. Under the Welsh Church Act 1914, s 3 (3), it was enacted that the constitution might provide for the establishment of courts for the Church in Wales and, with the consent of the Archbishop of Canterbury, for appeals from any of those courts being heard and determined by the provincial court of the Archbishop (ie the Court of Arches, as to which see PARA 1285 post), but that no appeal should lie from any such court to the judicial Committee of the Privy Council (see PARA 1288 et seq post). The present constitution, however, makes no provision for appeals to the Court of Arches. See further Green, The Setting of the Constitution of the Church in Wales.

325. Vesting of property.

Under the Welsh Church Act 1914 Welsh Commissioners were appointed¹ and a Representative Body of the Church in Wales was incorporated². As from the date of disestablishment³ there vested in the Welsh Commissioners, subject to the preservation of interests⁴, all Welsh ecclesiastical property⁵ vested in the Ecclesiastical Commissioners or Queen Anne's Bounty⁶; and all property of the Church in Wales not so vested⁷.

The Welsh Commissioners subsequently transferred all the property vested in them, in accordance with the provisions mentioned below. Most of the property, including churches, ecclesiastical residences and chattels held with them, and funds and endowments allocated to work on the fabric of all these, together with all private benefactions, was transferred to the Representative Body⁸. All plate, furniture and other movable chattels belonging to the churches in Wales or used in connection with the celebration of divine worship in them, and not belonging to a private individual, were vested directly in the Representative Body⁹. Tithe rentcharges¹⁰ and other property formerly appropriated to the use of a parochial benefice were transferred to county councils¹¹, and all other remaining property to the University of Wales¹². Property transferred to county councils had to be applied to a charitable or eleemosynary purpose of local or general utility¹³; and property transferred to the University of Wales had to be applied to the benefit of the university and other specified institutions¹⁴.

1 See the Welsh Church Act 1914, s 10 (1). The appointment was made by the Crown (s. 10 (1)), and the commissioners were a body corporate styled 'The Commissioners of Church Temporalities in Wales' with a common seal (s. 10 (2)). The commissioners' powers continued until 31st December 1947 and then, when they had wound up their affairs, the commissioners were dissolved: see s 10 (7); Welsh Church (Temporalities) Act 1919, s 1; Order in Council dated 29th November 1946, S.R. & O. 1946 No. 2081.

326. Liability for chancel repairs.

The Welsh Church Act 1914 did not affect any liability to pay tithe rentcharge or the liability of any lay impropriator of any tithe rentcharge to repair any ecclesiastical building, but a county council was not by reason of being entitled to or receiving any tithe rentcharge under the Act to be liable for the repair of any ecclesiastical building¹. At the date of disestablishment² a tithe rentcharge belonging to a spiritual rector of a parish in Wales vested in the Welsh Commissioners³, and was eventually transferred to the council of the county where the land out of which the tithe rentcharge issued was situate⁴. While the rentcharge was vested in the Welsh Commissioners they did not become liable on that account for chancel repairs⁵. Tithe rentcharge in Wales which belonged to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners⁶ or Queen Anne's Bounty and was for the purposes of the Act⁷ deemed to be Welsh ecclesiastical property vested in the Welsh Commissioners on disestablishment⁸, but had ultimately to be transferred to the University of Wales⁹. The university, as owner of this tithe rentcharge, would have become liable for chancel repairs if the tithe rentcharge had not been extinguished before the transfer was made¹⁰. Accordingly the Welsh Commissioners, while the rentcharge was vested in them, were liable for chancel repairs¹¹.

It has not yet been finally decided whether liability for the repair of the chancels of churches in the province of Wales, which attached to the ownership of rectorial property other than tithe rentcharge, ceased at the date of disestablishment by reason of the fact that from that date ecclesiastical courts in Wales ceased to exercise jurisdiction and the ecclesiastical law of the Church in Wales ceased to exist as law¹², but it seems that liability in these cases is not affected by the Welsh Church Act 1914 and continues¹³.

Any person who held an ecclesiastical office¹ on 18th September 1914² retained his interest in the emoluments of the office so long as he held it or any other ecclesiastical office in the Church in Wales to Which he might thereafter be nominated or appointed³. Any such person nominated or appointed to any ecclesiastical office in the Church in Wales, other than that which he held on that date, had to pay over the net income⁴ of the ecclesiastical office held by him on that date to the Representative Body⁵. On any such person ceasing for six months to hold any ecclesiastical office in the Church in Wales his interest determined⁶, but he might receive an annuity, if he resigned his office on the ground of incapacity⁷. The holder of an ecclesiastical office might not receive emoluments of his office whilst he was suspended by order of a court of competent jurisdiction from exercising the spiritual functions of that office⁸. 328. Vestries and churchwardens.

The powers, duties and liabilities of the vestries of parishes in boroughs or urban districts were transferred to the councils of boroughs and urban districts in Wales and Monmouthshire except insofar as they related to the affairs of the church or to ecclesiastical charities¹. There were similarly transferred the powers, duties and liabilities of the churchwardens of every such parish except insofar as they related to the affairs of the church or to charities or were powers and duties of overseers².

1 Welsh Church Act 1914, s 25 (1) (a). Upon the reorganisation of local government on 1st April 1974 the powers, duties and liabilities of boroughs and urban districts in Wales and Monmouthshire were transferred to districts in Wales: see the Local Government Act 1972, ss 20, 179 (3).

2 Welsh Church Act 1914, s 25 (1) (b). As to the transfer of powers of overseers, see CHARITIES vol 8 (2010) PARA 256.

329. Trusts, first fruits and tenths.

Trusts affecting property held in trust for charitable purposes by cathedrals or ecclesiastical corporations which were dissolved on disestablishment continued to attach to the property¹. Where ecclesiastical persons² were immediately before the date of disestablishment³ acting as trustees in right of their offices, they were succeeded as such trustees by the persons (if any) who might thereafter at any time discharge duties similar or analogous to those discharged by those ecclesiastical persons⁴.

As from the date of disestablishment, first fruits in respect of any subsequent appointment to any ecclesiastical office in the Church in Wales and tenths in respect of those offices ceased to be payable⁵.

330. Marriages in churches.

No change was made in the law with respect to marriages in Wales, or in the right of bishops of the Church in Wales to license churches for the solemnisation of marriages or to grant licences to marry¹.

A church building shared² by the Church in Wales³ under a sharing agreement may be registered⁴ for the solemnisation of non-Anglican marriages⁵. It may also be used for the publication of banns and the solemnisation of Anglican marriages⁶.

1 Welsh Church (Temporalities) Act 1919, s 6. In Powell v Representative Body of the Church in Wales [1957] 1 All ER 400, [1957] 1 WLR 439 it was held that the authority of the Rector of Hawarden to grant (concurrently with the Bishop of St Asaph) marriage licences within the ancient parish of Hawarden, being an authority which existed at the date of the disestablishment of the Church in Wales (ie 31st March 1920), although abolished by the Welsh Church Act 1914, s 23, had been restored on the repeal of s 23 by the Welsh Church (Temporalities) Act 1919, s 6.

2 Ie under the provisions of the Sharing of Church Buildings Act 1969, s 1 (1): see PARA 1186 post.

3 Ibid s 6 (5), applies the provisions of s 6 to the Church in Wales as they apply to the Church of England.

In all enactments, deeds and other documents in which mention is made of the Church of England, the enactments and provisions relating to it are to be construed as including the Church in Wales, but as to that church subject to the provisions of the Welsh Church Act 1914¹.

¹ Welsh Church Act 1914, s 38 (3). Where, by any charter, deed or other document any association, institution or society is empowered or is under a duty to make any grant or payment to any persons or body of persons, whether corporate or unincorporate, in Wales, that power or duty is not affected by reason of any parish of the Church in Wales ceasing to be a part of the province of Canterbury or York, notwithstanding anything contained in any such charter, deed or document: Welsh Church (Temporalities) Act 1919, s 7 (2). Children of clergymen in Wales ordained both before or after the Welsh Church Act 1914 were held entitled to be admitted to the benefits of a charity incorporated by Act of Parliament in 1809 for the benefit of orphans of clergymen of the established church: Re Clergy Orphan Corp'n Trusts, Clergy Orphan Corp'n v Christopher [1933] 1 Ch 267; and cf. Re Friend of the Clergy's Charters, Friend of the Clergy v A-G [1921] 1 Ch 409; and PARA 311 note 5 ante.

(3) FORMATION AND PROTECTION OF CHURCHES

(i) Formation and Identity of Churches

332. Formation of churches.

A church which has not derived its tenets and organisation by cleavage from a pre-existing church, or a part of a church already existing, may be formed into a separate church in one of three ways.

First, it may be formed by a direct act of the civil power imposing on individuals the expression of religious beliefs in some common form¹, or creating an organisation for the association of persons on the basis of religious beliefs expressed in some common form². A church so formed may be extended, or two or more churches formed on the basis of the same religious beliefs may be united to any extent within the jurisdiction of the civil power³.

Secondly, it may be formed by the voluntary association of individuals⁴, or the voluntary provision by individuals of an organisation for association on the basis of religious beliefs expressed in some common form⁵. A church so formed may be extended to any extent permitted by its system of organisation⁶, either by the voluntary association of other individuals conscientiously in agreement with it⁷, or by the union with it of other churches organised on the basis of the same religious beliefs, or capable by the exercise in good faith of powers provided for that purpose of being altered so as to be expressed in forms which are not essentially different; or may be divided to any extent consistent with its system of organisation by the secession of individuals⁸ or groups of individuals, characterised by some additional expression relating to their religious beliefs, or by the exercise in good faith of powers provided for that purpose⁹.

Thirdly, it may be formed by a combination of these methods.

1 Many statutes (eg the Act of Uniformity 1551, s 1 (repealed); the Act of Uniformity 1558 (repealed); 23 Eliz 1. c. 1 (Religion) (1580-81) (repealed); 29 Eliz. 1 c. 6 (Religion) (1586-87) (repealed) imposed directly on every person not dissenting from the doctrines of the Church of England and attending some other place of worship, the duty of attending his parish church or chapel. See also Britton v Standish (1704) Holt KB 141; Marshall v Graham [1907] 2 KB 112. As to the duty to observe Sundays and other special days, see the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B6, and PARA 950 post; as to the duty to communicate regularly, see Canon B15 para 1, and PARA 979 post.

2 As to the Crown's power in overseas ecclesiastical affairs, see PARAS 315-317 ante.

3 See PARA 348, text and notes 8-10 post.

4 A Christian church may consist of a voluntary and unincorporated association of Christians united on the basis of agreement in certain religious tenets and principles of worship, discipline and church government: General Assembly of Free Church of Scotland v Lord Overtoun [1904] AC 515 at 643, HL.

5 A-G v Pearson (1817) 3 Mer 353.

6 The appeals in General Assembly of Free Church of Scotland v Lord Overtoun [1904] AC 515, HL, were based upon the ground that the union of the Free Church and the United Presbyterian Church could not be legally effected consistently with the constitutions and standards of the Free Church. If, as was held to be the case, the General Assemblies had no power to relax the fetters which bound the Free Church from its birth, then those appeals were bound to succeed.

7 General Assembly of Free Church of Scotland v Lord Overtoun [1904] AC 515 at 616, HL, per Lord Halsbury LC, citing Dill v Watson (1836) 2 Jo Ex Ir 48 at 91.

8 Any individual member of a church is free to secede from his membership of the church, subject to the fulfilment of any contractual obligations which he may have entered into in relation to his membership (General Assembly of Free Church of Scotland v Lord Overtoun [1904] AC 515 at 626, HL, Lord Halsbury LC); but the change of faith must be genuine, and if it is fraudulent and colourable it will be null and void so far as any legal consequences are concerned (Swift v Swift (1833) 3 Knapp 303 at 331).

9 A sect may erect any point or any punctilio into an article of faith (General Assembly of Free Church of Scotland v Lord Overtoun [1904] AC 515 at 636, HL) and, if by so doing it differentiates itself from the parent church, it loses all right to share in the property of that parent church (General Assembly of Free Church of Scotland v Lord Overtoun supra; A-G v Pearson (1817) 3 Mer 353; Craigdallie v Aikman (1820) 1 Dow 1 HL; Foley v Wontner (1820) 2 Jac & W 245), and is entitled to avail itself as a separate church of all the facilities which the state provides. Where the alteration on the basis of which separation takes place involves a contradiction in some material particular of the accepted expression of the doctrine of the church, the sect separated off automatically ceases to form part of the church, or to have any right to share in the property held in trust for it unless the case of a schism has been expressly provided for in the instrument of foundation: Craigdallie v Aikman supra at 16.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/1. INTRODUCTION/(3) FORMATION AND PROTECTION OF CHURCHES/(i) Formation and Identity of Churches/333. Identity of churches.

333. Identity of churches.

The forms in which religious beliefs are expressed as the basis of association in a church are called doctrines, creeds, confessions, formularies or tests, and the identity of a religious community described as a church is determined by reference to its principles or standards as so expressed¹.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/1. INTRODUCTION/(3) FORMATION AND PROTECTION OF CHURCHES/(i) Formation and Identity of Churches/334. Establishment of churches.

334. Establishment of churches.

The word 'established' in relation to a church is used in various senses. In one sense every religious body recognised by the law, and protected in the ownership of its property and other rights may be said to be by law established¹. In another sense the words 'established church' are used to mean the church as by law established in any country as the public or state-recognised form of religion². The process of establishment means that the state has accepted the church as the religious body which in its opinion truly teaches the Christian faith, and has given to it a certain legal position and to its decrees, if given under certain legal conditions, certain legal sanctions³. What is called the 'establishment' principle in relation to the church is the principle that there is a duty on the civil power to give support and assistance to the church⁴, though not necessarily by way of endowment⁵, and where this principle prevails a church is said to be established when it receives such support and assistance. In the fullest sense a church is said to be established when all the provisions constituting the church's system or organisation receive the sanction of a law which established that system throughout the state and excludes any other system⁶. The Church of England is established by law in England⁷.

1 A-G v Pearson (1817) 3 Mer 353 at 376. In Harrison v Evans (1767) 3 Bro Parl Cas 465, HL, Lord Mansfield CJ said of the dissenters' way of worship that, being permitted and allowed by the Toleration Act, 'it is established': Furneaux's Letters to Blackstone (2nd Edn) 265; see also R v Barker (1762) 1 Wm Bl 352.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/1. INTRODUCTION/(3) FORMATION AND PROTECTION OF CHURCHES/(i) Formation and Identity of Churches/335. Alteration of doctrine.

335. Alteration of doctrine.

The system of organisation of a church may include provisions for the alteration of the outward expression of the fundamental doctrines by which it is identified¹, and where those provisions exist the alteration may be made within the scope of those provisions without affecting the church's identity; but where the state has by legislative acts established² a church identified by certain doctrines, that church cannot, while retaining the benefit of establishment, exercise any power of altering those doctrines without the legislative sanction of the state³.

1 Thus, the Preface of the Book of Common Prayer and Articles of Religion 34 recognise that the particular form of divine worship and the rites and ceremonies appointed to be used in the public liturgy of the Church of England may be changed or altered in certain circumstances. For the power of the General Synod of the Church of England by canon to approve, amend, continue or discontinue forms of service, see the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 1 (1), and PARA 935 post.

2 As to establishment, see PARA 334 ante.

3 An unestablished religion is free from state control as regards doctrine, government and discipline, and that freedom differentiates a voluntary association from an established church: General Assembly of Free Church of Scotland v Lord Overtoun [1904] AC 515 at 648, HL. Cf. R v Dibdin [1910] P 57, CA; affd. sub nom. Thompson v Dibdin [1912] AC 533, HL.

336. Union of churches.

Churches whose fundamental doctrines do not differ¹ may unite without losing their respective identities, provided that the alterations of organisation which are required for their union are within the scope of the provisions for alteration contained in their respective systems of organisation², that the powers of making the alterations are exercised in good faith, and that the legislative sanction, if any, required for those alterations is obtained³. Without uniting those churches may enter into mutual agreements for intercommunion, and can therein provide for the recognition by each of the duly constituted officers and recognised members of the other church insofar as those officers and members comply with the conditions regarded by both churches as essential⁴.

4 See A-G v Shore (1843) 11 Sim 592 at 613, per Shadwell V-C; but it is difficult to reconcile this with the declaration subsequently made by Shadwell V-C in A-G v Wilson (1848) 16 Sim 210 at 220n, distinguishing between orthodox dissenting churches which were, and which were not, connected with the Kirk of Scotland or the Secession Church, and restricting participation in the benefits of a charity to ministers of those churches which were not so connected.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/1. INTRODUCTION/(3) FORMATION AND PROTECTION OF CHURCHES/(i) Formation and Identity of Churches/337. Legal recognition of churches.

337. Legal recognition of churches.

When a dispute in reference to any particular church arises before any tribunal which is competent to decide it, any relevant question as to the identity of the church (that is as to its principles or standards as expressed in its doctrines, creeds, formularies, confessions and tests, and the power, if any, to alter such expression) is to be determined by that tribunal, subject to any relevant legislative provisions, like any other question of fact¹.

The courts of law may by legislative or other action of the civil power be given particular powers and duties in reference to any questions arising in relation to particular churches. Save insofar as the particular powers and duties extend, all religious bodies are regarded by the courts of law as in the same position in respect of the protection of their rights and the sanction given to their respective organisations². Their endowments and any other rights which they may possess will be equally enforced by the law, and any rules they may adopt for enforcing discipline within their body will be binding on those who expressly or by implication have assented to them³.

3 The positive laws which inflicted penalties for non-conformity to the rites of the Church of England having been repealed, the courts have felt bound to recognise the right of anyone, not only to secede from that church, but also to form religious institutions of their own, and have undertaken to enforce the execution of trusts for such institutions so long as they do not contravene any other positive laws relating to them: 2 Burn's Ecclesiastical Law (4th Edn) 206; Davis v Jenkins (1814) 3 Ves & B 151 at 158.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/1. INTRODUCTION/(3) FORMATION AND PROTECTION OF CHURCHES/(ii) Discipline and Liberty/338. Discipline.

(ii) Discipline and Liberty

338. Discipline.

The discipline of a church cannot affect any person except by the express sanction of the civil power¹ or by the voluntary submission of the particular person², but, for the purpose of enforcing discipline within a church, any religious body may constitute a tribunal to determine whether its rules have been violated by any of the members or not and what shall be the consequence of such violation. The tribunal's decision will be binding and will be enforced by the courts of law when the tribunal has acted within the scope of its authority, has observed such forms as the rules require, if any forms are prescribed, and, if not, has proceeded in a manner consonant with the principles of justice³; but if any member of such a body has been injured as to his rights in any matter of a mixed spiritual and temporal character the courts of law will, on due complaint being made, inquire into the laws and rules of the tribunal or authority which has inflicted the injury, and will ascertain whether any sentence pronounced was regularly pronounced by competent authority, and will give such redress as justice demands⁴.

1 See PARA 339 et seq post.

2 Middleton v Crofts (1736) 2 Atk 650 at 669. Cf. R v Dibdin [1910] P 57, CA; affd. sub nom. Thompson v Dibdin [1912] AC 533, HL. In regard to the Church of England the statement in the text must be considered in relation to the disciplinary powers which have been conferred on the ecclesiastical courts, for example the power of enforcing the discipline of the clergy. This jurisdiction is discussed in PARA 1350 et seq post.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/1. INTRODUCTION/(3) FORMATION AND PROTECTION OF CHURCHES/(ii) Discipline and Liberty/339. Liberty of conscience.

339. Liberty of conscience.

The civil power, while exercising complete control over all estates and degrees, whether ecclesiastical or temporal, and affording all necessary protection from wrongful acts¹, refrains from exercising any purely spiritual functions², and, save insofar as positive law may otherwise provide, recognises and has always recognised the right of all to follow the dictates of their consciences in the religious opinions which they hold³.

1 All dissenters from the established church had a right to the protection of the Court of Queen's Bench if interrupted in their decent and quiet devotions before they were expressly protected by the Acts against brawling: R v Wroughton (1765) 3 Burr 1683.

2 Articles of Religion, 37.

3 There never was a single instance from the Saxon times down to our own in which a man was ever punished for erroneous opinions concerning rites or modes of worship, but upon some positive law: Evans v London Chamberlain (1767) 2 Burn's Ecclesiastical Law (8th Edn) 207 at 218, HL, per Lord Mansfield CJ; also reported, but not at length, sub nom. Harrison v Evans (1767) 3 Bro Parl Cas 465, HL. Cf. R v Dibdin [1910] P 57 at 132, 133, CA, per Farwell LJ; affd., but not on this point in particular, sub nom. Thompson v Dibdin [1912] AC 533, HL.

As to the effects of the various enactments emancipating particular religious bodies from penalties and tests, see PARA 1387 post; speaking generally, their effect has been to abrogate all positive laws which formerly qualified the right, referred to in the text, of all to follow the dictates of their consciences in the religious opinions which they hold.

340. Facilities provided by the state.

The sanction thus accorded has been reinforced in England by statutory enactments which have afforded exceptional assistance and protection to religious bodies in relation to their formation and endowment and the exercise of their religious rites. Thus, in addition to the enactments which relate to the Church of England, or to other religious bodies in particular, there are enactments providing generally for liberty of religious worship¹, registration and user of places of religious worship², protection of religious worship³, and tenure of property held for the benefit of any religious body⁴.

341. Liberty of religious worship.

The Liberty of Religious Worship Act 1855 provides that the then existing enactments by which no congregation or assembly for religious worship at which there should be present more than twenty persons (besides the immediate family and servants of the person in whose house or upon whose premises the meeting, congregation or assembly was held) was permitted until the place of meeting was certified¹ should not apply to any congregation or assembly for religious worship held in any parish by or by the authority of the incumbent or, if the incumbent is not resident, by the curate, or to any congregation or assembly for religious worship meeting in a private dwelling house or on the premises belonging to it, or meeting occasionally in any building or buildings not usually appropriated to purposes of religious worship².

Provision has also been made allowing the performance at burials of such Christian and orderly religious service conducted by such person or persons as the person having the charge of or responsible for the burial thinks fit³; and for the performance of any such orderly religious service used by any church, denomination or person professing to be Christian as the person having the charge of or being responsible for the burial thinks fit⁴; and for the provisions and maintenance of denominational chapels for funeral services⁵.

Provision has also been made in respect of religious services at marriages performed in any building registered as places of religious worship and registered for the solemnisation of marriages⁶.

342. Registration of places of worship.

Any place of meeting for religious worship of any body or denomination of persons other than the Church of England may be certified in writing to the Registrar General for England and Wales¹ by any person, and is thereupon registered² as a place of meeting for religious worship by a congregation or assembly of persons, who may be described by any religious appellation adopted by the persons on whose behalf the building is certified or, if they object to describe themselves by any appellation, may be described as persons who object to be designated by any distinctive religious appellation³.

1 As to the Registrar General, see the Registration Service Act 1953, s 1. He was formerly known as the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages in England.

2 Before registering a place that has been certified in writing, the Registrar General must satisfy himself that is in fact a place of meeting for religious worship: R v Registrar General, ex parte Segerdal [1970] 2 QB 697, [1970] 3 All ER 886, CA. See also PARA 302 note 3 ante.

344. Tenure of property.

Any religious body recognised by law is protected in the enjoyment of its endowments¹, and it is the duty of a court of justice to give effect to the intent of the founder of any charity for the benefit of such a body, so far as can be done without infringing any known rule of law². Where the charity's instrument of foundation uses phraseology which leaves that intent in doubt, extrinsic evidence is admissible to prove the existence of a religious body by which that phraseology is used, the manner in which it is used, and the fact that the founder is or was a member of that body³. Facilities were provided⁴ for conveying or assuring property acquired by, or by trustees in connection with, any congregation or society or body of persons⁵ associated for religious purposes, so that the conveyance or assurance might vest the estate not only in the parties named as trustees but also in their successors in office for the time being⁶. Trustees holding a leasehold interest in premises held upon trust to be used for the purposes of a place of worship may acquire the freehold⁷.

1 The effect of the Toleration Act 1688 (repealed) was to render the practice of their religion by nonconformists within the limits prescribed by that Act not only permissible but lawful (2 Burn's Ecclesiastical Law (4th Edn) 190-206), and to afford the protection of the law to the various types of religion which were practised by those who did not conform to the Church of England: A-G v Pearson (1817) 3 Mer 353.

4 Trustees Appointment Act 1890, s 2 (repealed).

5 Such body of persons might have comprised several congregations or other sections or divisions or component parts (ibid s 2 (repealed)); but it should have been made clear in the trust deed whether the particular property was for the benefit of a component part or for the whole body (Re Hoghton Chapel (1854) 23 LTOS 268).

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(1) CONSTITUTIONAL STATUS/345. Meaning of 'the Church of England'.

2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND

(1) CONSTITUTIONAL STATUS

345. Meaning of 'the Church of England'.

The Church of England, established according to the laws of the realm under the Queen's Majesty, is declared to belong to the true and apostolic Church of Christ¹, being regarded as the branch of the Church which was founded in England when the English were gradually converted to Christianity between the years 597 and 687². It contains the two provinces of Canterbury and York. The expression 'England' in this connection includes the town of Berwick-upon-Tweed, but not any part of England or Wales to which the Welsh Church Act 1914 applies³. The Church of England has bishops and ecclesiastical organisations in certain foreign parts⁴.

1 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon A1. See also Articles of Religion 19 (in the Book of Common Prayer) where the visible Church of Christ is described as 'a congregation of faithful men, in the which the pure Word of God is preached, and the Sacraments be duly administered according to Christ's ordinance in all those things that of necessity are requisite to the same'; and cf. the opening words of the bidding prayer in Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B19 (amended by Amending Canon No. 1): 'Ye shall pray for Christ's holy Catholic Church, that is, for the whole congregation of Christian people dispersed throughout the whole world, and especially for the Church of England'.

2 The accepted legal doctrine is that the Church of England is a continuous body from its earliest establishment in Saxon times: Marshall v Graham [1907] 2 KB 112 at 126, DC. When the statutes to exclude papal jurisdiction were passed in the reign of Henry VIII (see PARA 347 post), the Church of England was regarded as an existing church and there was no intention to vary from the congregation of Christ's Church, but the papal authority in England was regarded as a usurpation: see eg the Ecclesiastical Licences Act 1533, ss 2 (repealed), 13. Cf. 25 Edw. 3, stat 4 (Statutes of Provisors of Benefices) (1350-51) (repealed), which together with other Acts passed in the latter half of the fourteenth century challenged the authority of the Pope. See also PARA 311 ante.

3 Interpretation Measure 1925, s 2 proviso (a). The Welsh Church Act 1914 applies to Wales, to what before the Local Government Act 1972 was Monmouthshire, and to some parishes straddling the border: see ss 1, 9, and PARA 322 note 8 ante. As to the Church in Wales, see PARA 322 et seq ante. The Channel Islands form part of the diocese of Winchester and are represented in the diocesan synod of that diocese and in the House of Laity of the General Synod: see PARAS 388, 421 post. As to the application of Measures of the General Synod to the Channel Islands, see PARA 402 post. The diocese of Sodor and Man forms part of the province of York and sends representatives to the General Synod: see PARAS 388, 456 post.

4 See PARA 318 et seq ante. The introduction of English law into a colony does not carry with it English ecclesiastical law and in the colonies the Church of England is not part of the constitution. See also PARA 315 ante.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(1) CONSTITUTIONAL STATUS/346. The church as an aggregate of individuals and an institution.

346. The church as an aggregate of individuals and an institution.

The Church of England as defined in the previous paragraph may be considered as an aggregate of individuals¹. This aggregate evades easy definition or description, but in its widest sense membership of it may be taken to include baptised persons giving general allegiance to the ordinances and liturgy of the Church of England as by law established and not owing allegiance to a religious body whose tenets are inconsistent with those of the established Church².

The church may also be considered as an organised operative institution, although the Church of England as such is not a corporation. For the purpose of setting forth the constitution of the Church of England as by law established the church is necessarily to be regarded in the latter sense, as an organised institution; and the constitution to be considered consists of those ordinances, authorities and provisions on which its operations are based which are judicially recognised by the courts of law³. The ordinances and provisions thus judicially recognised include all such canons and constitutions ecclesiastical, however ancient, as have been and are allowed by general consent and custom within the realm, and the authorities thus judicially recognised include offices and ecclesiastical courts which have had a continuous existence, in many cases, from the time of the Conquest⁴.

1 See PARA 302 ante. The church is not the church of the clergy or of the laity, but of both. It consists of the lay as well as the clerical members of the community: R v Dibdin [1910] P 57 at 136, CA, per Farwell LJ; affd. sub nom. Thompson v Dibdin [1912] AC 533, HL.

2 A person who has been baptised, has been confirmed or is ready and desirous to be confirmed, and is an actual communicant in the Church of England, holds the status of a member of that church, and would be ordinarily regarded and spoken of as such (Re Perry Almshouses [1898] 1 Ch 391 at 400, per Stirling J; on appeal sub nom. Re Perry Almshouses, Re Ross' Charity [1899] 1 Ch 21, CA; approved by Sir Raymond Evershed MR in Re Allen, Faith v Allen [1953] Ch 810 at 818, [1953] 2 All ER 898 at 902, CA (cases on gifts of property)), even though he does not attend church regularly (Marshall v Graham [1907] 2 KB 112 at 124, DC). For the meaning of 'member of the Church of England' in a will, see Re Allen, Faith v Allen supra. For the meaning of 'actual communicant member of the Church of England' in certain enactments, see PARA 420 note 1, and PARA 543 note 5 post. Baptism or conditional baptism constitutes reception into the Church of England: see the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B28 para 1. As to the obligation upon a person who has been confirmed to communicate, see PARA 979 post.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(1) CONSTITUTIONAL STATUS/347. Reformation statutes.

347. Reformation statutes.

The constitution of the Church of England, which had hitherto been determined by the general canon law¹, underwent great changes in consequence of the Reformation statutes², which secured the submission to the Crown of the clergy in England and recognised the Church of England as a separate national church. The Sovereign was declared to be supreme in all civil and ecclesiastical matters and the Pope was declared to have no jurisdiction in the realm of England³. All civil and ecclesiastical causes were henceforward in the exclusive jurisdiction of the King's courts, spiritual and temporal⁴, and appeals to the See of Rome were expressly forbidden⁵.

New Articles of Religion, known as the Thirty-Nine Articles, were drawn up, differing in some points from the teaching of the Church of Rome. These were recognised by statute; and formerly no clergyman could be ordained or hold a living or curacy without making his declaration of assent to them⁶.

New service books and ordinals suitable for carrying out the reformed religion were prepared, and their use was enforced under penalties by successive Acts of Uniformity⁷.

1 As to the canon law, see PARAS 305-308 ante.

2 These statutes were the Ecclesiastical Appeals Act 1532 (repealed); the Submission of the Clergy Act 1533 (largely repealed); the Appointment of Bishops Act 1533 (partly repealed); the Ecclesiastical Licences Act 1533 (largely repealed); and 26 Hen. 8 c. 1 (Supremacy of the Crown) (1534) (repealed: see note 3 infra).

3 Articles of Religion 37 (in the Book of Common Prayer). This article as it stood in 1533 (then no. 36) declared that the King of England was supreme head on earth next to Christ of the Church of England and Ireland, following 26 Hen. 8 c. 1 (Supremacy of the Crown) (1534). That Act was repealed by 1 & 2 Phil. & Mar. c. 8 (See of Rome) (1554), and the repeal was confirmed by 1 Eliz. 1 c. 1 (Act of Supremacy) (1558), s 4 (repealed). Accordingly the article as revised in 1571, and as it now stands, declares that the Sovereign 'hath the chief power in this Realm... unto whom the chief Government of all Estates of this Realm, whether they be Ecclesiastical or Civil, in all causes doth appertain, and is not, nor ought to be, subject to any foreign jurisdiction'. See also Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon A7, which acknowledges that the Queen, 'acting according to the laws of the realm, is the highest power under God in this kingdom, and has supreme authority over all persons in all causes, as well ecclesiastical as civil'; and see PARA 352 post, and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 14.

4 Ecclesiastical Appeals Act 1532, s 1 (repealed).

5 Ibid s 2 (repealed).

6 See the Clerical Subscription Act 1865, ss 1, 4, 5 (repealed); Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C15 (in its original form). See also PARAS 660, 844, 851 post; and Canon A2, which declares that the Thirty-Nine Articles are agreeable to the Word of God and may be assented unto with a good conscience by all members of the Church of England. The modern declaration of assent declares belief in the faith revealed in the Holy Scriptures and set forth in the catholic creeds and to which the historic formularies of the Church of England (including the Thirty-Nine Articles) bear witness: see Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C15 para 1 (1) (substituted by Amending Canon No. 4).

7 Acts of Uniformity 1548, 1551, 1558, 1662 (almost entirely repealed). 'Act of Uniformity', as used in Measures passed by the Church Assembly or General Synod, means the Act of Uniformity 1662, and includes the enactments confirmed and applied by that Act to the Book of Common Prayer: Interpretation Measure 1925, s 3; Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 2 (2).

348. The Acts of Union.

The Ordination of Ministers Act 1571¹, the Act of Uniformity 1662² and all other Acts of Parliament in force at the date of the union with Scotland for the establishment and preservation of the Church of England³, and the doctrine, worship, discipline and government of that church were further secured by the Act of Union with Scotland⁴, as were also the true protestant religion and Presbyterian Church government of the Church of Scotland⁵. The Act for securing the Church of England as by law established, and the Act of Parliament of Scotland for securing the protestant religion and Presbyterian Church government were declared to be fundamental and essential conditions of the union⁶.

Provisions to the like effect are contained in the statutes affecting the Queen and the oath and declaration required to be taken by her⁷.

In 1800 the Churches of England and Ireland were united⁸, but in 1871 the union was dissolved and the Church of Ireland was disestablished⁹. The Church of England's constitution was unaffected by this temporary union¹⁰.

The Church in Wales¹¹ was disestablished on 31st March 1920¹².

1 This Act is now repealed.

2 As to the Act of Uniformity, see PARA 347 note 7 ante.

3 By the Coronation Oath Act 1688, s 3, the coronation oath included the promise to maintain the laws of God, the true profession of the gospel and the protestant reformed religion established by law: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 28.

4 Union with Scotland Act 1706, s 3, incorporating 6 Anne c. 8 (Maintenance of Church of England) (1706-7), which recites that it is reasonable and necessary that the true protestant religion professed and established by law in the Church of England, and its doctrine, worship, discipline and government, should be effectually and unalterably secured.

5 Union with Scotland Act 1706, ss 2, 4.

7 See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 39.

8 Union with Ireland Act 1800. Article 5, in a passage since repealed by the Statute Law Revision Act 1953, s 1, Sch. 1, provided that the Churches of England and Ireland, as then by law established, should be united into one protestant episcopal church to be called the United Church of England and Ireland, and that the doctrine, worship, discipline and government of the United Church should be and remain in full force for ever as the same were then by law established for the Church of England.

9 Irish Church Act 1869, s 2.

10 Ibid s 69, is a saving clause providing that in all enactments and other documents provisions relating to the United Church of England and Ireland shall be read distributively in respect of the Church of England and the Church of Ireland.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(1) CONSTITUTIONAL STATUS/349. Legislation before the Enabling Act.

349. Legislation before the Enabling Act.

Before the Reformation the Church in England was subject to papal legislation although the rules of the general canon law were considerably modified¹. After the Reformation the only ecclesiastical synods authorised were the two provincial convocations² with limited legislative powers. The clergy were and still are forbidden to assemble in convocation without the Sovereign's assent, make canons without her licence or execute any canon without her assent and not even then, if the canon offends against the royal prerogative or the common or statute law or any custom of the realm³.

The Canons of 1603 and later canons⁴, were made by virtue of this procedure; but (apart from these canons) since the Reformation the bulk of ecclesiastical legislation was in fact effected by Parliament until the creation of the Church Assembly (now the General Synod). After the Revolution of 1689 the direct intervention of the Sovereign in church affairs largely disappeared and under a constitutional monarchy the royal supremacy became, in effect, the supremacy of Parliament⁵. Statutes were passed regulating every aspect of church government⁶, including the enforcement of clerical discipline and the creation of new dioceses⁷.

2 See PARA 442 et seq post.

3 Submission of the Clergy Act 1533, ss 1, 3; Case of Convocations (1611) 12 Co Rep 72. Similar restrictions now apply to the making, promulgating and executing of canons by the General Synod: Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 1 (3); see PARA 400 post. Both convocations have frequently passed resolutions as opposed to canons, but these are not in law binding on either the clergy or the laity.

350. Legislation after the Enabling Act.

As a result of addresses presented to the King in 1919 by both convocations¹ the Church of England Assembly (Powers) Act 1919², commonly known as the Enabling Act, was passed, which created the National Assembly of the Church of England (usually referred to as the Church Assembly³). By the Synodical Government Measure 1969 the Church Assembly was renamed and reconstituted as the General Synod of the Church of England⁴.

Parliamentary control over church legislation remains unfettered, and Parliament may still legislate for the church without the intervention of the General Synod, but by a novel system of devolution the General Synod is enabled (as was the Church Assembly) to present Measures in completed form for the consent of Parliament. Parliament may accept or reject but cannot amend a General Synod Measure, and normally it is by General Synod Measures that legislation affecting the church is now enacted⁵. Further, Parliament has given the General Synod power to provide by canon with respect to matters of worship and the obligations and forms of assent to the doctrine of the Church of England⁶.

351. Constitutional status of the clergy.

At the Reformation the ancient territorial constitution of the country into provinces and dioceses was preserved, but it has since been modified by statute¹. The archbishops and certain bishops² continue to sit in the House of Lords. The clergy remained under their ancient common law disability whereby they are precluded from sitting in Parliament; this was rendered statutory in 1801³. Since 1664 the clergy, like the laity, have been taxed by the House of Commons instead of, as formerly, by convocations⁴, and they may now vote for members of Parliament, a privilege which formerly did not belong to them.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/ (2) THE ROYAL SUPREMACY/352. Nature of the royal supremacy.

(2) THE ROYAL SUPREMACY

352. Nature of the royal supremacy.

The Sovereign, acting according to the laws of the realm, is the highest power under God in the Kingdom and has supreme authority over all persons in all causes, ecclesiastical as well as civil¹. By the Act of Supremacy 1558 such jurisdictions, privileges, superiorities and pre-eminences, spiritual and ecclesiastical, as by any spiritual or ecclesiastical power or authority had theretofore been, or might lawfully be, exercised or used for the visitation of the ecclesiastical state and persons, and for reformation, order and correction of the same, and all manners of errors, heresies, schisms, abuses, offences, contempts and enormities were united and annexed to the Imperial Crown of the realm². The royal supremacy is exercised in a constitutional manner according to law³.

1 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon A7; Articles of Religion 37. In past legislation the Sovereign had been described as 'the only supreme head on earth of the Church of England' (26 Hen. 8 c. 1 (Supremacy of the Crown) (1534) (repealed)); and as 'the Supreme Governor of the Realm in all spiritual and ecclesiastical causes as well as temporal' (1 Eliz. 1 c. 1 (Act of Supremacy) (1558), s 9). The Act of 1558 has been repealed except for the provision referred to in note 2 infra.

2 1 Eliz. 1 c. 1 (Act of Supremacy) (1558), s 8. This statute is only declaratory of the common law: see Caudrey's Case (1591) 5 Co Rep 1a at 8a.

353. The Sovereign not a minister of the Word.

Although it is said that the Sovereign is *persona sacra*¹, neither this fact nor the accepted definitions of the nature of the royal supremacy² confer upon the Sovereign personally the status of a minister of the Word, as plainly appears from the Articles of Religion, which lay down that, although we attribute to the Sovereign the chief government, we give not to our princes the ministering of God's Word or of the sacraments³, but only that prerogative which we see to have been given always to all godly princes in holy scriptures by God himself; that is that they should rule all estates and degrees committed to their charge by God, whether they be ecclesiastical or temporal, and restrain with the civil sword the stubborn and evildoers⁴.

354. The Sovereign must be in communion with the church.

The Sovereign must join in communion with the Church of England as by law established¹. To make it clear that the Sovereign is not personally and secretly a Roman Catholic, she is required to make, on accession to the Crown, a doctrinal declaration², solemnly and sincerely in the presence of God professing, testifying and declaring that she is a faithful Protestant, and that she will, according to the true intent of the enactments which secure the Protestant succession to the throne, uphold and maintain those enactments to the best of her powers according to law³.

355. The Sovereign as the supreme Ordinary.

The Sovereign is the supreme Ordinary¹ and visitor; as such she visits the archbishops² and receives their resignations, for archbishops can resign to no one but the Queen³. Similarly she has power to visit various places which are exempt from episcopal visitation and known as royal peculiars⁴ and generally to exercise various powers formerly vested in the Pope. She has control over the granting of certain licences and dispensations under the Act for exoneration from Roman exactions⁵, but has no general power to dispense from the laws ecclesiastical⁶.

As in matters secular, so in matters ecclesiastical, the law can in general be altered only by the Queen in Parliament⁷, that is by or by virtue of an Act of Parliament. Although much ecclesiastical legislation is today effected by Measures of the General Synod of the Church of England, these Measures do not become law until they have been presented by Parliament to the Queen and have received the royal assent⁸.

In the prayers for or referring to the Sovereign or other members of the royal family contained in any form of service authorised for use in the Church of England the names may be altered, and any other necessary alterations made, from time to time as circumstances require by royal warrant, and those prayers as so altered are to be used thereafter¹.

358. The Sovereign's right of patronage.

The Sovereign is patron paramount of all the archbishoprics, bishoprics and benefices in England¹, and has very extensive church patronage, including the appointment of bishops² and deans, and the appointment to a certain number of cathedral preferments and benefices³. As patron paramount she is entitled to the right of presentation by lapse to all benefices which are not regularly filled⁴. She is the guardian of the temporalities of a bishopric during a vacancy, but no longer receives the profits for her own use⁵. She is entitled to present to all livings vacated by reason of the incumbent being appointed to a diocesan bishopric in England⁶, and enjoys the right of presenting to all dignities and benefices of the advowson of an archbishopric or bishopric during a vacancy⁷. In certain cases she may create new bishoprics overseas⁸.

1 Gib Cod 763: see PARA 784 post.

2 Coke bases the reason for this prerogative on the ground that bishoprics are of the King's foundation: see 1 Co Inst 134, 344. Regarding the prerogative generally, see R v Archbishop of Canterbury (1848) 11 QB 483. For particulars of the foundation of bishoprics and the appointment of bishops, see PARA 454 et seq post.

The Crown also has a right to corodies, namely, to send one of its chaplains to be maintained by the bishop, or to have a pension allowed him until the bishop promotes him to a benefice (1 Bl Com (14th Edn) 283), but this right has fallen into disuse.

4 As to lapse, see PARA 826 et seq post.

5 See PARA 488 post.

359. Convocations and the General Synod.

By virtue of the royal supremacy the Sovereign directs the assembling and dissolution of the Convocations of Canterbury and York¹ and has supreme authority as to the making and ratification of canons².

The Sovereign does not convene or prorogue the General Synod of the Church of England³, but Measures of the synod are not binding until they have been laid before Parliament and, in accordance with a resolution of each House of Parliament, have been presented to the Sovereign for the royal assent. When that assent has been given a Measure has the force and effect of an Act of Parliament⁴.

360. Disqualification of Crown advisers.

No person professing the Roman Catholic or the Jewish religion may lawfully, either directly or indirectly, advise the Sovereign concerning the appointment to or disposal of any office or preferment in the Church of England or in the Church of Scotland¹. Any person who is convicted of an offence in either of the foregoing cases is deemed guilty of a high misdemeanour² and disabled for ever from holding any office under the Crown³.

In the event of the office of Lord Chancellor being held by an adherent of the Roman Catholic faith Her Majesty in Council may provide for the exercise of any or all the visitational or ecclesiastical functions normally performed by him and any patronage to livings normally in his gift to be performed by the Prime Minister or any other minister of the Crown⁴.

1 Roman Catholic Relief Act 1829, s 18; Jews Relief Act 1858, s 4. These provisions are also expressed to apply to advice given to a regent. As to the exercise of rights of patronage by Roman Catholics and Jews, see PARAS 782, 786 post.

2 'High misdemeanour' is a term used in old books to describe a positive misprision (or neglect or contempt) of which the principal example is maladministration of high office, usually punishable by impeachment resulting in disability to hold office: see 4 Bl Com (14th Edn) 121.

361. Queen Anne's Bounty.

After the Reformation the Crown became entitled to first fruits and tenths¹. In 1704 Queen Anne granted all her revenue of first fruits and tenths to a corporation established with the name of 'the Governors of the Bounty of Queen Anne for the Augmentation of the Maintenance of the Poor Clergy'². In addition Queen Anne's Bounty received such portion of the profits of a benefice sequestered for non-residence as the bishop ordered to be paid to it for the purposes of the bounty³. Queen Anne's Bounty also, in numerous classes of cases, received sums appropriated for the purpose of augmenting particular benefices⁴. In 1926 nearly all first fruits and tenths were extinguished and redemption money determined for the remainder⁵.

The primary object of Queen Anne's Bounty was the augmentation of the maintenance of parsons, vicars, curates and ministers officiating in any church or chapel in England where the liturgy and rites of the Church of England were used and observed⁶. By the letters patent constituting the corporation, it was authorised to propose rules for receiving, managing and distributing the bounty and any other gifts which might be given or bequeathed for the same purpose, and the rules became effectual when approved by the Crown under the sign manual⁷.

In 1835 two royal commissions were appointed to consider the state of all dioceses in England and Wales, with reference to the amount of their revenues and the more equal distribution of episcopal duties, and the state of the cathedral and collegiate churches in England and Wales; in their reports they made extensive recommendations¹. In 1836 a body corporate called the Ecclesiastical Commissioners was constituted to lay before the King in Council such schemes as appeared to it best adapted for carrying into effect these recommendations². Originally there were thirteen commissioners, both spiritual and lay, but this number was greatly increased and the majority of commissioners, who included the two archbishops, all the bishops of England and the Lord Chancellor, held their appointments *ex officio*³.

In 1850 three commissioners were added, called the Church Estates Commissioners; these commissioners are now members of the Church Commissioners and are appointed in the same manner as formerly⁴.

363. Establishment of the Church Commissioners.

In 1947 a body corporate having perpetual succession called the Church Commissioners was established for the purpose of uniting Queen Anne's Bounty with the Ecclesiastical Commissioners¹. Queen Anne's Bounty and the Ecclesiastical Commissioners were subsequently dissolved, and all functions², rights and privileges of either of those bodies were transferred to the Church Commissioners³; all property vested in either of them vested in the Church Commissioners and property held in trust for either of them is thenceforward held in trust for the Church Commissioners⁴. Insofar as they are charities, the Church Commissioners and any institution administered by them are exempt charities within the meaning of the Charities Act 1960⁵.

The commissioners' business, except the exercise of powers which are required to be exercised at a general meeting of the commissioners, is transacted by a Board of Governors, a General Purposes Committee and an Assets Committee⁶.

The Church Commissioners are either ex officio members⁷ or are appointed or nominated⁸.

(iii) Church Commissioners' Functions and Proceedings

371. Church Commissioners' functions.

The Church Commissioners' principal functions¹ are as follows:

- 1 (1) The holding and administering of the former endowments of dignitaries which used to be vested in the Ecclesiastical Commissioners under the various nineteenth-century Ecclesiastical Commissioners Acts² and the carrying of these endowments into their general fund³.
- 2 (2) The application of the general fund for the making of additional provision for the cure of souls in parishes⁴. This in practice means making grants for stipends⁵ and parsonage houses. The use of the general fund for further particular purposes has been authorised by statute from time to time, for example for clergy pensions⁶, for church building in new housing areas⁷, and for making loans to theological colleges⁸.
- 3 (3) The holding of benefice capital, and dealing with it in accordance with the relevant statutory provisions⁹.
- 4 (4) The approval of dealings with glebe¹⁰ and parsonage houses¹¹, and the receipt of purchase money in respect of glebe and parsonage houses; and the approval of dealings with chapter property¹².
- 5 (5) The preparation of schemes and orders in relation to pastoral reorganisation¹³ and redundant churches¹⁴, and of such other schemes as appear to the commissioners best adopted for the carrying into full effect of the provisions of various enactments giving jurisdiction to the commissioners¹⁵.

Subject to the provisions of the Church Commissioners Measure 1947¹ all the functions, powers and business of the Church Commissioners, except those required to be exercised or transacted at a general meeting², must be exercised and transacted by the Board of Governors³. The board has power to refer for consideration and report⁴ or to delegate⁵ any matter within its jurisdiction to the General Purposes Committee or the Assets Committee⁶ or to any other committee of commissioners appointed by the board⁷. The board may also make general rules for the direction and guidance of any of these committees as to the matters and acts to be considered and done by the committee and as to the general principles upon which the committee must act in carrying out its delegated functions⁸.

1 Subject to general rules made by the Board of Governors the General Purposes Committee has power to act on staff matters and any urgent matters without reference to the board (see PARA 382 post), and the Assets Committee has exclusive power to act on the commissioner's behalf in relation to the management of assets and estates (see PARA 383 post).

373. General meetings of the Church Commissioners.

In every financial year¹, as soon as it is convenient after the audit of the Church Commissioners' accounts for the preceding financial year², the commissioners must hold an annual general meeting for the purpose of:

- 6 (1) considering the annual report and accounts³ and passing, if thought fit, any resolutions with respect to them⁴;
- 7 (2) considering any other matters which may be brought before the meeting by the Board of Governors or which the Archbishop of Canterbury, upon a request submitted to the secretary by any commissioner, may have authorised the secretary to include in the notices of business to be considered⁴;
- 8 (3) appointing, every third year, members of the Board of Governors⁵; and
- 9 (4) considering and, if thought fit, adopting the recommendations of the Board of Governors as to the allocation of such money as the board may report to be available⁶.

The Archbishop of Canterbury may call such other general meetings of the commissioners as he deems necessary⁷. If ten or more commissioners give the secretary notice in writing that they desire a meeting to be called to consider matters specified in the notice the archbishop must call a meeting as soon as is reasonably practicable⁷.

Due notice of intended meetings and the proposed business must be posted to all commissioners⁸, but their proceedings⁹ are not invalidated by any vacancy in the membership of the commissioners, nor by any defect in the qualification, appointment or nomination of any member¹⁰.

If present at a general meeting the Archbishop of Canterbury is chairman; if he is not present the commissioners must elect one of their number to act as chairman¹¹.

379. Mode and terms of appointment.

The Church Estates Commissioners are three in number: the First and Second¹ Church Estates Commissioners are appointed by the Crown; the Third Church Estates Commissioner is appointed by the Archbishop of Canterbury². The First and Second Church Estates Commissioners must be lay members of the Church of England, but the archbishop may appoint any member of the church as the Third Church Estates Commissioner³. The commissioners hold office during the pleasure of the Crown and the archbishop for the time being respectively, and further commissioners may be appointed whenever a vacancy occurs⁴.

Salaries and pensions, fixed by the Board of Governors, are payable out of the general fund of the Church Commissioners to the First and Third Church Estates Commissioners⁵. In practice the Second Church Estates Commissioner is always a member of the House of Commons⁶.

1 As to the second Church Estates Commissioner, see note 6 infra.

2 Ecclesiastical Commissioners Act 1850, s 1; Church Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1960, s 19 (1). Publication in the London Gazette of the notice of the appointment of a commissioner is evidence of the fact: Episcopal and Capitular Estates Act 1859, s 2.

Treasury approval is required for the amount of the salaries payable: Ecclesiastical Commissioners (Powers) Measure 1938, s 9.

6 The prohibition against a member of the House of Commons holding an office of profit under the Crown does not apply, because the Second Church Estates Commissioner does not in fact receive an emolument. There is a constitutional convention that he is nominated by the government of the day, and that his appointment lapses on a change of government. 381. Constitution of and procedure at committees.

There are two statutory committees, the General Purposes Committee and the Assets Committee¹. The General Purposes Committee consists of the three Church Estates Commissioners² and from eight to ten other Church Commissioners, appointed by the Board of Governors³ for three years, of whom at least two are diocesan bishops, at least three are other clerks in holy orders and at least three are laymen⁴. The Assets Committee consists of the First Church Estates Commissioner, one Church Commissioner being a clerk in holy orders, appointed for three years by the Board of Governors, and from three to five lay Church Commissioners, appointed for three years by the Archbishop of Canterbury⁵.

In each committee the First Church Estates Commissioner is the chairman and a deputy chairman is elected annually⁶. Each committee may regulate its own procedure and may from time to time make, vary and revoke standing orders for the purpose⁷. Subject to that, the provisions already described relating to the validity of proceedings of the Church Commissioners⁸ and voting at meetings of the commissioners⁹ apply to the General Purposes Committee and the Assets Committee¹⁰.

1 These two committees were established by the Church Commissioners Measure 1964, s 1, to replace the Estates and Finance Committee which had been established by the Church Commissioners Measure 1947, s 6 (1) (as originally enacted).

TEXT AND NOTES 1-6--General Purposes Committee replaced by Audit Committee: 1947 Measure s 6(1) (substituted by the National Institutions Measure 1998 Sch 4 para 4(a); 1947 Measure s 6(1)(b) amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 s 2(a)).

The Audit Committee consists of between four and six persons appointed by the Board for three years, of whom at least one must be an elected Commissioner and at least two must be persons who are not Commissioners: 1947 Measure s 6(1)(d). The Chairman is appointed by the Board with the agreement of the Archbishop of Canterbury: s 6(1)(e). The Church Estates Commissioners, the chairman of the Board and the acting chairman of the Board are not eligible for membership of the Committee: s 6(1)(f).

The Assets Committee now consists of the First Church Estates Commissioner, two Commissioners being clerks in Holy Orders (at least one being a Commissioner elected by the House of Clergy of the General Synod) appointed for three years by the Board and not less than four nor more than six lay Commissioners appointed for three years by the Archbishop of Canterbury (at least one being a Commissioner elected by the House of Laity of the General Synod) being persons who in his opinion are well qualified to assist in the management of the assets of the Commissioners: 1947 Measure s 6(1)(a). The First Church Estates Commissioner is the chairman of the Assets Committee and a deputy chairman must be elected annually; if present, he acts as chairman at any meeting at which the chairman is not present: s 6(1)(b). If a member appointed by the Board ceases to have the qualifications by virtue of which he was appointed, he vacates his appointment: s 6(1)(c).

NOTE 7--Reference to the General Purposes Committee is now to the Audit Committee: 1947 Measure s 7(2)(c) (amended by the 1998 Measure Sch 4 para 5).

382. General Purposes Committee's functions.

The General Purposes Committee must observe any general rules made for its direction and guidance by the Board of Governors¹. Subject to that, the committee has certain statutory functions², which may be described under two heads. First, it is required to consider and make reports on various matters³ to the Board of Governors including, in particular, the application and distribution of such sums as the board may have determined to be available⁴ and to act on behalf of the board when authorised by the board to do so⁵.

Secondly, the committee is required to act on behalf of, and in the name of, the Church Commissioners in matters relating to the appointment, terms of service, dismissal and direction of the commissioners' officers (other than the secretary⁶), solicitors and agents⁷, and in matters relating to control over expenses of administration⁷; and also in matters which, in the committee's opinion, are urgent⁸, other than matters assigned or referred to any other committee⁸.

6 The secretary is appointed by the Church Commissioners at a general meeting: Church Commissioners Measure 1947, s 8 (1).

7 Ibid s 6 (2) (d); Church Commissioners Measure 1964, s 1. The committee has no power under this provision in relation to solicitors and agents employed solely in connection with the management of assets: Church Commissioners Measure 1947, s 6 (2) (d); Church Commissioners Measure 1964, s 1. The General Purposes Committee is also required to make rules with respect to the superannuation benefits of the commissioners' officers (Church Commissioners Measure 1947, s 17 (1); Church Commissioners Measure 1964, s 2 (1) (d); Superannuation Act 1972, s 29 (1), Sch. 6 para 21); but there is a saving for previous rules made by the former Estates and Finance Committee (Church Commissioners Measure 1964, s 6 (2)).

382 [Audit] Committee's functions

TEXT AND NOTES--General Purposes Committee replaced by Audit Committee: see PARA 382. 1947 Measure s 6(2) repealed: National Institutions Measure 1998 Sch 4 para 4(b).

The Audit Committee has the following functions: (1) reviewing the commissioners' accounting policies and practices, their annual accounts and any reports made and advice given to the commissioners by the auditor; (2) keeping under review the effectiveness of the commissioners' internal control system; (3) considering any representations made to it; (4) appointing, with the approval of the Board, an auditor and directing the manner in which the audit is undertaken, including ensuring that the requirements of generally accepted auditing standards are met; (5) reporting to those commissioners who are not members of the Board on any matter relating to the functions and business of the commissioners which causes the committee grave concern and about which the Board has been unable to satisfy the committee: 1947 Measure s 6(3B) (added by the National Institutions Measure 1998 Sch 4 para 4(c); and amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 s 2(b)).

The commissioners' officers must supply the Audit Committee with such information in their possession as it may require to enable it to exercise its functions: 1947 Measure s 6(3C), as so added.

NOTE 7--Function of making rules in relation to superannuation now transferred to the Board of Governors: 1947 Measure s 17(1) (amended by the 1998 Measure Sch 4 para 7; and the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 2004).

383. Assets Committee's functions.

Subject to any general rules made by the Board of Governors¹, the Assets Committee² has the following statutory functions. First, it has an exclusive power and duty to act on behalf of and in the name of the Church Commissioners in all matters relating to the management of those assets of the commissioners the income of which is carried into their general fund, including power to sell, purchase, exchange and let land and make, realise and change investments³. Secondly, the committee has a duty to recommend to the Board of Governors, from time to time, what sums are available for application or distribution by the commissioners, and what sums should be appropriated to reserve and for reinvestment⁴. Thirdly, it has a duty to consider and report on any matter referred to it by the Board of Governors, and to act on behalf of the board in any matter in which it is authorised by the board so to act⁵.

383 Assets Committee's functions

TEXT AND NOTES--Before making any recommendation under the 1947 Measure s 6(3)(b) the Assets Committee must obtain the advice of an actuary (as defined) as to the likely effect on the commissioners' financial position as a whole, and must have regard to that advice, a summary of which must be included in their annual report under s 12: s 6(3A), inserted by the Pensions Measure 1997 s 10, Sch 1 para 2.

383A. Appointments Committee.

The General Synod must appoint or provide by Standing Orders for the appointment of a committee known as the Appointments Committee of the Church of England, the membership of which consists of persons who are members of the General Synod, at least one third being members of the Archbishops' Council: National Institutions Measure 1998 s 10(a). As to the Archbishops' Council see PARA 427A et seq.

A number of functions have been transferred to the Appointments Committee: see SI 1998/1715. Those functions are: (1) the appointment of chairman of meetings under the Synodical Government Measure 1969 Sch 2 para 4(2) (see PARA 413); (2) functions relating to the appointment of the Dioceses Commission under the Dioceses Measure 1976 s 1 (see PARA 457A); (3) selection of the panel for members of a tribunal to hear appeals under the Ordination of Women (Financial Provisions) Measure 1993 s 10 (see PARA 657C.3); (4) certain functions under the Incumbents (Vacation of Benefices) Measure 1977 s 18 (see PARA 733H); (5) appointment of members of the Patronage (Procedure) Committee under the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 s 38 (see PARA 783A.11); (6) functions relating to fees payable to legal officers under the Ecclesiastical Fees Measure 1986 s 4; (7) appointment of a member of the rule committee under the Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 s 25(2) (see PARA 1296A); (8) appointment of the members of the legal aid commission under the Church of England (Legal Aid) Measure 1994 s 1 (see PARA 1305).

In addition the Appointments Committee nominates members of appeal panels (see PARA 426), and is consulted by the Archbishops on the appointment of members to the Archbishops' Council (as to which see PARA 427A).

A person may not be a member (or stand for membership) of more than one of the following bodies at any one time, namely: the Archbishops' Council (see PARA 427A), the Church Commissioners, the Pensions Board, the Appointments Committee or the Business Committee (see PARA 383B): 1998 Measure s 11.

The General Synod must appoint or provide by Standing Orders for the appointment of a committee known as the Business Committee of the General Synod, the membership of which consists of persons who are members of the General Synod: National Institutions Measure 1998 s 10(b).

A number of functions have been transferred to the Business Committee: see SI 1998/1715. Those functions are: (1) functions relating to the rules of procedure of a tribunal to hear appeals under the Ordination of Women (Financial Provisions) Measure 1993 s 10 (see PARA 657C.3); (2) certain functions under the Incumbents (Vacation of Benefices) Measure 1977 s 18 (see PARA 733H); (3) functions relating to rules of procedure made by the Patronage (Procedure) Committee under the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 s 38, Sch 1 (see PARA 783A.11); (4) functions relating to parochial fees orders and orders prescribing fees payable to legal officers under the Ecclesiastical Fees Measure 1986 ss 2(3), 5(4), 6(4) (see PARAS 1198, 1204); (5) functions relating to the rule committee under the Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 s 27(3) (see PARA 1296A).

The Business Committee has the right to introduce legislation to the General Synod: National Institutions Measure 1998 s 9(a) (see PARA 399).

In addition, the Business Committee now approves rules for the conduct of elections to the General Synod (see PARA 422), and prescribes matters in connection with the conduct of the annual meeting (see PARA 564).

A person may not be a member (or stand for membership) of more than one of the following bodies at any one time, namely: the Archbishops' Council (see PARA 427A), the Church Commissioners, the Pensions Board, the Appointments Committee (see PARA 383A) or the Business Committee: 1998 Measure s 11.

(4) SYNODICAL GOVERNMENT

384. Legislative powers before 1970.

From the Reformation until 1920 it was usually necessary, when legislation was required in matters concerning the Church of England, to have direct recourse to Parliament. Although the convocations of the clergy in the provinces of Canterbury and York had the power, recognised by Parliament¹, to legislate by canon in ecclesiastical matters, this power was strictly limited in scope and was indeed dormant for a large part of the period in question.

By the Church of England Assembly (Powers) Act 1919 an entirely new body, including representatives of the laity, was created, with extensive powers of legislation in matters concerning the Church of England. This was the National Assembly of the Church of England, or the Church Assembly².

The constitution and functions of the Church Assembly were set out in an appendix to addresses presented to the King by the Convocations of Canterbury and York in May 1919, and it was upon the Church Assembly so constituted that powers in regard to legislation were conferred³. These powers were subject to the control and authority of the Sovereign and the two Houses of Parliament, and were concurrent with the vocations' power to make canons⁴.

1 Submission of the Clergy Act 1533, ss 1, 3. As to the convocations, see PARA 442 et seq post. As to canons, see PARAS 305, 308 ante.

2 Church of England Assembly (Powers) Act 1919, s 1 (1). See also the Interpretation Measure 1925, s 3, by virtue of which in Measures passed subsequently, unless a contrary intention appears, 'Church Assembly' means the National Assembly of the Church of England as provided for by the constitution. This entirely new legislative body came into being partly because pressure of business was making it increasingly difficult for Parliament to find time to deal with church matters and partly to satisfy the strong feeling that there should be a body consisting exclusively of churchmen to deal with church matters upon which the laity should be adequately represented.

385. Establishment of the General Synod.

In 1969 it was decided to bring to an end the dual exercise of functions by the Church Assembly and the convocations and to provide a system of synodical government for the Church of England¹. By the Synodical Government Measure 1969 the Convocations of Canterbury and York were authorised to make provision by canon for the vesting of their own functions, authority, rights and privileges in the Church Assembly²; and by the same enactment it was provided that the Church Assembly should, from the date of this transfer of functions, be reconstituted and renamed as the General Synod of the Church of England³. The functions transferred to the General Synod, which included the power to legislate by canon⁴, were henceforth to be exercisable for the Church of England as a whole, instead of being exercisable provincially⁵. Notwithstanding this substantial transfer of functions, the convocations were to continue in existence, with modified functions when sitting separately for their provinces⁶; they would, moreover, be component parts of the General Synod⁷. The proposed canon⁸, vesting functions of the convocations in the General Synod and modifying the functions of the convocations, was made in the form authorised by the Measure, and after receiving the royal assent came into operation on 4th November 1970, which was the date of the establishment of the General Synod⁹.

1 See the Synodical Government Measure 1969, preamble. 'Synodical government' is not to be interpreted as meaning that all the functions of church government are concentrated in, or subject to the control of, the General Synod; account must be taken, not only of the royal supremacy and of the ultimate legislative authority of Parliament, but also of the authority and powers exercised independently of the General Synod by the bishops, the ecclesiastical courts and the Church Commissioners. The system of church government involves a distribution of functions, and within that system the role of the General Synod is that of a deliberative and legislative body: see PARA 398 post. As to the introduction of synodical government at diocesan and deanery levels, see PARA 386 post. As to the authority of the bishops, see PARA 389 et seq post; as to the ecclesiastical courts, see PARA 1272 et seq post; and as to the Church Commissioners, see PARA 363 et seq ante.

The Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon A6, provides that the government of the Church of England under the Queen by archbishops, bishops, deans, provosts, archdeacons and the rest of the clergy and of the laity that bear office in the church is not repugnant to the Word of God.

In addition to establishing the General Synod, the Synodical Government Measure 1969¹ provided for the creation of deanery synods and diocesan synods². These were new bodies, replacing the former diocesan conferences³ and, where they existed, ruridecanal conferences⁴. Provision was also made for certain changes in respect of parochial church councils⁵.

387. Transitional provisions.

Transitional provisions were enacted with respect to matters arising on the transfer of functions from the convocations, the reconstitution of the Church Assembly as the General Synod, the changes affecting diocesan and ruridecanal conferences, and the coming into operation of the Church Representation Rules¹. In particular, any existing canons, Acts of Convocation or regulations made by the convocations in exercise of those functions², and any orders, regulations or rules of the Church Assembly³ were to continue in force as if made by the General Synod. There were corresponding provisions in respect of the changes affecting diocesan and ruridecanal conferences⁴ and in connection with the repeal of the Rules for the Representation of the Laity⁵. Any difficulty arising on these transitional provisions was to be referred to the Archbishops of Canterbury and York who had power to give any directions they considered expedient to remove the difficulty⁶.

389. Church Representation Rules.

The Church Representation Rules, which are contained in a schedule to the Synodical Government Measure 1969¹, make provision for church electoral rolls², the constitution and proceedings of parochial church councils³, deanery synods⁴ and diocesan synods⁵, for the membership of the House of Laity of the General Synod⁶ and for the methods of electing or choosing persons for membership of those bodies, and for appeals and disqualifications⁷. The rules may at any time be amended by resolution of the General Synod passed by a majority in each House of not less than two-thirds of those present and voting⁸.

In the carrying out of the Church Representation Rules in any diocese, the bishop on the diocese has power (1) to make provision for any matter not provided for in the rules⁹; (2) to appoint a person to do any act in respect of which there has been any neglect or default on the part of any person or body charged with any duty under the rules¹⁰; (3) so far as may be necessary for the purpose of giving effect to the intention of the rules, to extend or alter the time for holding any meeting or election or to modify the procedure laid down by the rules in connection with them¹¹; (4) in any case in which there has been no valid election, to direct a fresh election to be held and to give such directions in connection with it as he may think necessary¹²; and (5) in any case in which any difficulties arise, to give any directions which he may consider expedient for the purpose of removing the difficulties¹³.

No proceedings of any body constituted under the Church Representation Rules are invalidated by any vacancy in the membership of that body or by any defect in the qualification, election or appointment of any members¹⁴.

The rules prescribed necessary forms¹⁵, but no proceedings are invalidated by the use of a different form provided it is to a substantially similar effect as the prescribed form¹⁶.

The General Synod of the Church of England¹ consists of the Convocations of Canterbury and York² joined together in a House of Bishops and a House of Clergy and having added to them a House of Laity³. The House of Bishops and the House of Clergy accordingly comprise the Upper and Lower Houses respectively of the convocations, and the House of Laity is elected and otherwise constituted in accordance with the Church Representation Rules⁴. 393. Legal Advisory Commission.

The Legal Advisory Commission of the General Synod is a body of persons learned in ecclesiastical law and in the law of England generally, whose function is to give advice on legal questions referred to it by the General Synod and its boards and councils and also by the Church Commissioners, diocesan authorities and others. There is no specific statutory authority for the existence of this commission, but it has been constituted (formerly under the name of the Legal Board of the Church Assembly) since 1923. The commission submits an annual report to the General Synod in which reference is made to matters of current importance; and volumes containing selected opinions have been published from time to time¹.

The Central Board of Finance of the Church of England is incorporated as a company limited by guarantee¹. Its chief duty is to act as the financial executive of the General Synod by which most of its members are appointed². The board presents an annual report and budget to the synod, administers the General Synod Fund and the votes voted by the synod, administers the finances of the synod departments, of the church colleges of education scheme, of the Central Fund for Ordination Candidates, and of the pension scheme for lay workers³. The board also raises and administers the Central Church Fund and by its memorandum of association is empowered to perform many other business services for the Church of England. It may acquire and hold real and personal property, may act as a trust corporation, lend and borrow money, acquire copyrights and do all other lawful things incidental to its objects⁴. The board holds a legal aid fund on behalf of the synod⁵.

In particular the board holds an Investment Fund and a Deposit Fund, constituted by specific enactment for the purpose of enabling trustees of charitable trusts whose objects are connected with the work of the Church of England to participate in common investment funds⁶.

The General Synod is automatically dissolved on the dissolution of the Convocations of Canterbury and York¹, and comes into being on the calling together of the new convocations². Any boards, commissions, committees or other bodies of the synod may, so far as may be appropriate, and subject to any standing orders or any directions of the synod or of the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, continue their proceedings during the period of the dissolution; and all things may be done by the archbishops or any such bodies or any officers of the synod as may be necessary or expedient for conducting the synod's affairs during the period of dissolution and for making arrangements for the resumption of business by the new synod³.

3 Ibid Sch. 2, art. 3 (3). A member of the General Synod may continue to act during the period of the dissolution as a member of any board, commission, committee or body of the synod (Sch. 2, art. 3 (4)); but if, being an elected proctor of the clergy or an elected member of the House of Laity, he does not stand for re-election or is not re-elected, his authority so to act will cease with effect from the date on which the election of his successor is announced by the presiding officer (Sch. 2, art. 3 (4) proviso).

398. Functions of the General Synod.

By the terms of its constitution two functions are assigned to the General Synod¹. The first is to consider matters concerning the Church of England and to make provision in respect of them (1) by Measure intended to be given the force and effect of an Act of Parliament²; (2) by canon made in exercise of the power transferred from the convocations to the General Synod³; (3) by such order, regulation or other subordinate instrument as may be authorised by Measure or canon⁴; or (4) by such Act of Synod, regulation or other instrument or proceedings as may be appropriate in cases where provision by or under a Measure or canon is not required⁵.

The second function of the General Synod is to consider and express its opinion on any other matters of religious or public interest⁶.

The effect of these provisions is to limit the functions of the General Synod to those of a legislative and deliberative body. It is not a judicial body⁷, nor has it any general authority to control executive action in the Church of England⁸.

5 Ibid Sch. 2, art. 6 (a) (iv). It is thought that such Acts of Synod will have similar binding force to Acts of Convocation, as to which see PARA 451 note 2 post.

6 Ibid Sch. 2, art. 6 (b). The synod has the right to present addresses to Her Majesty: Sch. 1 para 4 (Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon H1 para 4; this canon was added by Canon promulgated 7th October 1969).

7 The synod is not a body to which orders of prohibition or certiorari will lie: R v Church Assembly Legislative Committee, ex parte Haynes Smith [1928] 1 KB 411, DC. See JUDICIAL REVIEW vol 61 (2010) PARAS 693, 697.

8 Cf. para 385 note 1 ante. The constitution of the Church Assembly expressly debarred the assembly from exercising any power or performing any function distinctively belonging to the bishops in right of their episcopal office: Church of England Assembly (Powers) Act 1919, Appendix para 15; Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 2 (2). Although this prohibition was not repeated in the constitution of the General Synod, the omission would not seem to justify the conclusion that the synod has any greater powers than those of the Church Assembly in this respect.

398 Functions of the General Synod

TEXT AND NOTES--The Standing Orders of the General Synod must make provision for affording the opportunity to the General Synod to consider reports or budgets laid before it by or with regard to the Archbishops' Council (see PARA 427C), to consider such other matters as may be referred to it by the Council, and to question representatives of the Council in respect of any such report, budget or matter: National Institutions Measure 1998 s 9(b).

A. IN GENERAL

399. Legislation by Measure.

The power to legislate by Measure¹, which was conferred upon the Church Assembly by statute², has passed to the General Synod³.

The General Synod may pass Measures relating to any matter concerning the Church of England⁴. A Measure may extend to the amendment or repeal in whole or in part of any Act of Parliament, including the Church of England Assembly (Powers) Act 1919; but a Measure must not make any alteration in the composition or powers or duties of the Ecclesiastical Committee of Parliament⁵, or in the procedure prescribed by Parliament for its own consideration of Measures reported on by the Ecclesiastical Committee⁶. The General Synod must refer to its Legislative Committee⁷ any legislative Measure intended to receive the royal assent and to have effect as an Act of Parliament in accordance with the provisions of the Church of England Assembly (Powers) Act 1919⁸; and the Legislative Committee must take the action required for that purpose in accordance with the procedure prescribed by statute⁸.

1 'Measure' means a legislative Measure intended to receive the royal assent and to have effect as an Act of Parliament in accordance with the provisions of the Church of England (Assembly) Powers Act 1919: see s 1 (5).

400. Legislation by canon.

The power to legislate by canon, formerly exercised by the Convocations of Canterbury and York, is now vested in the General Synod¹ and is exercisable for the Church of England as a whole, instead of being exercisable provincially, but without prejudice to the making of different provision, where appropriate, for the two provinces². Canons of the General Synod must be made, promulgated and executed in accordance with the like provisions, and will be subject to the like restrictions and have the like legislative force, as canons formerly made by the convocations³. The royal assent and licence is required to the making, promulgating and executing of these canons; and no canons are to be made or put in execution by the General Synod which are contrary or repugnant to the royal prerogative or the customs, laws or statutes of the realm⁴.

1 Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 1 (1), (3), (5) (a), Sch. 1 para 1, Sch. 2 para 6 (a) (ii). In addition to this general power to make canons concerning the Church of England, the General Synod is specifically authorised to make canons (1) for the amendment of the constitutions of the Upper and Lower Houses of the convocations (see the Convocations of the Clergy Measure 1920, s 1; Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 1 (5) (a); Synodical Government (Amendment) Measure 1974, s 1; Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canons H1-H3 (as amended); and PARAS 416, 444 post); (2) with respect to deaconesses etc. (see the Deaconesses and Lay Ministry Measure 1972, s 1 (1); Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon D1 (as amended); and PARA 759 post); (3) with respect to worship in the Church of England (see the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 1 (1); (3); Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, in particular Canons B1-B5A (as amended), and PARAS 935, 936, 938 post); (4) with respect to the obligations of clergymen and others to assent or subscribe to the doctrine of the Church of England (see the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 2 (1); Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, in particular Canon C15 (as amended); and PARA 660 post).

4 Submission of the Clergy Act 1533, ss 1, 3; Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 1 (3). This does not, however, apply to any rule of ecclesiastical law relating to any matter for which provision may be made by canon in pursuance of the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974: s 6 (1).

Measures passed after 28th May 1925 are subject to the provisions of the Interpretation Act 1889 and the Interpretation Measure 1925¹. The Interpretation Act 1889 applies to all such Measures, and to the Interpretation Measure 1925 itself, as if they were Acts of Parliament². Where by an enactment other than the Interpretation Act 1889 a meaning is assigned (unless the contrary intention appears) to any word or expression in Acts of Parliament, that enactment applies to Measures³, subject to an exception respecting the use in Measures of the expressions 'England' and 'Church of England'⁴. References to the passing of a Measure, when used to determine a date, refer, unless the contrary intention appears, to the date of the royal assent⁵.

The law relating to the proving of Acts of Parliament and their contents applies, with the necessary modifications, to Measures⁶. It appears that the general rules as to the interpretation of statutes are subject to modification in the case of ecclesiastical statutes, at any rate so as to permit an examination of the circumstances giving rise to the passing of the Act or Measure⁷.

Before it is finally approved by the General Synod, a provision¹ touching doctrinal formulae or the services or ceremonies of the Church of England or the administration of its sacraments or sacred rites must be referred to the House of Bishops, and must be submitted for such final approval in terms proposed by the House of Bishops and not otherwise². If the Convocations of Canterbury and York or either of them or the House of Laity so require³, a provision touching any of these matters must be referred, in the terms proposed by the House of Bishops for final approval, to the two convocations sitting separately for their provinces and to the House of Laity; and no provision so referred is to be submitted for final approval by the General Synod unless it has been approved, in the terms so proposed by each House of the two convocations and by the House of Laity⁴. Standing orders of the General Synod must provide for ensuring that a provision which fails to secure approval on a reference so made by each of the four Houses of the convocations or by the House of Laity is not proposed again in the same or a similar form until a new General Synod comes into being⁵. If any question arises whether the foregoing requirements apply to any provision, or whether they have been complied with, it is to be conclusively determined by the Presidents and Prolocutors of the House of the convocations and the Prolocutor and Pro-prolocutor of the House of Laity⁶.

Further, no canon making provision with respect to worship⁷ or doctrine⁸ may be submitted for Her Majesty's licence and assent unless it has been finally approved by the General Synod with a majority in each House of the synod of not less than two-thirds of those present and voting, and no regulation under any canon with respect to worship nor any approval, amendment, continuance or discontinuance of a form of service by the synod under any such canon is to have effect unless the regulation, the form of service or the amendment, continuance or discontinuance has been finally approved by the synod with the aforesaid majorities⁹.

1 'Provision' is evidently intended to include not only Measures, but also canons and Acts of Synod: cf. the Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 2 (1), Sch. 2, art. 12 (1). As to the Acts of Synod, see PARA 398 ante.

3 The question whether a reference is thus required is to be decided by the President and Prolocutor of the Houses of Convocation or by the Prolocutor and Pro-prolocutor of the House of Laity, as the case may be, after consultation with the appropriate Standing Committee or equivalent body; and their decision will be conclusive, in the absence of a prior resolution to the contrary by a House or Houses of convocation or by the House of Laity, as the case may be: ibid Sch. 2, art. 7 (3), (4).

4 Ibid Sch. 2, art. 7 (2). See also s 3 (7).

5 Ibid Sch. 2, art. 7 (5). Provision may be made, however, in the case of objection by one House of one convocation only, for a second reference to the convocations and, in the case of a second objection by one House only, for reference to the Houses of Bishops and Clergy of the General Synod for approval by a two-thirds majority of the members of each House present and voting, in lieu of approval by the four Houses: Sch. 2, art. 7 (5).

Any question whether this requirement applies to a Measure or canon, or whether it has been complied with, is to be conclusively determined by the archbishops, the Prolocutors of the Lower Houses of the Convocations and the Prolocutor and Pro-prolocutor of the House of Laity of the General Synod².

A scheme for a constitutional union or a permanent and substantial change of relationship between the Church of England and another Christian body, being a body a substantial number of whose members reside in Great Britain, must not be finally approved by the General Synod unless, at a stage determined by the archbishops, the scheme or the substance of the proposals embodied in it has been approved by a majority of the dioceses at meetings of their diocesan synods¹. The General Synod may by resolution provide that final approval of any such scheme shall require the assent of special majorities of the members present and voting². Any question whether these requirements apply to a scheme, or whether they have been complied with, is to be conclusively determined by the archbishops, the Prolocutors of the Lower Houses of the Convocations and the Prolocutor and Proprolocutor of the House of Laity of the General Synod³.

406. Reference of Measure to Ecclesiastical Committee of Parliament.

When the General Synod refers to its Legislative Committee¹ a Measure which it desires shall pass into law, the Legislative Committee must submit the Measure to the Ecclesiastical Committee of Parliament, together with such comments and explanations as the Legislative Committee may deem it expedient or be directed by the General Synod to add².

407. Composition of Ecclesiastical Committee.

The Ecclesiastical Committee is a committee of members of both Houses of Parliament¹. It consists of fifteen members of the House of Lords, nominated by the Lord Chancellor, and fifteen members of the House of Commons, nominated by the Speaker². It is appointed at the commencement of each Parliament to serve for the duration of that Parliament²; and any casual vacancy is filled by the nomination of a member by the Lord Chancellor or the Speaker, as the case may be². The powers and duties of the Ecclesiastical Committee may be exercised and discharged by any twelve members³. The committee may sit and transact business whether Parliament is sitting or not, and notwithstanding any vacancy in the membership of the committee³. Subject to the provisions of the Church of England Assembly (Powers) Act 1919 the committee may regulate its own procedure³.

Upon the submission of a Measure by the Legislative Committee of the General Synod, the Ecclesiastical Committee must consider the Measure, and may, at any time during its consideration, either of its own motion or at the request of the Legislative Committee, invite that committee to a conference to discuss the provisions of the Measure, and thereupon a conference of the two committees must be held¹. After considering the Measure, the Ecclesiastical Committee must draft a report to Parliament stating the nature and legal effect of the Measure and the committee's views as to its expediency, especially with relation to the constitutional rights of all Her Majesty's subjects². The report must be communicated in draft to the Legislative Committee, but is not presented to Parliament until that committee signifies its desire that it should be presented³.

At any time before the presentation to Parliament of the Ecclesiastical Committee's report the Legislative Committee may, either on its own motion or by direction of the General Synod, withdraw the Measure from further consideration by the Ecclesiastical Committee, but the Legislative Committee has no power to vary a Measure either before or after conference with the Ecclesiastical Committee¹.

When the Ecclesiastical Committee has reported to Parliament on any Measure, the report, together with the text of the Measure, is laid before both Houses of Parliament forthwith, if Parliament is then sitting or, if not, immediately after the next meeting of Parliament¹. Thereupon, on a resolution being passed by each House of Parliament directing that the Measure in the form laid before Parliament should be presented to the Queen², the Measure is presented to the Queen, and has the force and effect of an Act of Parliament on the royal assent being signified to it in the same manner as to Acts of Parliament³.

A motion for the final approval¹ of any Measure or canon by the General Synod is not deemed to be carried unless, on a division by Houses², it receives the assent of the majority of the members of each House present and voting³, although, by permission of the chairman and with the leave of the synod given in accordance with standing orders, this requirement may be dispensed with⁴. All other motions are normally to be determined by a majority of the members of the synod present and voting, and the vote may be taken by a show of hands or a division⁵. However, except in the case of a motion relating solely to the course of business or procedure⁶, any twenty-five members present may demand a division by Houses, in which case the motion is not deemed to be carried unless, on such a division, it receives the assent of the majority of the members of each House present and voting⁷. In certain cases, by virtue of provisions of the synod's constitution⁸ or of a Measure, special majorities of the synod or of each of its Houses may be required⁹.

1 Except in the case mentioned in PARA 413 note 1 ante, references to final approval in relation to a canon or an Act of Synod are to be construed as referring to the final approval by the General Synod of the contents of the canon or Act, and not its formal promulgation: Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 2 (1), Sch. 2, art. 12 (1). As to Acts of Synod, see PARA 398 ante.

This provision does not apply to the diocese in Europe: Church Representation Rules r 35(3); Diocese in Europe Measure 1980 s 2, Sch 2. The diocesan electors of the diocese in Europe are such number of persons elected by the annual meetings of the chaplaincies in that diocese as may be determined by the bishop's council and standing committee of that diocese, and any lay person who is (i) an actual communicant (see PARA 420), (ii) of eighteen years or upwards, and (iii) a person whose name is entered on the electoral roll of such a chaplaincy, is qualified for election as a diocesan elector by the annual meeting of that chaplaincy: r 35(4); 1980 Measure s 2, Sch 2; SI 1994/3118.

The qualifying date for diocesan electors under r 35(3), (4) is 6 am on the date of the dissolution of the General Synod, except when a casual vacancy is being filled (see PARA 425), in which case the qualifying date is 6 am on the date when the nomination papers are issued: r 35(5); SI 1989/2094.

TEXT AND NOTE 4--The two members are to be chosen by and from the members of religious communities having their mother house in either province: r 35(1)(b) (amended by SI 1984/1039, SI 2004/1889).

The qualifying date for lay members of religious communities under r 35(1)(b) is the same as for diocesan electors; see r 35(5) (TEXT AND NOTE 3). The register of lay electors must be open to inspection at the diocesan office and any errors and omissions in the list may be corrected until the close of nominations after which no names may be added or removed until the declaration of the result of the election, those persons whose names are entered in the register being the qualified electors entitled to vote in that election: r 35(6); SI 1989/2094.

419. Number of elected members.

The total number of members to be elected, which must not exceed 250, must be fixed by resolution of the General Synod¹. By the same resolution the number so fixed must be apportioned to the provinces of Canterbury and York in a proportion of sixty-eight to thirty-two (or as near to that as possible)²; and the number apportioned to each province must be divided among the dioceses of that province as nearly as possible in proportion to the total number of names on the church electoral rolls³ of the parishes in each diocese, but so that no diocese (other than the diocese of Sodor and Man) shall elect less than three members⁴.

1 Church Representation Rules, r 30 (1), contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3. The resolution must be passed not later than the last day of November in the fourth year after the last preceding election of the House of Laity (Church Representation Rules, r 30 (1)), but in the event of an early dissolution of the General Synod special directions may be given by the synod or its presidents as to the fixing and certifying of the number of members to be elected to the House of Laity by each diocese (see r 30 (4)). The secretary of each diocesan synod must certify to the secretary of the General Synod the total number of names on the rolls of the parishes in the diocese (r. 30 (2) (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865)); and the number of members to be elected by each diocese is to be certified to the secretaries of the diocesan synods as soon as it has been fixed by the General Synod (r. 30 (3)).

419 Number of elected members

TEXT AND NOTES--Rule 30 now r 36 (amended by SI 1994/3118, SI 2004/1889). Now the total number of members directly elected and specially elected from the dioceses in the province must not exceed 136 for Canterbury and 59 for York, and no diocese may have fewer than three directly elected members, except the diocese in Europe, which must elect two members, and the diocese of Sodor and Man, which must elect one member. The representatives of the religious communities referred to in r 35(1)(b), the elected or chosen persons referred to in r 35(1)(d), ex officio and co-opted members are additional to this total number. 'Specially elected' means the representatives of the religious communities referred to in r 35(1) (see PARA 418) and the representatives of the Channel Islands elected in accordance with the provisions of the Channel Islands (Representation) Measure 1931, and such persons are included in the total number: Church Representation Rules r 36(1); SI 1984/1039.

The total number of members to be elected by the diocesan electors of all the dioceses must be fixed by resolution of the General Synod not later than 30 November in the fourth year after the last preceding election of the House of Laity, subject to the following provisions, and the resolution must apportion the number so fixed to the provinces of Canterbury and York in a proportion of 68 to 32 or as nearly as possible thereto, and must divide the number among the dioceses so that the number of members to be elected by the several dioceses are as nearly as possible proportionate to the total number of names certified for them under r 36(3): r 36(2); SI 1984/1039.

421. Electoral areas.

Every diocese¹ is an electoral area for the purposes of elections to the House of Laity². This is subject, however, to a provision whereby a diocesan synod is enabled, for the purposes of any election, to divide a diocese into two or more areas and apportion the number of members to be elected for the diocese among such areas³, the division being made in such manner that not less than three members will be elected in any such area⁴. In the event of such a division the election will be conducted in each area as if it were a separate diocese, and any such division is to remain in force until it is revoked by the diocesan synod⁵.

Each island of the Channel Islands⁶ is a separate electoral area for the purpose of representation to the House of Laity, Provided that a deanery synod is in being and certain other requirements⁷ are fulfilled⁸.

1 For the purpose of representation in the House of the General Synod no account is to be taken of any alteration of diocesan boundaries made by a pastoral scheme under the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 35 or s 36, until the elections for those House next occur after the coming into operation of the relevant provisions of the scheme: s 37.

4 Ibid r 32 (3) (added by S.I. 1973 No. 1865).

5 Ibid r 32 (2). This power of division may be exercised by a diocesan synod only so far as it is consistent with any rule respecting the conduct of elections made under the standing orders of the General Synod (see r 33 (4) (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865), and PARA 422 note 4 post); and subject to the rule that the number of members elected in any area will not be less than three (see the text and note 4 supra) (r. 32 (2) (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865)). Where a diocese is so divided, a diocesan elector who is a representative of the laity must vote in the area to which the body by which he was elected belongs, and a diocesan elector who is not a representative of the laity must vote in such area as the diocesan synod may decide: r 32 (2). 422. Conduct of elections.

Subject to any directions by the General Synod or its presidents, elections to the House of Laity must be carried out during the three months immediately following any dissolution of the synod, and in each diocese during the period within those three months which is fixed by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York¹. The presiding officer in each diocese or area will normally be the registrar of the diocese or a person appointed by him with the approval of the registrar of the province². Every candidate must be nominated and seconded by diocesan electors qualified to vote in the area in which he is seeking election³. Contested elections are to be conducted by voting papers upon the principle of proportional representation under rules made from time to time as provided by the standing orders of the General Synod⁴.

1 Church Representation Rules, r 33 (1), contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3. As to the power of the bishop of the diocese to extend or alter the time or to modify the procedure for an election, see PARA 389 ante.

2 Church Representation Rules, r 33 (2) (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865). If, however, the registrar of the diocese is a candidate in the election, the presiding officer will be a person appointed by the registrar of the province: r 33 (2). The duties of the presiding officers are defined by rules to be prepared by the provincial registrars acting jointly, subject to approval by the standing Committee of the General Synod: r 33A (1) (added by S.I. 1973 No. 1865). For performing the duties so prescribed a presiding officer is entitled to a fee of £50 with a further £10 for every hour spent on counting votes, payable by the diocesan board of finance: r 33A (2) (added by S.I. 1973 No. 1865); Legal Officers Fees Order 1974, S.I. 1974 No. 1837, Schedule, item 1, provision 1, made under the Ecclesiastical Fees Measure 1962, s 1. Where, with the prior written agreement of the bishop's council and standing committee, the presiding officer or any other person performs any other duties in connection with elections to the House of Laity, he is entitled to such fees as may be specified in the agreement: Church Representation Rules, r 33A (2) (added by S.I. 1973 No. 1865). The expenses of the elections must be paid out of diocesan funds: r 33 (2).

3 Ibid r 33 (3). All nominations must be in writing and must be sent to the presiding officer of the area, together with evidence of the candidate's consent to serve, within the period of not less than twenty-eight days specified by the presiding officer, who must dispatch to every elector election addresses from any candidates who so request and who provide sufficient copies at their own expense: r 33 (3) (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865).

4 Ibid r 33 (4) (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865). Voting papers marked and signed by the electors are returnable to the presiding officer within the period of not less than twenty-one days after the issue of the papers specified by him: r 33 (4) (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865). Provision is made with respect to a candidate's right to be present, or to be represented, at the counting of the votes (see r 33 (5)). (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865)). and the communication and publication of the results of the election (see r 33 (6)). Valid voting papers must be preserved for at least two years: r 33 (7) (added by S.I. 1973 No. 1865). In any case in which there has been no valid election, the diocesan bishop has power to give directions for a fresh election: r 43 (1) (d). As to appeals arising out of elections, see PARA 426 post.

TEXT AND NOTES--Rule 33 now Church Representation Rules r 39; SI 1994/3118. Where it is a requirement that a given number or not less than a given number of places of those elected are to be filled by candidates of a named category, the presiding officer must follow the procedure set out in the Church Representation Rules r 51; SI 1989/2094.

NOTE 2--As to current fees orders, see PARA 1204. 1962 Measure replaced: Ecclesiastical Fees Measure 1986. Rule 33A now r 40; SI 1994/3118. On receipt of the names and addresses of the qualified electors from the diocesan electoral registration officer, the presiding officer must ensure that in respect of the election (i) those persons are sent or given nomination papers, and (ii) only such persons are sent or given voting papers at the address entered against their names in the register of electors: Church Representation Rules r 39(3); SI 1994/3118. The presiding officer must also send nomination papers to any other person who requests them: Church Representation Rules r 39(3).

TEXT AND NOTES 3, 4--Rule 33(3)-(6) now Church Representation Rules r 39(4)-(12) as substituted by SI 1994/3118. Every candidate must be nominated and seconded by diocesan electors qualified to vote in the area in which the candidate is seeking to be elected: Church Representation Rules r 39(4). All nominations must be in writing, must include the year of the candidate's birth and a statement as to whether the candidate is seeking re-election and, if so, as to the dates of the candidate's previous service and must be delivered either by post, by facsimile transmission or in person to the presiding officer of the area, together with evidence of the candidate's consent to serve, within such period, being a period of not less than 28 days ending on such date as may be specified by the presiding officer, provided that where a nomination paper has been sent by facsimile transmission, the name of the candidate must not appear on the voting paper unless the original nomination paper has been received by the presiding officer within three days of the closing date for nominations: r 39(4) (amended by SI 2004/1889).

It is the duty of the presiding officer to scrutinise nomination papers as soon as they have been lodged and he must, without delay, inform the candidate concerned whether the nomination is valid; where the nomination is invalid, the presiding officer must give his reasons for so ruling and if, by the close of the nomination period, no valid nomination is received, the candidate must be excluded from the election: Church Representation Rules r 39(5)(a). It is also the duty of the presiding officer to supply free of charge to a duly nominated candidate in the election one copy of the names and addresses of the qualified electors (including, if an elector has authorised the use of an electronic mail address, that address) within seven days of receiving his written request: r 39(5)(b) (amended by SI 2004/1889).

If any of the candidates so request, the presiding officer must despatch to every elector election addresses from those candidates, being not more than one sheet of A4 paper: Church Representation Rules r 39(6). Sufficient copies of the addresses must be provided by the candidates at their own expense and be delivered to the presiding officer by such date as he determines, being not less than seven days after the close of nominations: r 39(6). The presiding officer is under no obligation to despatch to electors election addresses which are received after the due date or which are not in the prescribed form: r 39(6).

It is the duty of the presiding officer in any election to seek to ensure that during the period beginning with the date on which nominations are invited and ending on the last date for the return of the voting papers, no papers or other literature except election addresses prepared by the candidates under the above provisions are circulated to the electors by him or by or under authority of the diocesan synod or the deanery synod or distributed at a synod meeting which in his opinion are likely to prejudice the election: r 39(7). The rural dean and the lay chairman and secretary of the deanery synod are also under a duty to seek to ensure that during the election period no papers or other literature form part of an official circulation or are distributed at a synod meeting which in the opinion of any of them are likely to prejudice the election: r 39(7). Subject to r 51 (constraints in elections), if more candidates are nominated for any area than there are seats to be filled, the election must be conducted by voting papers by the method of the single transferable vote under rules to be made from time to time as provided by the Standing Orders of the General Synod: r 39(8). Every voting paper, which must include the year of birth of each candidate and a statement as to whether the candidate is seeking re-election and, if so, as to the dates of the candidate's previous service must be marked and signed on the reverse by the elector and must be returnable to the presiding officer within such period, not less than 21 days after the date on which the voting paper is issued, as the officer may specify, provided that a voting paper sent by facsimile transmission must not be counted as a valid vote: r 39(8) (amended by SI 2004/1889).

A candidate or a person nominated by him has the right to be present at the counting of the votes in order to scrutinise the count, but must take no part in it: Church Representation Rules r 39(9). The presiding officer must give not less than seven days notice in writing to each candidate of the time and place at which the votes are to be counted: r 39(9). Where within seven days of a count being completed the presiding officer is of the opinion that a recount should take place because of a possible irregularity or inaccuracy in the count, he may, with the concurrence of the registrar of the province, order such a recount and must give notice in writing to each candidate of the time and place at which the votes are to be recounted: r 39(10). A full return of the result of any election and of the result sheet must be sent by the presiding officer within four working days of the declaration of the result to every candidate in the election, the Clerk to the General Synod and an election scrutineer appointed by the Business Committee of the General Synod: r 39(11); SI 1999/2112. The scrutineer has power within 10 days of the declaration of the result to order a recount of the voting papers if in his opinion this might be material to the result of the election: Church Representation Rules r 39(11). The result sheet must be publicly displayed in the diocesan office in such manner as the bishop may approve and at the General Synod office until the end of the first group of sessions of the new Synod as the Clerk to the General Synod may direct: r 39(12); SI 1999/2112.

The following persons, if they are not in holy orders, are ex officio members of the House of Laity: the Dean of the Arches and Auditor¹, the Vicars-General of the provinces of Canterbury and York², the three Church Estates Commissioners³ and the Chairman of the Central Board of Finance⁴.

The House of Laity has power to co-opt persons who are actual lay communicant members of the Church of England⁵ of eighteen years or upwards to be members of the House of Laity⁶, but no such person is qualified to become a co-opted member unless at least two-thirds of the members of the Standing Committee of the House have first consented, either at a meeting or in writing, to his being co-opted⁷. The co-opted members must not at any time exceed five in number⁸. Except in regard to their appointment, the ex officio and co-opted members have the same rights and are subject to the same rules and regulations as elected members⁹. Co-opted members will normally continue to be members of the House of Laity until the next dissolution of the General Synod¹⁰, but the House of Laity may, in the case of any co-opted member, fix a shorter period of membership¹¹.

425. Casual vacancies.

Elections to fill casual vacancies among the elected members¹ of the House of Laity must be held as soon as reasonably practicable and must be completed within six months from the occurrence of the vacancy², except where the period for holding a general election to the House of Laity is due to begin within twelve months of the vacancy, in which case the vacancy is to remain unfilled unless the bishop's council and standing committee, acting in accordance with any directions of the diocesan synod, otherwise direct³. Elections to fill casual vacancies must be conducted in the same manner as ordinary elections⁴, except when the vacancy occurs within two years after a preceding election conducted by voting papers upon the principle of proportional representation, in which case, provided the bishop's council and standing committee acting in accordance with any directions of the diocesan synod agree, the election must be conducted⁵ by means of the voting papers received at the preceding election⁶. Any person elected to fill a casual vacancy holds office only for the unexpired portion of the term of office of the person in whose place he is elected⁷.

1 The provisions relating to election which are mentioned in this paragraph apply also, so far as applicable and with the necessary modifications, to the choosing of persons under the Church Representation Rules: r 39 (8), contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3 (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865); cf. para 418 note 4 ante.

2 Church Representation Rules, r 39 (5) (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865). No election to the House of Laity is invalid by reason of a casual vacancy among the diocesan electors not having been filled, but where possible all casual vacancies among the diocesan electors should be filled at the time of election to the House of Laity: r 39 (4) (added by S.I. 1973 No. 1865).

3 Ibid r 39 (5) proviso (substituted by S.I. 1973 No. 1865).

4 Ibid r 39 (3) (added by S.I. 1973 No. 1865).

6 Ibid r 39 (6) (added by S.I. 1973 No. 1865). The presiding officer asks each unelected but qualified candidate in the preceding election if he consents to serve: if only one candidate so consents he is to be elected to fill the vacancy, but if two or more consent the votes validly cast in the preceding election are to be recounted from the beginning in accordance with the rules made under standing orders of the General Synod mentioned in r 33 (4) (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865): r 39 (7) (added by S.I. 1973 No. 1865).

425 Casual vacancies

TEXT AND NOTES--Rule 39 now r 48; SI 1994/3118. 'Casual vacancy' in the Church Representation Rules r 48 includes the case where insufficient candidates have been nominated to fill the places available: r 48(11); SI 1989/2094.

TEXT AND NOTES 1-3--An election to fill a casual vacancy in the House of Laity must be completed, so far as possible, within six months from the occurrence of the vacancy and, in event of it not being filled within that period, the Chairman of the House of Laity of the General Synod may give directions to the presiding officer as to the date by which the vacancy must be filled: r 48(5)(a); SI 1989/2094. Where a casual vacancy occurs in the House of Laity of the General Synod and the period for holding a general election thereto is due to begin within 12 months of the vacancy, it must not be filled unless the lay members of the bishop's council and standing committee, acting in accordance with any directions of the diocesan synod, otherwise direct: r 48(5)(b); SI 1989/2094. As to the calculation of the period of six months, see r 48(10) (see PARA 513).

TEXT AND NOTE 4--Casual vacancies must be filled: r 48(3); SI 1989/2094. The qualifying date for diocesan electors must be determined in accordance with r 35(5): r 48(3); SI 1994/3118.

TEXT AND NOTES 5, 6--Replaced. Where a casual vacancy in the House of Laity of the General Synod occurs within the period of two years (i) beginning with 1 August in the year of the last general election thereto, or (ii) beginning with the date of the declaration of the result of an election to fill a casual vacancy where the election was conducted by voting papers in the same manner as a general election, the election to fill the casual vacancy must be conducted by those papers in accordance with r 48(6) (see NOTE 6): r 48(5)(c); SI 1989/2094, SI 1994/3118.

NOTE 5--Rule 48(1) (as renumbered) now substituted by SI 1989/2094.

NOTE 6--Rule 39(7) now r 48(6) (as substituted by SI 1999/2112). Where the election is to be conducted by the voting papers of a general election, the number of persons to be elected must be the same as in the general election, provided that no continuing candidate elected during the original count may be excluded: Church Representation Rules r 48(6)(a). Where the election is to be conducted by the voting papers of an election other than the general election, the number of persons to be elected shall be calculated by adding together the number of persons previously elected using these voting papers who are still continuing as elected persons, and the number of casual vacancies to be filled, provided that no continuing candidate elected during the original count must be excluded: r 48(6)(b). The presiding officer for the area in question must ask every candidate not elected in the previous election who is still qualified for election for the diocese in question if he consents to serve: r 48(6)(c). If the number of candidates is the same as the places to be filled and he or they so consent or only one of those candidates so consents he must be elected to fill the casual vacancy: r 48(6)(d). If more candidates than places to be filled so consent the votes validly cast in the preceding election must be recounted from the beginning in accordance with the rules mentioned in r 39(8), the presiding officer having first withdrawn those candidates who do not consent or are no longer eligible for election: r 48(6)(e).

Provision is made for appeals arising out of an election or choice of members of the House of Laity¹. A person aggrieved may appeal against the allowance or disallowance of any vote given or tendered in an election² or the result of any election or choice³. Notice of the appeal must be given in writing to the bishop of the diocese⁴ within the time prescribed⁵. Unless the parties agree to a settlement of their dispute the bishop must refer the appeal to the standing committee of the General Synod, which must appoint three or a greater odd number of its members to consider and decide the appeal⁶. The members so appointed must consider all the relevant circumstances, they are entitled to inspect all relevant documents and to be furnished with all relevant information, and they must give the parties an opportunity of appearing before them in person or through a legal or other representative⁷.

TEXT AND NOTES--Rule 36 now r 43; SI 1994/3118. Provisions as to election appeals now contained in rr 44, 45; SI 1989/2094.

The provisions of r 44 (except r 44(5) (see PARA 596)) in so far as they confer a right of appeal by any person referred to in r 44(2) (TEXT AND NOTE 2) against the result of an election and provide for notice of an appeal and the determination thereof, apply in relation to an election to the House of Laity of the General Synod by the diocesan electors of the diocese in Europe: r 44(3); SI 1989/2094.

TEXT AND NOTE 2--Now r 44(1)(a); SI 1989/2094. Persons with a right of appeal are an elector or candidate in the election, or the chairman of the House of Laity or of the House of Clergy of the diocesan synod or, in an election to the House of Laity of the General Synod, the chairman and vice-chairman of that House of Laity as specified in r 44(5): r 44(2); SI 1989/2094, SI 1994/3118. The chairman and vice-chairman of the House of Laity of the General Synod each have a right of appeal in accordance with r 44(1) in respect of any election to the House of Laity of the General Synod in either of the provinces of Canterbury and York and he must give notice in writing of such appeal to the presiding officer concerned not later than three months after the result of the election has been declared by the presiding officer, provided that if the office of chairman or vice-chairman is vacant when the result of the election is published, the person who last held the office is deemed to hold that office for these purposes: r 44(5); SI 1994/3118. Where the chairman or vice-chairman of the House of Laity has given notice of appeal, he must not be appointed to hear the appeal: r 44(9); SI 1989/2094.

TEXT AND NOTE 3--Now r 44(1)(b), SI 1989/2094.

TEXT AND NOTE 4--Subject to r 44(6) (see PARA 596), in the case of an appeal arising out of an election to the House of Laity of the General Synod or the diocesan synod notice of appeal must be given in writing to the chairman of the House of Laity of the diocesan synod; in any other case concerning the laity, notice of appeal must be given in writing to the lay chairman of the deanery synod: r 44(4); SI 1989/2094, SI 1994/3118.

NOTE 5--Now rr 44(4)(a), (b), 45(c); SI 1989/2094. For 'the announcement ... election' read 'the day on which the result is declared by the presiding officer': Church Representation Rules r 44(4)(b); SI 1999/2112.

TEXT AND NOTE 6--An appeal arising out of an election or choice of members of the House of Laity of the General Synod must, within 14 days of the appeal being lodged, be referred to the Chairman and Vice-Chairman of that House unless, within that period, the appellant withdraws the appeal in writing: Church Representation Rules r 44(8) (r 44(8), (9) substituted by SI 1999/2112). Subject to the Church Representation Rules r 44(9), the Chairman and Vice-Chairman acting jointly must appoint three persons (one of whom must be a qualified lawyer) from an appeal panel consisting of the Dean of the Arches and Auditor, the Vicar General of the Province of Canterbury, the Vicar General of the Province of York and twelve members of the House of Laity of the General Synod nominated by the Appointments Committee of the Church of England to consider and decide the appeal: r 44(8). Where (a) the Chairman or Vice-Chairman of the House of Laity has given notice of appeal under the Church Representation Rules r 44(5), or where he comes from the diocese to which the appeal relates he must take no part in the appointing of the three persons to hear the appeal and he must not be appointed to hear the appeal: r 44(9)(a). Where a member of the appeal panel comes from the diocese to which the appeal relates, or might otherwise have a benefit from the outcome of the election, he must not be appointed to hear the appeal: r 44(9)(b). Where an appeal is pending in respect of an election to any synod, any person who was declared elected in accordance with r 33 (see PARA 503) but whose election is or may be affected by the appeal is deemed to be a member of that synod until the appeal is heard or disposed of: Church Representation Rules r 44(12); SI 1994/3118.

TEXT AND NOTE 7--Unless the persons appointed to consider and decide the appeal consent to the withdrawal of the appeal, they must determine the matter at issue and, in an election appeal must determine whether (i) the person or persons whose election is complained of was or were duly elected, (ii) the facts complained of amount to a minor infringement of the rules which did not affect the outcome of the election in which event the appeal must be dismissed, (iii) the facts complained of amount to a procedural irregularity in the conduct of the election, but that in all the relevant circumstances the appeal must be dismissed, or (iv) the election was void. The determination so certified is final as to the matters at issue. Where there has been no valid election, a fresh election must be directed to be held: r 45(d); SI 1989/2094, SI 1999/2112. As to the power to award costs, see Church Representation Rules r 45(f); SI 1989/2094.

427. Representation on foundation of new bishoprics.

Upon the foundation of a new bishopric the General Synod may provide by resolution or otherwise¹ for the representation, during the period between the foundation of the new bishopric and the next election to the House of Laity, of any diocese constituted upon the foundation of the new bishopric and of any diocese the area of which is altered by the foundation of the new bishopric, and for matters consequential upon them². The General Synod may, in exercising its powers, allocate any members of the House of Laity originally elected by the representative electors of the area affected³ or any part of it to the new dioceses concerned or any of them, so that any member allocated to the new diocese shall be in the same position as if he had been elected by the representative electors of that diocese⁴.

1 New Dioceses (Transitional Provisions) Measure 1927, s 2 (1); Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 2 (2). Prima facie evidence of any resolution or other exercise of any power conferred by the New Dioceses (Transitional Provisions) Measure 1927 may be given by producing a copy of it signed by the secretary or assistant secretary of the General Synod: s 2 (2); Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 2 (2).

2 New Dioceses (Transitional Provisions) Measure 1927, ss 1 (1) (powers), 3 (definitions); Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 2 (2).

3 I.e. the areas of the new dioceses concerned collectively: New Dioceses (Transitional Provisions) Measure 1927, s 3 (ii).

4 Ibid s 1 (2) (i); Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 2 (2). The concluding words of this provision, as originally enacted in the Measure of 1927 are 'as if he had been elected by the representative electors in the diocesan conference of that diocese'. These words must be construed in the light of the Synodical Government Measure 1969, which substituted diocesan synods for diocesan conferences and directed that references in any Measure to diocesan conferences should be construed as references to diocesan synods (s. 4 (7)), but which also enacted that members of the House of Laity were in future to be elected, not in the diocesan synod by its members, but by members of the House of Laity of all the deanery synods in the diocese (described as 'diocesan electors'): see the Church Representation Rules, r 29 (2), contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3 (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865). It seems that in applying the New Dioceses (Transitional Provisions) Measure 1927, s 1 (2) (i), 'representative electors' must be taken to mean diocesan electors as defined in the new legislation, and the words 'in the diocesan conference' must be regarded as no longer operative.

427 Representation on foundation of new bishoprics

TEXT AND NOTES--The New Dioceses (Transitional Provisions) Measure 1927 has been repealed.

NOTE 4--Rule 35(3) (formerly r 29(2)) amended (see PARA 418): SI 1989/2095, SI 1994/3118.

427A. Establishment of the Archbishops' Council.

There is established an Archbishops' Council, whose objects are to co-ordinate, promote, aid and further the work and mission of the Church of England¹. The Council is to consist of (1) the Archbishops of Canterbury and York; (2) the Prolocutors of the Convocations of Canterbury and York; (3) the chairman and vice-chairman of the House of Laity; (4) two bishops elected by the House of Bishops from among its members; (5) two clerks in Holy Orders elected by the House of Clergy from among its members; (6) two lay persons elected by the House of Laity from among its members; (7) such persons as may be appointed jointly by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York with the approval of the General Synod; (8) one of the Church Estates Commissioners appointed by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York acting jointly². The Archbishops, acting jointly, may appoint not more than six persons as members of the Council, but no such appointment may be made without the approval of the General Synod; and in considering the making of any such appointment (except on the first occasion) the Archbishops must consult the Council and the Appointments Committee of the Church of England³. The archbishops are joint presidents of the Council, and the Archbishop of Canterbury is to preside at meetings⁴. Further provision is made as to the membership, staff, proceedings and incidental powers of the Council⁵.

The Archbishops may by order provide for the transfer to the Council of functions of the Church Commissioners (with certain exceptions), the Central Board of Finance or the Standing Committee of the General Synod or any sub-committees of it⁶.

The Archbishops' Council has the right to introduce legislation to the General Synod⁷.

1 National Institutions Measure 1998 s 1(1). The Measure was brought into force on 1 January 1999 by order dated 14 October 1998 made by the archbishops under s 15. The Council is declared to be established for charitable purposes: s 1(2).

427B. Distribution to and application of funds by the Archbishops' Council.

The Church Commissioners must from time to time in general meeting determine the amount of income from their assets which is to be made available to the Archbishops' Council¹ for application or distribution² in the course of such period as may be specified in the determination, and to the extent that the Church Commissioners are satisfied that it is available for application or distribution, to pay that amount to the Council in equal monthly instalments or as otherwise agreed by them and the Council³.

The Council must consider and determine how to apply or distribute such sums, but those sums must not be applied or distributed for any purpose other than one for which the balance in the Church Commissioners' general fund⁴ was available immediately before 1 January 1999⁵ and in applying or distributing those sums the Council must have particular regard to the statutory requirements relating to the making of additional provision for the cure of souls in parishes where such assistance is most required⁶.

Provision is made for the Council and the Church Commissioners acting jointly, after consultation with any body appearing to be significantly affected, to produce a plan which contains an estimate by the Church Commissioners⁷ of the amount of income from their assets available for application or distribution under the provisions described above during a period not exceeding three years, and identifies the purposes for which the sums are to be applied or distributed and the proportion of those sums appropriate for each purpose⁸.

As soon as practicable after the end of each year the Council must cause a certificate to be issued to the Church Commissioners to the effect that the application and distribution of the sums made available by them has been in accordance with these provisions⁹.

1 Ie the Archbishops' Council: as to which see PARA 427A. Before determining the amount to be made available to the Council the Church Commissioners must consult the Council and in making the determination must have regard to any proposals made by the Council: National Institutions Measure 1998 s 2(2). 427C. Accounts, reports and budgets of the Archbishops' Council.

The accounts of the Archbishops' Council¹ for each year must be audited by a person appointed by the Council with the approval of the General Synod². The auditor's report for any year, together with the accounts for that year, must be laid before the General Synod before the end of June in the following year³.

The Council must cause a report of its work and proceedings during the year in question, including any decisions taken as to its future work, to be laid before the General Synod before the end of June in the following year⁴. The Council must also, at each group of sessions of the General Synod, cause an account of the matters discussed and the decisions taken by it at its meetings held since the previous group of sessions to be laid before the General Synod for its approval⁵.

In each year the Council must prepare a budget indicating its expected income and expenditure for the following year and, before the end of June, cause it to be laid before the General Synod for its approval⁶. In considering the annual budget it is not open to the General Synod to alter the amount of the sums to be made available to the Council by the Church Commissioners⁷ or the proposed application or distribution of those sums⁸.

The General Synod may request reports from the Council on any matter relating to the functions of the Council⁹.

(6) THE PROVINCES

(i) Provincial Organisation

428. The Provinces of Canterbury and York.

A province is the circuit of an archbishop's jurisdiction. There are in England two archbishops, one having jurisdiction in the province of Canterbury and the other in the province of York¹. Each province consists of a number of dioceses², each diocese being split into archdeaconries³, each archdeaconry into deaneries⁴ and each deanery into parishes⁵. The boundaries of the two provinces have been adjusted by Act of Parliament and by Measure⁶. In each province there is a representative assembly of the clergy of the province, known as the convocation⁷.

1 As to the archbishops, see PARA 429 et seq post. As to deans of provinces, see PARA 443 note 1 post. As to registrars of provinces, see PARA 1285 text and note 12 post; as to provincial vicars-general, see PARA 430 note 3 post.

2 For the dioceses within each province, see PARAS 455, 456 post. On this division at one time it was customary to refer to diocesan bishops as the suffragans of the metropolitan: see Co Litt 94A. This certainly accords with the Roman hierarchical view, at the apex of which stands the Pope. It does not accord so closely with the orthodox (and possibly the primitive) conception of the diocese under the bishop as the essential unit, though dioceses may combine to form a church.

3 As to archdeacons, see PARA 496 et seq post.

4 The term 'deanery' is now generally used instead of 'rural deanery', in accordance with the nomenclature of the Synodical Government Measure 1969 (see s 9 (2), where 'deanery' is defined as meaning rural deanery).

5 As to parishes, see PARA 534 et seq post.

6 The principal changes made since the Reformation are under 33 Hen. 8 c. 31 (Bishopricks of Chester and York) (1541), by which the dioceses of Chester and Sodor and Man were severed from the province of Canterbury and united to that of York; and by the Diocese of Southwell (Transfer) Measure 1935, by which the diocese of Southwell was also transferred from Canterbury to York.

A. APPOINTMENT AND FUNCTIONS OF ARCHBISHOPS

429. Appointment of archbishops.

The election of an archbishop is carried out by the dean and chapter of the cathedral of the void see in pursuance of a licence granted by the Sovereign under the Great Seal (termed a congé d'élire) and a letter missive containing the name of the person to be elected¹. The dean and chapter must act with all speed and celerity, and if they defer the election above twelve days after the delivery to them of the licence and letter missive, the Sovereign may by letters patent nominate and present such person as she thinks able and convenient for the vacant office and dignity². For purposes of confirmation, investiture and consecration³ an appointment must be notified by the Sovereign to the other archbishop and two bishops or else to four bishops within the realm or any of the Queen's dominions which she may assign⁴. Provisions governing the enthronement of archbishops⁵ and the restitution out of the Queen's hands of all possessions and profits spiritual and temporal belonging to the archbishopric and the doing of homage are similar to those which apply on the installation of bishops⁶.

No man can be an archbishop before he is thirty years of age⁷ but, subject to this, there seems to be no restriction on the Queen's statutory power of appointment⁸.

2 Ibid s 3.

3 An archbishop is usually translated from another see, so that as a rule there is no consecration: see Godolphin's Repertorium Canonicum 29, and see PARA 471 post.

4 Appointment of Bishops Act 1533, ss 3, 4. The archbishop must make a declaration of assent, a declaration against simony and an oath of allegiance: s 4; Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C15 paras 1 (1), 2 (substituted by Amending Canon No. 4); Canon C16 para 1.

5 After election an archbishop is 'enthroned', whereas a bishop is, strictly speaking, 'installed': Godolphin's Repertorium Canonicum 21.

6 Appointment of Bishops Act 1533, s 5. See also PARAS 468, 469 post, where the installation etc. of bishops is discussed.

8 R v Archbishop of Canterbury (1848) 11 QB 483; R v Archbishop of Canterbury [1902] 2 KB 503; Appointment of Bishops Act 1533. The reasons are that (1) all archbishoprics and bishoprics of England were founded by the Sovereign of England (Co Litt 94a, 97) and are royal donatives (1 Bl Com (14th Edn) 379, note (7)); and (2) the royal supremacy is recognised by law (see PARA 352 ante). The qualifications for appointment are the same as for bishops, for which see PARA 459 post.

430. Jurisdiction and functions of archbishops.

As superintendent of all ecclesiastical matters in his province an archbishop has, throughout the province at all times, metropolitanical jurisdiction¹ to correct and supply the defects of other bishops; and during the time of his metropolitanical visitation² he has jurisdiction as 'Ordinary', except in places and over persons exempt by law or custom³. Each archbishop has his own diocese where he exercises episcopal jurisdiction⁴.

Within his province an archbishop is the principal minister, and to him belong the rights of (1) confirming the election of every person to a bishopric⁵; (2) being the chief consecrator at the consecration of every bishop⁶; (3) receiving such appeals in his provincial court as may be provided by law⁷; (4) holding metropolitanical visitations at times or places limited by law or custom⁸; and (5) presiding in the convocation of the province either in person or by such deputy as he may lawfully appoint⁹. The two archbishops are Joint Presidents of the General Synod¹⁰.

1 It has been questioned whether there is any difference between the two titles 'archbishop' and 'metropolitan'; but it has been said that he is called archbishop as being chief of the other bishops, and metropolitan 'in respect of the number of cities or cathedral churches where the bishoprics are': Godolphin's Repertorium Canonicum 15.

2 As to the metropolitanical visitation, see PARA 431 post.

3 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C17 para 2. This jurisdiction is exercised by the archbishop himself, or by a vicar-general, official or other commissary to whom authority in that behalf has been formally committed by the archbishop concerned: see Canon C17 para 3. The office of provincial vicar-general, whose functions include presiding over the confirmation of the election of bishops (see PARA 464 post) must be distinguished from that of diocesan vicar-general (now always held by the chancellor: see PARA 1275 post). The provincial vicars-general are members of the convocations if they are clergymen: see PARA 444 post. For the meaning of 'Ordinary', see PARA 458 post.

4 In Church Assembly or General Synod Measures passed after 1925 'bishop' in relation to the diocese of an archbishop means archbishop: Interpretation Measure 1925, s 3; Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 2 (2).

5 As to the election of a bishop, see PARA 461 post. The business of confirmation is conducted by the archbishop's vicar-general, as to whom see note 3 supra.

6 As to the consecration of bishops, see PARAS 467, 493 post.

9 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C17 para 4. As to the convocations, see PARA 442 et seq post. In the province of Canterbury the Bishop of London, or in his absence, the Bishop of Winchester, has the right to be so appointed; and in their absence the archbishop must appoint some other diocesan bishop of the province: Canon C17 para 4. By ancient custom, no Act is held to be an Act of the convocation of the province unless it has received the archbishop's assent: Canon C17 para 5 (amended by Amending Canon No. 1).

431. Visitation of bishops and clergy.

An archbishop has authority to visit and inspect the bishops and inferior clergy of his province¹, but any proceedings for offences against the laws ecclesiastical must take the due legal form directed by the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963², or by the general ecclesiastical law for the time being in force³.

When an archbishop visits his province it is usual for him first to visit his own cathedral and diocese, then in every diocese to begin with the cathedral and proceed thence as he pleases to the other parts of the diocese⁴.

By agreement the Archbishop of Canterbury does not visit the diocese of London⁵.

431 Visitation of bishops and clergy

NOTE 3--1963 Measure s 82 repealed: Statute Law (Repeals) Act 2004.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(6) THE PROVINCES/(ii) Archbishops/A. APPOINTMENT AND FUNCTIONS OF ARCHBISHOPS/432. Archbishops' miscellaneous powers and duties.

432. Archbishops' miscellaneous powers and duties.

When a bishopric is vacant the archbishop of the province may, by prescription or composition, be entitled to provide for the ecclesiastical administration of the diocese during the vacancy, that is to act as the 'guardian of the spiritualities'¹ (in the same way that the Sovereign is the guardian of the temporalities).

The archbishop presents to livings which a bishop may allow to lapse², and has power to review a bishop's decision withholding approval to the exercise of certain rights of presentation to vacant benefices³.

He is entitled to receive from every bishop holding office within his province the oath of due obedience⁴, and this oath may still be taken during the consecration service⁵.

He may consecrate persons to the office of bishop for the purpose of exercising episcopal functions elsewhere than in England, in which case he may, if he thinks fit, dispense with the oath of due obedience to the archbishop⁶.

Where a see is vacant, or the diocesan bishop is unable because of illness or absence to appoint a deputy⁷, the provincial archbishop may appoint one or more suffragan or assistant bishops or archdeacons of the diocese to perform certain functions⁸, for example in relation to matters arising under the Pastoral Measure 1968⁹ or to transactions concerning parsonage houses or glebe⁹.

Certain functions are assigned to archbishops under the Church Representation Rules¹⁰. Any question which arises whether a church is a church in communion with the Church of England¹¹ is to be conclusively determined for the purposes of those rules by the two archbishops¹². During a vacancy in a diocesan bishopric, or in case of the illness of a diocesan bishop, the provincial archbishop may appoint a person in episcopal orders to exercise the functions of the diocesan bishop under the rules¹³. An archbishop may appoint a commissary and delegate to him all or any of his functions under the rules¹⁴.

The archbishops have certain functions in respect of elections to the Houses of Clergy of the convocations, for example that of directing the formation of electoral areas within a diocese, and that of acting as an appellate authority in the case of an objection¹⁵.

The archbishops in their capacity as such have certain functions under the constitution of the General Synod¹⁶, including the determination of questions as to the interpretation and applicability of provisions of the constitution¹⁷.

In each province there is a court of the archbishop, in which, however, he does not himself sit as a judge¹⁸. In a few instances powers of adjudication are, by specific enactment, exercisable by the archbishop personally¹⁹.

When a bishop (and also, it seems, an archbishop) ministers in any office prescribed by the Book of Common Prayer, he is a minister bound to observe the directions given to the minister in the rubrics of such office²⁰; but the robes of an archbishop at Book of Common Prayer services are the same as those of a bishop²¹.

1 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C19 para 2: see PARA 489 post. The archbishop may act in this capacity by and through such person or persons as he may nominate according to the prescription or composition: Canon C19 para 2. Where the right does not belong to the archbishop by prescription or composition, the guardianship to the spiritualities belongs to the dean and chapter of the cathedral church of the diocese: Canon C19 para 2. As to the guardianship of the spiritualities when the archiepiscopal see is vacant, see PARA 441 post.

2 As to lapse, see PARA 826 post.

4 The form of oath is given in the Book of Common Prayer, Form of Ordaining and Consecrating of an Archbishop or Bishop, 'In the name of God, Amen. I, A.B., chosen bishop of the Church and See of... do profess and promise all due reverence and obedience to the Archbishop and to the Metropolitan Church of ... and to their Successors: So help me God, through Jesus Christ'.

The Archbishop of Canterbury has the style of 'Primate of All England and Metropolitan'¹, and he has the privilege of crowning the Kings and Queens regnant of England². He has the right to grant throughout both provinces all those licences, dispensations and faculties which were formerly within the Pope's jurisdiction³ and by virtue of this right he grants special marriage licences⁴ and confers degrees⁵ 'in prejudice of the universities'⁶. The archbishop, however, has no power to confer titles, ecclesiastical or otherwise, that belong solely to the Crown⁷.

The archbishop is a Lord of Parliament⁸ with a seat in the House of Lords, and precedence next after the Royal Family and before the Lord Chancellor⁹. He is ex officio Joint President of the General Synod¹⁰ and chairman of the Church Commissioners¹¹.

434. Special privileges of the Archbishop of York.

The Archbishop of York claims the special privilege of crowning a Queen Consort and of being her chaplain, but it would seem that he is not entitled to these privileges as of right, although he has sometimes exercised them¹. He has the special style of 'Primate of England and Metropolitan'², and has precedence over all dukes (not being of the blood royal), being placed immediately after the Lord Chancellor³. He is also a Lord of Parliament, and by statute has his allotted seat in the House of Lords next after the Archbishop of Canterbury⁴. He is, ex officio, Joint President of the General Synod⁵.

1 A petition to be granted these privileges was presented by the then archbishop (Dr Maclagan) to the Court of Claims held before the coronation of Edward VII. The point, however, was not decided, His Majesty accepting the Archbishop of Canterbury's suggestion that the Archbishop of York should as a matter of grace be allowed to crown Queen Alexandra. The Archbishop of York had also made a claim to act for all purposes in place of the Archbishop of Canterbury, if absent, but this was likewise withdrawn: see Wollaston, Coronation Claims (2nd Edn) 148, 151 note 1. As to the Court of Claims, see CROWN AND ROYAL FAMILY vol 12(1) (Reissue) PARAS 23-26. The claim was not made at the coronations of George V and George VI, when the Archbishop of Canterbury crowned Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth respectively. 435. Status and emoluments of archbishops.

In most respects¹ the two archbishops are of equal and independent position and authority; both are alike subject to the Queen as their immediate superior.

Like other bishops an archbishop is supposed by an ancient fiction to be wedded to his see². Hence by custom he still impales the arms of his see, his own arms taking the place which would ordinarily be occupied by his wife's³. He also drops his own surname and signs his Christian name and that of his see, using the Latin abbreviation⁴. He is sued by his Christian name with the addition of his name of office. He is a corporation sole with perpetual succession⁵ and a seal⁶.

The archbishops are dignitaries⁷ and members of the Privy Council⁸, and they hold other important public offices.

At the present time in lieu of the former statutory incomes⁹ payable to the Archbishops of Canterbury and York there is payable to the Archbishop of Canterbury a reduced stipend of £7,500 a year and to the Archbishop of York a reduced stipend of £5,000 a year, or, in each case, such greater sum as the Church Commissioners may from time to time determine, together with certain allowances¹⁰. 436 Resignation of archbishop TEXT AND NOTES--Where an archbishop wishes to resign his archbishopric he must tender his resignation to Her Majesty in a written instrument in the prescribed form and Her Majesty may by Order in Council declare the archbishopric vacant as from a date specified in the Order, which must not be earlier than the date of the Order: Bishops (Retirement) Measure 1986 s 4. 'Prescribed' means prescribed by the Vicars-General of the provinces of Canterbury and York acting jointly: s 10(1). Where an archbishopric has been declared vacant under the 1986 Measure, any other preferment held by the archbishop must also be vacated unless Her Majesty makes a declaration to the contrary: s 8(1). 'Preferment' includes an archbishopric, a bishopric, archdeaconry, deanery or office in a cathedral or collegiate church, and a benefice, and every curacy, lectureship, readership, chaplaincy, office or place which requires the discharge of any spiritual duty: s 10(1).

437. Retirement for incapacity.

Special provision is made for the voluntary or compulsory retirement of an archbishop in case of incapacity¹. If it appears to the two senior diocesan bishops of his province² that the archbishop is incapacitated by physical or mental disability from the due performance of his episcopal³ duties, the archbishop may, and if so requested by these two senior bishops with the concurrence of such three other bishops as the senior bishops have selected from a panel⁴ must, tender to the Sovereign the resignation of his archbishopric⁵. Before the archbishop is so requested to resign the two senior bishops must send notice to him of their intention to make the request and the archbishop has, on receipt of the notice, the same remedies as a bishop in the like case⁶.

If the archbishop to whom such a request is sent refuses or fails within two months to comply with the request or is prevented by his infirmity from doing so, the two senior bishops may declare the archbishopric vacant, although this declaration does not take effect unless and until it is confirmed by Order in Council⁷.

1 Bishops (Retirement) Measure 1951, ss 1, 11 proviso.

2 In the province of Canterbury the senior bishops are London and then Winchester; in the province of York the Bishop of Durham is always the senior bishop. After these bishops seniority for the purposes of the Bishops (Retirement) Measure 1951 is determined by length of service as a diocesan bishop within the province; and any question as to the relative seniority is determined by the archbishop, whose decision is final: s 16 (2).

3 It would seem that incapacity to perform archiepiscopal duties would not be a matter for the bishops, but for the Crown and its advisers.

4 This is the panel of bishops appointed by the Upper House of the convocation of the province in question for the purposes of the Bishops (Retirement) Measure 1951: s 16 (1).

6 Ibid ss 1 (1) proviso, 11 proviso. For the bishop's remedies, see PARA 486 post.

7 Ibid ss 1 (2), 11 proviso. By virtue of s 2 the archbishop is, for purposes of the Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, deemed to have retired by reason of infirmity on the date on which the declaration takes effect: cf. para 440 post.

438. Retirement if change of administration is desirable.

If it appears to an archbishop that, in the interests of his diocese, a change of administration is desirable, he is required to tender his resignation to the Sovereign¹.

439 Age for retirement

Age limit of 70 introduced by Ecclesiastical Offices (Age Limit) Measure 1975. The Queen may authorise continuance in office for a period not exceeding one year: s 2.

Not less than six months before the date on which an archbishop is required to vacate his office in accordance with the 1975 Measure, the archbishop must tender his resignation to Her Majesty in a written instrument in the prescribed form and Her Majesty may by Order in Council declare the archbishopric vacant as from that date or, if her Majesty decides to exercise Her discretion under s 2, as from such later date as Her Majesty may determine: Bishops (Retirement) Measure 1986 s 5. As to the meaning of 'prescribed' see PARA 436. During a vacancy of the see of Canterbury the dean and chapter, as guardian of the spiritualities, are empowered under their name and seal to grant all such licences and dispensations throughout both provinces as may be granted by the archbishop under the Ecclesiastical Licences Act 1533⁸.

(iii) Convocations

442. History of the convocations.

Each of the provinces of the Church of England has a representative assembly of the clergy¹, known as the convocation of the province. The history² of these bodies goes back to the provincial synods of the mediaeval period. They continued in existence after the Reformation; but by a statute of Henry VIII it was enacted that the clergy must not assemble in convocation without the authority of the Sovereign's writ, nor make, promulge or execute canons without the royal assent and licence, or in contravention of the royal prerogative or of the customs, laws or statutes of the realm³. Early in the eighteenth century the activity of the convocation was suspended, and they did not meet again for the transaction of business until the middle of the nineteenth century. In the present century the convocations have continued to exist side by side with a new legislative body which includes representatives of the laity, that is, the Church Assembly (now the General Synod). Their distinctive character and importance have, however, been much diminished, especially in consequence of the transfer (in 1970) of the power of making canons from the convocations to the General Synod⁴. The Houses of Bishop and Clergy of the General Synod are constituted by the membership of the Upper and Lower Houses respectively of the two convocations⁵.

443. Summoning and dissolution of convocations.

The Convocations of Canterbury and York may be called together and dissolved at such times as Her Majesty may determine¹ without regard to the time at which Parliament is summoned or dissolved². Unless it is sooner dissolved pursuant to Her Majesty's directions, a convocation stands dissolved at the expiration of the period of five years from the date for which it was called together³. It is not dissolved by the demise of the Crown⁴. After dissolution of the convocations, action is to be taken to secure that the new convocations are called together as soon as may be convenient⁵. The dissolution and calling together of the convocations have the effect of dissolving and bringing into being the General Synod⁶.

1 Both the summoning and the dissolution are effected in pursuance of the Queen's writ, which is addressed to the appropriate archbishop: see the Crown Office (Writs for Dissolving and Summoning Convocations) Rules 1970, S.I. 1970 No. 821, Schedule (amended by S.I. 1975 No. 802), made under the Crown Office Act 1877, s 3). Upon receipt of the Queen's writ requiring him to call together the convocation, the appropriate archbishop issues his mandate, thus instituting the process whereby members are cited to appear at the place appointed. In the province of Canterbury the archbishop's mandate is sent to the Bishop of London, who is the dean of that province, and he is required to cite the other diocesan bishops, and by them the rest of the clergy. In the province of York (which apparently has no dean) the archbishop sends his mandate to each bishop direct, requiring him to cite the clergy. During a vacancy in an archbishopric the guardian of the spiritualities (see PARA 441 ante) can issue the mandate: 3 Wilkins' Concilia Magnae Britanniae et Hiberniae 871.

444. Houses of convocation.

In each province there is an Upper House and a Lower House of the convocation of the province¹.

The Upper House of each province consists of the archbishop, the diocesan bishops of the province, and a prescribed number² of suffragan bishops of the province elected³ by all the suffragan bishops of the province⁴. Where a person so elected ceases to be eligible for membership of the Upper House he is deemed to have vacated his seat⁵.

The Lower House of Canterbury consists of (1) ten persons elected by and from among the deans and provosts of all the cathedral churches in the province and the Deans of Westminster and Windsor⁶; (2) either the Dean of Jersey or the Dean of Guernsey⁷; (3) one archdeacon in each diocese⁸; (4) the Chaplain of the Fleet, the Chaplain-General of the Forces and the Chaplain-in-Chief (Royal Air Force)⁹; (5) proctors of the clergy¹⁰, of whom a number not exceeding 130 are elected for the dioceses¹¹ and four are elected for universities in the province¹²; (6) one person chosen by and from among the clerical members of religious communities in the province¹³; (7) each of the following, if a clergyman: the Dean of the Arches and Auditor¹⁴, the vicar-general of the province¹⁵ and the Third Church Estates Commissioner¹⁶; and (8) any persons who may be duly co-opted¹⁷.

The Lower House of York consists of (a) five persons elected by and from among the deans and provosts of all the cathedral churches in the province¹⁸; (b) the Archdeacon of Man and one archdeacon in each diocese other than that of Sodor and Man¹⁹; (c) proctors of the clergy²⁰, of whom a number not exceeding sixty-one are elected for the dioceses²¹ and two are elected for universities in the province²²; (d) one person chosen by and from among the clerical members of religious communities in the province²³; (e) the vicar-general of the province, if he is a clergyman²⁴; and (f) any person who may be duly co-opted²⁵.

A suffragan bishop is not qualified to be elected, chosen or co-opted to be a member of the Lower House or entitled to elect or choose a member of that House, and any member of that House who is appointed suffragan bishop is deemed to have vacated his seat²⁶.

1 BI Com (14th Edn) 279. The members of the Upper House also form the House of Bishops, and those of the Lower House the House of Clergy, in the General Synod: see PARAS 390, 416 ante. A convocation has power to join to these two Houses, on occasions, a House of Laity: see PARA 445 post.

3 They are to be elected in such manner as may be prescribed by rules made under Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon H3: Canon H3 paras 1 (b), 2 (b). The power to make rules is exercisable by the General Synod in accordance with its standing orders: Canon H3 para 5.

4 Ibid Canon H3 paras 1, 2.

5 Ibid Canon H3 para 3. An election to fill a casual vacancy must be conducted in the same manner as an ordinary election (Canon H3 para 4), although a casual vacancy which occurs less than twelve months before an ordinary election is to be held is not to be filled unless the archbishop so directs (Canon H3 para 4 proviso).

6 Ibid Canon H2 para 1 (a) (Canterbury). Canon H2 was added by Canon promulgated 7th October 1969. It is printed as a single canon, combining the texts of the canons made by the two convocations and containing some provisions which are common to both provinces and some which apply either to Canterbury or York alone.

The power to make canons for the amendment of the constitutions of the Lower House is now vested in the General Synod: Convocations of the Clergy Measure 1920; Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 1 (5) (a).

The persons referred to in the text are to be elected in the manner prescribed by the Rules made under Canon H2, contained in Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) I/11-22: Rules made under Canon H2, PARA.1 (a); see rr 1-6. The presiding officer concerned with the election is the registrar of the province or a person appointed by him: r 2. The presiding officer's expenses must be paid out of the General Synod Fund: rr 37 (Canterbury), 35 (York). The power to make rules is exercisable by the General Synod in accordance with its standing orders: Canon H2 para 10. See also Canon H2 para 11.

445. Power to add a House of Laity.

A convocation may, by its standing orders or otherwise, make provision for joining to its two Houses, at such sittings and for the purposes of such of its functions as it may determine, a House of Laity¹ composed of the following members of the House of Laity of the General Synod²: (1) those who are elected to the General Synod for areas in the province³; (2) such of the ex officio and co-opted members of that House as may be allocated to the province for the purposes of this provision by the President and the Prolocutor of the House of the convocation and the Prolocutor and Pro-prolocutor of the House of Laity of the General Synod⁴; and (3) the member chosen by the lay members of religious communities in the province⁵.

1 A House of Laity so joined to the two Houses of a convocation has no power to vote on any matter referred to the convocation under the Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 2 (1), Sch. 2, art. 7 (the constitution of the General Synod), or any matters in respect of which powers are exercisable by the convocation in accordance with s 3: see Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon H1 para 3 proviso. 446. Election of proctors for dioceses.

Each diocese¹ in a province is an electoral area, and the number of proctors elected for it must be in such proportion to the number of electors in that diocese as is determined from time to time by the General Synod². This is, however, subject to (1) limitation of the total number of proctors elected for all the dioceses in the province³; (2) the requirement that no diocese is to have fewer than three proctors (except the diocese of Sodor and Man which has one proctor)⁴; and (3) a provision empowering the archbishop of the province, on the petition of the electors in any diocese, to divide the diocese into electoral areas and to assign a number of proctors to each area from the number allowed to the whole diocese, the division and assignment being so made that no electoral area will have fewer than three proctors and that the number assigned to each area will be proportionate to the number of electors within that area⁵.

The electors are, in the case of an electoral area consisting of a diocese or part of a diocese, all clergymen exercising the office of assistant bishop in the area or beneficed in the area, or holding office in a cathedral church in the area, or (in the case of Canterbury) holding office in one of the collegiate churches of Westminster and Windsor⁶ if situated in the area, or licensed under seal by the diocesan bishop and resident in the area, not being suffragan bishops, deans or provosts, archdeacons, forces chaplains who are ex officio members of the Convocation of Canterbury⁷, clergymen qualified as electors for university electoral areas, or members of religious communities⁸. No person, however, is entitled to vote in more than one electoral area⁹.

The persons eligible as proctors for an electoral area consisting of a diocese or part of a diocese are clergymen who have been admitted to priest's orders and who are entitled to vote in that area; they also include archdeacons who hold office in the diocese and are not otherwise appointed¹⁰ as members of the Lower House of the Convocation¹¹. No person, however, may offer himself for election in more than one electoral area at the same time¹².

The presiding officer at the election is the registrar of the diocese or a person appointed by him¹³. The method of election is that of proportional representation, and the procedure to be followed is governed by regulations made for that purpose¹⁴.

1 For the purpose of representation in the Houses of convocation no account is to be taken of any alteration of diocesan boundaries made by a pastoral scheme under the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 35 or s 36, until the elections for those Houses next occur after the coming into operation of the relevant provisions of the scheme: s 37.

NOTE 3--The number limited for Canterbury is now 132: Canon H2 para 2 proviso (a); Diocese in Europe Measure 1980 s 1, Sch 1 para 3; Amending Canon No 8.

TEXT AND NOTE 4--Also except the diocese in Europe (see PARAS 316, 455), which has two proctors: Canon H2 para 2 proviso (a); Diocese in Europe Measure 1980 s 1, Sch 1 para 3; Amending Canon No 8.

TEXT AND NOTE 8--In the application of Canon H2 para 4 to an electoral area consisting of the diocese in Europe (see PARAS 316, 455), the word 'archdeacons' in PARA 4(a) is omitted: Canon H2 para 4; Diocese in Europe Measure 1980 s 1, Sch 1 para 4; Amending Canon No 8.

TEXT AND NOTES 11, 12--This provision is now subject to Canon H2 paras 5A, 5C, under which clergy entitled to vote in a university constituency may stand for election in the diocesan constituency if they have certain qualifications: Amending Canon No 7. The former Canon H2 para 5 proviso becomes H2 para 5B: Amending Canon No 7.

TEXT AND NOTE 11--In the application of Canon H2 para 5 to an electoral area consisting of the diocese in Europe (see PARAS 316, 455), the words 'they also include archdeacons ... Convocation' are omitted: Canon H2 para 5; Diocese in Europe Measure 1980 s 1, Sch 1 para 5; Amending Canon No 8.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(6) THE PROVINCES/(iii) Convocations/447. Election of proctors for universities.

447. Election of proctors for universities.

In the province of Canterbury each of the universities of Oxford, Cambridge and London is a separate electoral area; the other universities in the province, acting together for this purpose, form a fourth electoral area¹. In the province of York the universities are divided into two groups, in each of which they act together for the purpose of forming an electoral area. These groups are (1) the universities of Durham and Newcastle, and (2) the other universities in the province². One proctor is to be elected for each of the university electoral areas³.

The electors are clergymen of the Church of England who are qualified by virtue of the positions which they hold in their respective universities, as to which varying requirements are prescribed by rules⁴. No person is entitled to vote in more than one electoral area⁵.

The persons eligible as proctors for a university electoral area are clergymen who have been admitted to priest's orders and who are entitled to vote in that electoral area⁶. No person is entitled to offer himself for election in more than one electoral area at the same time⁷.

Except in cases where the presiding officer acts *ex officio*⁸, the archbishop of the province must appoint one of the electors to be presiding officer⁹. If a poll is necessary the presiding officer must give notice and conduct it in the manner customary for academic elections in the university or one of the universities concerned¹⁰.

1 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon H2 para 3 (Canterbury). This canon was added by Canon promulgated 7th October 1969. The election of proctors must be conducted in accordance with the Rules made under Canon H2: Canon H2 para 6.

2 Ibid Canon H2 para 3 (York).

3 Ibid Canon H2 para 3 (Canterbury, York).

4 Ibid Canon H2 para 4 (b). The requirements are set out in the Rules made under Canon H2, rr 20 (Canterbury), 18 (York). In the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge the qualification is membership of Congregation and of the Regent House respectively (r. 20 (a), (b) (Canterbury)). In the other universities the following persons are qualified: (1) persons who are certified by the appropriate university officer to be appointed or recognised teachers of the university holding full-time posts or part-time posts declared by the holders to be their main employment (rr. 20 (c) (i), (d) (i) (Canterbury), 18 (a) (York)); (2) persons who are similarly certified to be members of the financial and administrative staffs employed full-time by the university or (in the case of the University of London) by one of its schools or (in the case of other universities) by an institution constitutionally associated with the university (rr. 20 (c) (ii), (d) (ii) (Canterbury), 18 (b) (York)); and (3) except in the University of London persons who are similarly certified to be teachers (other than appointed or recognised teachers) employed full-time by the university or an institution constitutionally associated with it (rr. 20 (d) (ii) (Canterbury), 18 (b) (York)). In every case the qualifying membership, post or employment must be held at 6 a.m. on the date of the dissolution of convocation (rr. 20 (Canterbury), 18 (York)).

5 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon H2 para 4 proviso.

6 Ibid Canon H2 para 5.

7 Ibid Canon H2 para 5 proviso.

8 Presiding officers ex officio are, in the universities of Oxford and Cambridge, the Regius Professor of Divinity (Rules made under Canon H2, r 21 (1) (a) (Canterbury)); in the University of London, the Dean of King's College (r. 21 (a), (b) (Canterbury)); in the electoral area of the Universities of Durham and Newcastle, the Van Mildert Professor of Divinity in the University of Durham (r. 19 (1) (York)). However, if the professor (or in the case of London, the dean) is a candidate or is unable or unwilling to act, the archbishop must appoint one of the electors to take his place: rr 21 (1) proviso (Canterbury), 19 (1) proviso (York).

9 Ibid rr 21 (2) (Canterbury), 19 (2) (York). The presiding officer's expenses must be paid out of the General Synod Fund: rr 37 (Canterbury), 35 (York).

448. Vacancies.

A proctor is normally deemed to have vacated his seat if he ceases to be eligible for the electoral area for which he was elected¹; but this will not apply if, in the case of a proctor elected for a diocese or part of a diocese, the bishop's council and standing committee of the diocese has determined that he should remain a member of the Lower House². A person who, having been chosen as a representative of religious communities, ceases to be a member of a religious community in the province is deemed to have vacated his seat in the Lower House³. Any other member of the Lower House is deemed to have vacated his seat if he vacates the office by virtue of which he was eligible for or entitled to his membership⁴.

Subject to necessary modifications an election, appointment or choice of a person to fill a casual vacancy will be conducted in the same manner as an ordinary election, appointment or choice⁵, but where the casual vacancy occurs less than twelve months before an ordinary election to the Lower House is to be held, the vacancy is not to be filled unless the bishop so directs⁶.

449. Irregularities.

The presiding officer of an election¹ is empowered to deal with cases in which a nomination appears to him to be irregular², or in which objection is made to the manner in which an election is held³.

1 As to presiding officers, see PARA 444 notes 6, 13 ante, 446, 447 ante.

2 Rules made under Canon H2, rr 35 (Canterbury), 33 (York). If the irregularity appears before the voting papers are despatched to the electors, the candidate must be informed and given seven clear days in which to provide a fresh nomination, failing which he will be excluded from the election: rr 35 (1) (Canterbury), 33 (1) (York). If the irregularity appears later but before the date of the count, the presiding officer must declare the proceedings void and cause a fresh election to be held: rr 35 (2) (Canterbury); 33 (2) (York).

3 Ibid rr 36 (Canterbury), 34 (York). An objector who remains unsatisfied may (1) in the case of a diocesan election, refer the matter to the diocesan bishop or, if the see is vacant, to the archbishop; or (2), in the case of any other election, refer the matter to the archbishop; and where a matter is referred to the bishop he or any person not satisfied with his decision may refer the matter to the archbishop, whose decision is final: rr 36 (Canterbury), 34 (York).

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(6) THE PROVINCES/(iii) Convocations/451. Meetings and proceedings of convocations.

451. Meetings and proceedings of convocations.

The archbishop has the right of presiding in the convocation of the province, either in person or by such deputy as he may lawfully appoint¹. In the province of Canterbury the Bishop of London, or in his absence the Bishop of Winchester, has the right to be so appointed; and in their absence the archbishop must appoint some other diocesan bishop of the province¹.

By ancient custom, no Act is held to be an Act of convocation unless it has received the archbishop's assent².

The president of the Upper and also of the Lower House is called prolocutor (speaker)³. The prolocutor of the Lower House is chosen by that House, and presented to the Upper House: like the Speaker of the House of Commons he is the intermediary between the two Houses³.

A convocation may meet within the province or elsewhere at such places and times as they may determine⁴.

A convocation, when assembled, is bound by the surviving provisions of the Submission of the Clergy Act 1533⁵, and is also regulated by a number of ancient and modern rules as to its own procedure⁶.

If the Crown desires the advice of the convocations on matters ecclesiastical, Royal Letters of Business may be issued, stating the matter or matters to be considered, and authorising the convocation to debate, consider, consult and agree upon it, and after mature debate, to present to the Crown a report in writing⁷.

1 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C17 para 4.

2 Ibid Canon C17 para 5 (amended by Amending Canon No. 1). An Act of Convocation is a resolution passed by both Houses of the convocation and ratified and promulgated by the president in full synod: see Acts of the Convocations of Canterbury and York (1961 Edn), Editors' Note. Whilst it has moral force it has no legal force: Chronicle of Convocation (1959) 159 et seq; Bland v Archdeacon of Cheltenham (1972) Fam 157 at 166; [1972] 1 All ER 1012 at 1018.

4 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon H1 para 2. This canon is set out in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 1, and was added by Canon promulgated 7th October 1969.

5 The Submission of the Clergy Act 1533 has been repealed with the exception of ss 1, 3. The effect of these sections has been greatly diminished, as far as the convocations are concerned, by the transfer to the General synod of the powers to make canons; see the Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 1 (3); Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon H1 paras 1, 2, and PARA 452 post.

6 It also has a terminology in some cases peculiar to itself, but apparently chiefly founded on that of Parliament. Thus the speaker is prolocutor, an adjournment a continuation: see also Bishop Kennett, Ecclesiastical Synods 168. Convocation also has a special prayer which is never to be omitted and which contains the following passage: 'We who according to the Order of our Holy Reformation have deliberately and with good reason renounced the errors, corruptions, and superstitions, as well as the Papal tyranny which once prevailed': see Forma Precum (British Museum, 3406, c. 31).

7 For the forms, see Cardwell, History of Conferences 443; Chronicle of Convocation, Lower House, Canterbury 1872, p. 240; and Joyce, History of Convocations 142. Taxation of the clergy once formed a principal part of the business of convocation, but the clergy now has no special constitutional privilege in this respect: see PARA 351 ante. For a consideration of some aspects of the early constitution of convocation as a body, see R v Archbishop of York (1888) 20 QBD 740 at 746, 747, per Lord Coleridge CJ. Letters of Business were granted in 1872 for the discussion of the Ritual Commissioners' Final Report, and in 1904 for the consideration of the Prayer Book which resulted in the abortive Revised Prayer Book Measure. Recourse to this procedure in the future seems unlikely.

452. General functions of convocations.

The introduction of synodical government in 1970 had the effect of vesting in the General Synod the functions, authority, rights and privileges of the convocations, and of modifying the functions of the convocations when sitting separately¹ for their provinces². Each convocation may continue to meet separately for the purpose of considering matters concerning the Church of England and making provision by appropriate instruments for such matters in relation to its province or referring such matters to the General Synod³. It is, moreover, obligatory for the convocations to meet for the purpose of discharging certain specified functions⁴. The convocations retain the right (exercisable also by the General Synod) to present addresses to her Majesty, and the Lower House of a convocation retains the right to present gravamina⁵ to the Upper House⁶.

1 'Separately', in this context, appears to mean in separation from the General Synod, of which they are constituent parts.

2 Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 1 (1); Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon H1 para 1. This Canon is set out in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 1, and was added by Canon promulgated 7th October 1969. See also PARA 385 ante.

3 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon H1 para 2. The power to make such provision is not exercisable by canon, and, without prejudice to the Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 2 (1), Sch. 2, art. 7 (the constitution of the General Synod) (see PARA 453 note 3 post), it is to be exercised consistently with the exercise of functions by the General Synod and, in the event of any inconsistency, the provision made by the General Synod will prevail: Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon H1 para 2 proviso.

453. Particular functions of convocations.

Certain specific functions are, under various enactments, exercisable by the convocations. The powers exercisable by the convocations and their Houses under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 continue to be exercisable by them for their respective provinces¹. Before final approval by the General Synod of any provision touching doctrinal formulae or the services or ceremonies of the Church of England or the administration of the sacraments or sacred rites, the convocations are entitled to have those provisions referred to them for their approval². In addition, the convocations are required to meet to consider any other matter referred to them by the General Synod³.

454. The diocese.

A diocese is a legal division of a province and the circuit of a bishop's jurisdiction: it is divided into archdeaconries, each archdeaconry into deaneries¹, and each deanery into parishes².

At one time or another the boundaries of the dioceses have undergone many alterations, involving for example such changes as the suppression or union of old dioceses, the creation of new ones and the transfer of districts between dioceses. A number of such changes were made in the reign of Henry VIII, and there have been many others in modern times³. The foundation of new sees was formerly effected by special Acts of Parliament, but can now be dealt with by Measures passed by the General Synod of the Church of England, assented to by Parliament³. Alteration of diocesan boundaries can be effected by a special procedure under the Pastoral Measure 1968⁴. When portions of a diocese are transferred, jurisdiction over them goes to the bishop and ecclesiastical courts of the diocese to which they are transferred⁵.

Certain portions of dioceses, called peculiars, are, except for certain purposes, exempt from the bishop's jurisdiction⁶, and some places, for example the Temple Church, are extra-diocesan.

1 Rural deaneries are now usually called simply 'deaneries', in accordance with the nomenclature of the Synodical Government Measure 1969: see s 9 (2).

457. Alteration of diocesan boundaries.

The bishops of two or more dioceses may, by an instrument sealed by each of them, provide for constituting a committee, to be known as the joint pastoral committee, for the purpose of considering the boundaries of those dioceses and the pastoral arrangements in the adjacent areas¹. Any recommendations and draft proposals of the committee are to be submitted to the bishops of the dioceses concerned, who may approve them, with or without amendments, and submit them to the Church Commissioners with a view to the preparation of a pastoral scheme for submission to Her Majesty in Council for confirmation². Any such pastoral scheme may provide for altering the boundaries between any of the dioceses represented by the joint pastoral committee and for transferring any benefices, parishes or extraparochial places affected by the alteration from one diocese to another, but not so as to create or dissolve any diocese³. Both the functions of the committee and the powers exercisable in pursuance of its proposals will be subject to any limitations imposed by an instrument sealed by the bishops of the dioceses concerned⁴.

1 Pastoral Measure 1968, s 12 (1), (2). The committee must comprise an equal number of members (not exceeding five) from each diocese and a chairman appointed by the bishops jointly or, in default of their agreement, by the Church Commissioners; the members from any diocese must include the bishop, if he so desires, and must otherwise be nominated by the pastoral committee of the diocese from among its members: s 12 (2). The committee's procedure is to follow that prescribed for the pastoral committee of a diocese, with some modification: see s 12 (4), Sch. 1 paras 7-11: see PARA 521 post. Provision is made for the dissolution of the joint pastoral committee by instrument sealed by the bishops of the dioceses concerned: s 12 (6).

2 Ibid s 12 (5). The procedure will be similar to that prescribed in the case of proposals submitted by the pastoral committee of a diocese (see ss 3-9) with certain modifications (s. 12 (5)): see PARA 521 post.

3 Ibid s 36 (a). The scheme may also include provision, applicable to specified areas of the dioceses directly or indirectly affected by the alteration of boundaries, in regard to any of the matters for which provision could be made by a pastoral scheme applying to an area to one diocese, with such modifications as may be necessary or expedient: see s 36 (b).

4 Ibid ss 12 (3), 36 proviso. Any such limitations may, before the scheme is made by the commissioners, be revoked or varied by a subsequent instrument so sealed: ss 12 (3), 36 proviso.

457A. Dioceses Commission.

Provision is made by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 Pt II (ss 2-22) for the establishment of the Dioceses Commission (see s 2(1), Sch 1). In particular, Pt II provides for (1) the duty of the Commission to keep under review the provincial and diocesan structure of the Church of England (s 3); (2) the duty of the Commission to prepare and make reorganisation schemes (s 4, Sch 2); (3) the power of the bishop of a diocese to submit to the Commission proposals to be implemented by a reorganisation scheme relating to that diocese (s 5); (4) the preparation of draft schemes by the Commission (s 6); (5) approval of schemes by the diocesan synod (s 7); (6) confirmation and publication of schemes (s 8); (7) the commencement, variation and revocation of schemes (s 9); (8) the power of the General Synod to make temporary provision with respect to the membership of Convocations (s 10); (9) requests by bishops for the name of any diocesan or suffragan see to be changed (s 11); (10) the duty of a bishop of a diocese to keep under review the provision of episcopal ministry and oversight in his diocese (s 12 (not yet in force)); (11) the delegation by instrument of certain functions to a suffragan bishop or assistant bishop (s 13); (12) the discharge of certain functions of a bishop (s 14); (13) rights of collation (s 15); (14) the conferral of functions on diocesan bishops relating to reorganisation schemes (s 16); (15) the filling of vacancies in suffragan sees (s 17 (not yet in force)); (16) the creation of suffragan sees (s 18); (17) schemes with respect to the discharge of functions of diocesan bodies corporate (s 19); and (18) the power of the Commission with regard to the payment of the stipend and expenses of certain bishops where a new bishopric is founded and a new diocese created by a reorganisation scheme (s 21). As to the power of bishops to make an order authorising a group of persons to carry out a 'mission initiative' that would be likely, through fostering or developing a form of Christian community, to promote or further the mission of the Church or any aspect of it, see ss 47-51.

A. STATUS AND QUALIFICATIONS

458. Status of diocesan bishop.

The bishop of a diocese is a legally ordained minister appointed by the Crown, who, under the supremacy of the Crown and the supervision of the archbishop, is 'chief in superintendency'¹ in matters ecclesiastical within the diocese². He is also called 'Ordinary' in some enactments 'as having ordinary jurisdiction in causes ecclesiastical'³, 'immediate to the King'⁴.

The bishop is a corporation sole, with perpetual succession and a seal⁵. He may use a seal other than that of his office for letters of institution, as the seal is not material⁶.

2 For the meaning of 'bishop', see PARA 430 note 4 ante.

3 Godolphin's Repertorium Canonicum 23. In the civil law, from which the word is taken, 'ordinarius' signifies any judge authorised to take cognisance of causes proprio suo jure, and not by way of deputation or delegation. Lyndwood refers to 'Ordinaries of the place' as having limited jurisdiction, under the bishop, by law, privilege or custom: see Lyndwood 16, gloss on 'Ordinarii'.

459. Qualifications.

No man can be a bishop unless he is at least thirty years of age¹, and duly appointed and consecrated according to the statutory rules². He cannot be refused consecration on the ground that he was born out of lawful wedlock³. He must be a godly and well-learned man, and has to be vouched for as such by two bishops⁴. He must be persuaded that he is truly called to this ministration according to the will of our Lord Jesus Christ and the order of this realm; and that the holy scriptures contain sufficiently all doctrine required of necessity for eternal salvation through faith in Jesus Christ; and he must be ready to drive away all erroneous and strange doctrine contrary to God's Word⁵.

B. APPOINTMENT OF BISHOPS

460. Appointment of bishops by the Crown.

The Kings of England were reputedly the founders of all the bishoprics in England¹. Hence all bishops in England are, in all cases, appointed by the Crown. The Crown appoints diocesan bishops in two ways, either by royal letters missive and *cong  d' lire*² or, exceptionally, by royal letters patent³.

1 Co Litt 94a, 97; 1 Co Inst 134, 344.

2 For the procedure, see PARA 461 post.

3 Except in the case of the diocese of Sodor and Man (see PARA 462 note 2 post), an appointment by letters patent can only be made where the dean and chapter or cathedral chapter constituted for the cathedral church of a diocese by a scheme made under the Cathedrals Measure 1931 or the Cathedrals Measure 1963 has failed to elect within the stipulated time after receipt of the cong  d' lire and letter missive: see PARA 462 post. Formerly, in the case of the dioceses of St Albans, Truro, Liverpool, Newcastle, Southwell, Wakefield, Southwark, Birmingham, Sheffield, Chelmsford, St Edmundsbury and Ipswich, Bradford and Coventry, the various Acts under which the bishoprics were founded (see PARAS 455, 456 ante) provided that until the foundation of a dean and chapter the appointment of bishops should be by letters patent as if the dean and chapter had been in default in proceeding to election. In the case of the more recent foundations of Blackburn, Derby, Portsmouth, Guildford and Leicester provisional chapters were founded which were to act in the same way as a dean and chapter until a regular dean and chapter should be founded. All the foregoing provisions ceased to have effect after a scheme under the Cathedrals Measure 1931 had established or otherwise made provision for the constitution of a cathedral chapter in the cathedral church of the bishopric (s. 23 (1)) and upon an avoidance of such bishopric a licence under the Great Seal is granted to such cathedral chapter with a letter missive as provided by the Appointment of Bishops Act 1533, s 3, and the cathedral chapter possesses the right to proceed to an election as laid down by that Act: Cathedrals Measure 1931, s 23 (2). Schemes were made for all the dioceses mentioned in this note, providing for the setting up of a body as the cathedral chapter of each cathedral church and for the receipt by that chapter of the licence and letter missive on a vacancy in the bishopric. As to cathedral schemes, see PARA 612 et seq post. See also PARA 461 post.

460 Appointment of bishops by the Crown

The Vacancy in See Committees Regulation 1977, proclaimed as an Act of Synod on 15 February 1977, provides for the establishment for every diocese of a Vacancy in See Committee, comprising ex officio and elected members: s 1. The committee's function is to prepare a statement of the needs of the diocese for the information of the Crown Appointments Commission of the General Synod (which advises the Prime Minister as to the appointment of a new bishop), and to elect four of the members of the committee to be members of the commission in connection with the commission's functions in relation to the vacancy of the diocesan bishopric; the committee may also suggest names to the commission: s 4. The Prime Minister's Secretary for Appointments and the Archbishops' Secretary for Appointments must be invited to attend committee meetings: s 3.

461. Election of bishop by dean and chapter or cathedral chapter.

Upon the avoidance of a bishopric¹ the Crown grants to the dean and chapter or cathedral chapter² of the cathedral of the void see a licence under the Great Seal (termed a congé d'élire) to proceed to the election of a bishop, with a letter missive containing the name of the person to be elected³.

The person nominated must be elected and chosen by the dean and chapter or cathedral chapter to the void bishopric within twelve days after the delivery to them or it of the licence and letter missive and, after certification made under their or its common seal to the Crown, the person elected is to be reputed and taken by the name of lord elect of the bishopric⁴.

1 In ordinary cases avoidance takes place by resignation, death or translation. As to resignation and voluntary or compulsory retirement, see PARA 485 et seq post, as to the power of deprivation, see PARAS 1373, 1374 post; and as to translation, see PARA 471 post. An ordinary vacancy ought to be certified to the Crown in Chancery by the dean and chapter, who pray leave of the Queen to make election: Godolphin's Repertorium Canonum 29; Evans and Kiffins v Askwith (1672) W Jo 158 at 160. For a form, see R v Archbishop of Canterbury (1848) Jebb's Report 1 at 3. 4 Appointment of Bishops Act 1533, ss 3, 4

In the case of an election by a dean and chapter the ceremonies would appear to be (1) a citatory letter under the chapter seal convening a general chapter; (2) meeting of the general chapter, and the delivery to the dean and reading of the congé d'élire and letters missive by the chapter clerk; (3) return of the citation by mandatory, calling over of the names, and assumption of directorship of the election by the dean, and pronouncement of absent members of the chapter as contumacious; (4) pronouncement of members lawfully present a full chapter; (5) appointment of a notary (usually the chapter clerk) and two witnesses; (6) taking of votes, beginning with the junior member; (7) on election, which is usually unanimous (whether a majority is sufficient seems doubtful: see R v Archbishop of Canterbury (1848) Jebb's Report 1 at 11, 12), decree of three certificates under the chapter seal (one to the Crown, one to the archbishop of the diocese, and one to the bishop elect) praying acceptance; (8) decree of a proxy to three notaries public to deliver the certificates; (9) publication and declaration of the election to the congregation: see R v Archbishop of Canterbury supra at 1-19. For forms, see R v Archbishop of Canterbury supra.

In the case of an election by a cathedral chapter the procedure will be similar, with necessary modifications.

The liabilities to the penalties of praemunire, to which (under the Appointment of Bishops Act 1533, s 6 (repealed)) the dean and chapter were formerly exposed if they failed to elect within the stipulated time, have been abolished: Criminal Law Act 1967, s 13, Sch. 4, Part 1.

If the dean and chapter or cathedral chapter defer the election above twelve days after the delivery to them of the licence and letter missive¹, the Crown may, by letters patent under the Great Seal, nominate and present such person as it thinks able and convenient for the vacant office and dignity². This nomination and presentment must be made to the archbishop of the province where the see is void or, if the archbishopric is void, to such archbishop or metropolitan within the realm or any of the Queen's dominions as the Crown thinks fit³.

After the election and certification of the new bishop by the dean and chapter or cathedral chapter, and the taking of such oath of fealty as may be appointed¹, the Crown must, by letters patent under the Great Seal, signify the election to the archbishop of the appropriate province, requiring and commanding him to confirm the election and to invest and consecrate the person elected².

See, however, s 5, where it is mentioned again in conjunction with suing for the temporalities (as to which see PARAS 468, 488 post). In practice it seems that the oath is taken on the occasion of doing homage (see PARA 469 post), which is usually after consecration.

464. Confirmation of election of bishop.

After the election of the new bishop has been signified by the Crown to the archbishop, the archbishop subscribes his fiat confirmatio, giving commission, under his seal, to his vicar-general to perform all the acts necessary to perfect the confirmation¹. The vicar-general, in the archbishop's name, issues a citation, summoning all opposers of the election to appear at a certain time and place to offer their objections, if any². At the time and place appointed the proctor for the dean and chapter or cathedral chapter exhibits the royal assent and the archbishop's commission to the vicar-general, who accepts them; the proctor exhibits the proxy from the dean and chapter or cathedral chapter, presents the elected bishop, returns the citation, and desires that the opposers may be thrice publicly called³, which done, and their contumacy accused, he desires that, in poenam contumaciae, the business may proceed, which is ordered in writing by the vicar-general. Then the proctor presents a summary petition, stating the whole process of election and assent, and desires that a time may be assigned him to prove it, which the vicar-general admits and decrees⁴.

After this the proctor again exhibits the royal assent, the elected bishop's assent and the certificate to the archbishop, desiring a time to be assigned for final sentence, which the vicar-general decrees. The proctor again has all opposers thrice publicly called; and, none appearing or opposing, they are pronounced contumacious, and a decree is made to proceed to sentence by a schedule read and subscribed by the vicar-general. The bishop then takes the oaths of allegiance⁵ and of obedience to the archbishop⁶ and makes the declarations of assent⁷ and against simony⁸, whereupon the vicar-general reads and subscribes the sentence⁹.

6 See ibid Canon C14 para 1. The oath must be taken in the form and manner prescribed in and by the Ordinal: Canon C14 para 1. According to the ancient law and usage of the Church and realm of England the bishop of each diocese owes due allegiance to the archbishop of the province as his metropolitan: Canon C1 para 3.

465. Fitness of bishop elect.

There is no mention in the Appointment of Bishops Act 1533 of any examination or inquiry by the archbishop, nor does the Act on the face of it in terms contemplate or suggest directly or indirectly that the archbishop can in any way question the fitness of the person nominated by the Crown, unless such power is involved in the use of the word 'confirm'¹. Hence the archbishop is merely a ministerial agent, and has no general right of questioning the fitness of the Crown's nominee². Further, the archbishop is not compellable by mandamus to consider objections in order to inform his mind as to the fitness of the bishop elect³.

466. Objections to confirmation of bishop.

No objection can be taken to a bishop elect, in answer to the triple preconisation in the confirmation ceremony¹, on the ground of heresy or unsoundness of doctrine, and no mandamus will lie to compel the archbishop to hear and determine objections of that nature². Objections are only allowed on two points, namely that the election had been defective in some matter of form, or that the person presented for confirmation is not the person on whom the Crown's choice had fallen. Such objections, if well founded, entitle the archbishop to rectify any informality in the form of the election, under the peculiar power which he has to supply the defects, whatever they may be, in the election³. If any person has any other objection to make, or thinks the Crown's choice erroneous, it is his duty to apply at an earlier stage than confirmation. He should petition Her Majesty not to issue her mandate for the confirmation⁴. The archbishop has jurisdiction to issue a citation requiring objections to be delivered before the confirmation⁵, but it is doubtful whether the strict form and order of the proceedings, which have been in use since 1534, can be departed from⁶.

After the confirmation of the elected bishop in obedience to the Crown's mandate he is consecrated by the archbishop with the assistance of two other bishops¹, although consecration is not required if the bishop elect is already in episcopal orders². In the case of refusal or failure on the part of the dean and chapter or cathedral chapter to elect, the archbishop to whom the nomination and presentment³ by the Crown comes must invest and consecrate the person nominated and presented⁴. The consecration must be in the statutory form, otherwise it is apprehended that it is invalid⁵; and it must be performed on some Sunday or holy day, unless for weighty and urgent reasons some other day be appointed⁶.

468. Installation of bishop.

Having been elected, confirmed¹ and consecrated, and having sued the temporalities of the see out of the Queen's hands in the customary manner, the new bishop is installed in the bishopric². Pursuant to the archbishop's mandate³ the bishop is introduced into the cathedral church in the presence of a public notary, and is placed in the episcopal seat with the customary formula⁴. After the divine service proper for the occasion the bishop is conducted into the chapter house where he receives the customary acknowledgments of canonical obedience, and the public notary records the whole matter in an instrument, to remain as authority to posterity⁵.

On installation the bishop is entitled to restitution out of the Queen's hands of all the possessions and profits, spiritual and temporal, belonging to the bishopric, and must be obeyed in and may do and execute all such things touching his office as are customary and not contrary to the Crown's prerogative and the laws and customs of the realm⁶.

1 In the case of appointment by letters patent, he is nominated and presented, not confirmed: see PARA 462 ante.

2 Appointment of Bishops Act 1533, s 5. The ceremony of installation is now commonly described as 'enthronement' (cf. para 429 note 5 ante). As to suing for the temporalities, see PARA 488 post.

C. POWERS, DUTIES AND PRIVILEGES OF BISHOPS

472. Bishop's powers and duties.

The bishop is the chief pastor of all who are within his diocese, both clergy and laity, and their father in God; it appertains to his office to teach and to uphold sound and wholesome doctrine, and to banish and drive away all erroneous and strange opinions; and, himself an example of righteous and godly living, it is his duty to set forward and maintain quietness, love and peace among all men¹.

The bishop has within his diocese jurisdiction as Ordinary², except in places and over persons exempt by law or custom³. This jurisdiction is exercised by the bishop himself, or by a vicar-general, official or other commissary to whom the bishop has committed authority in that behalf⁴. The bishop is enjoined to correct and punish all such as be unquiet, disobedient or criminous within his diocese, according to such authority as he has by God's Word and is committed to him by the laws and ordinances of the realm⁵.

Within his diocese the bishop is the principal minister, and to him belongs the right, save in places and over persons exempt by law or custom, of celebrating the rites of ordination⁶ and confirmation⁷; of conducting, ordering, controlling and authorising all services in churches, chapels, churchyards and consecrated burial grounds⁸; of granting a faculty or licence for alterations, additions, removals or repairs to the walls, fabric, ornaments or furniture of such places⁹; of consecrating new churches, churchyards and burial grounds¹⁰; of instituting to all vacant benefices, whether of his own collation or of the presentation of others¹¹; of admitting by licence to all other vacant ecclesiastical offices¹²; of holding visitations at times limited by law or custom¹³; and of being president and one of the three authorities of the diocesan synod¹⁴. In addition, many statutes and Measures require action or consent on the part of the bishop of the diocese concerned¹⁵. All the diocesan bishops of the provinces of Canterbury and York are Church Commissioners¹⁶.

It is the bishop's duty to consult with the diocesan synod on matters of general concern and importance to the diocese¹⁷.

The bishop's official principal (otherwise known as the chancellor) is the judge of the consistory court of the diocese, and acts as an independent judge; in some dioceses the right is reserved to the bishop to adjudicate in person, but such a reservation is probably effective in relation to faculty proceedings only: see PARA 1278 post.

5 Ibid Canon C18 para 7. See however paras 490, 491 post. The bishop's disciplinary powers are limited, in particular, by the provisions of the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963: see note 4 supra, and PARA 1350 et seq post. Under that Measure the clergy alone are subject to the criminal jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts; and in proceedings against clergymen charged with offences the bishop has certain extra-judicial functions and powers, including a power to pronounce sentence by consent: s 31.

473. Appointment of deputy.

In respect of certain specified functions a diocesan bishop may, if he considers that he will not be able to carry out those functions by reason of illness or absence from his diocese, appoint by an instrument under his hand a suffragan or assistant bishop or an archdeacon of the diocese to perform the functions on his behalf for a period specified in the instrument or for the period of his illness or absence¹.

The functions in respect of which this power of appointment may be exercised are functions of the bishop of a diocese in relation to any of the following matters: (1) any matters arising under the Pastoral Measure 1968²; (2) purchases, sales and exchanges of parsonage houses³, loans for the erection or purchase of parsonage houses⁴, and conveyancing transactions relating to parsonage houses⁵; (3) sales and leases of glebe⁶ and conveyancing transactions relating to glebe⁷; (4) conveyances under the New Parishes Measure 1943⁸; (5) transfers of patronage rights to bishops⁹; (6) extinguishment of charges on benefices¹⁰; (7) any functions of the bishop under the Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972¹¹.

Where any such function requires the application of the bishop's seal to a document, the person appointed to perform the function on his behalf must execute the document as a deed¹².

473 Appointment of deputy

TEXT AND NOTES--Replaced by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1983 s 8 (repealed by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 Sch 7).

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(7) DIOCESES/(ii) Diocesan Bishops/C. POWERS, DUTIES AND PRIVILEGES OF BISHOPS/474. Performance of bishop's functions by overseas bishop.

474. Performance of bishop's functions by overseas bishop.

An overseas bishop¹ or a bishop consecrated in a church not in communion with the Church of England² whose orders are recognised and accepted by the Church of England² may, on the request and by the commission in writing of the bishop of a diocese in the province of Canterbury or York, and with the consent and licence in writing of the archbishop of the province, ordain persons³ and perform other episcopal functions in that diocese⁴.

1 For the meaning of 'overseas bishop', see PARA 317 note 1 ante.

2 If any question arises whether, for this purpose, a church is in communion with the Church of England or whether the orders of any church are recognised and accepted by the Church of England, it is to be determined by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, whose decision will be conclusive: Overseas and other Clergy (Ministry and Ordination) Measure 1967, s 6 (2).

3 A person so ordained priest or deacon is deemed, for the purpose of the Overseas and Other Clergy (Ministry and Ordination) Measure 1967, to have been ordained by the bishop making the request and issuing the commission: s 4 (2). A person so ordained must make the declaration of assent (see PARA 660 post): Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C15 para 5 (substituted by Amending Canon No. 4).

4 Overseas and Other Clergy (Ministry and Ordination) Measure 1967, s 4 (1). If an overseas bishop performs any episcopal functions in an English diocese otherwise than in accordance with these provisions, he is guilty of an offence against the laws ecclesiastical for which proceedings may be taken under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963: Overseas and Other Clergy (Ministry and Ordination) Measure 1967, s 4 (3).

475. Ordination.

Only a bishop can ordain priests or deacons¹. The bishop of a diocese is enjoined to be faithful in admitting persons into holy orders, and must provide, as much as in him lies, that in every place within his diocese there are sufficient priests to minister the Word and sacraments to the people there². Subject to that obligation he has an absolute discretion (except as to certain statutory qualifications of the candidate³) and need not hold an ordination at all if there are sufficient clergy without so doing⁴.

476. Residence within the diocese.

The bishop must reside within his own diocese; but, by an ancient rule, he has the right, when resident in any house in London during his attendance at Parliament, or at court, or for the purpose of performing any other duties of his office, to be taken and accounted as resident within his own diocese¹.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(7) DIOCESES/(ii) Diocesan Bishops/C. POWERS, DUTIES AND PRIVILEGES OF BISHOPS/477. Vestures and other ornaments.

477. Vestures and other ornaments.

The provisions concerning the ornaments to be used by ministers at the times of their ministrations¹ are, in general, applicable to archbishops and bishops. Certain vestures are, however, regarded as distinctively episcopal: these include the rochet, the chimere and the mitre².

The use of the cope and mitre in time of service, and of the episcopal ring and pectoral cross at all times, has been revived³.

The presentation to the newly-made bishop of a pastoral staff was abolished in 1552 and was not restored in 1662⁴, but it is now in general use without, it seems, any suggestion of illegality⁵.

1 See PARA 970 et seq post.

2 By the Book of Common Prayer, Form of Ordaining or Consecrating of an Archbishop or Bishop the elected bishop is directed (after the sermon) to be 'vested with his Rochet' and subsequently (after making his promises) to 'put on the rest of the Episcopal habit'. The latter rubrical direction, by ancient and continuous post-Reformation custom, has for over 300 years been taken to mean the chimere. Ancient and continuous custom has every presumption in its favour, although it cannot prevail against positive law: see Ridsdale v Clifton (1877) 2 PD 276 at 331, PC. The rochet (sometimes called the 'episcopal surplice') and the chimere (a kind of sleeveless coat) are thus described by Dean Durel (Vindiciae (1669) 125): 'The dress of the bishops is different from that which the Roman bishops use...for having laid aside the gown (toga) which is their usual outer dress, they put on a loose fitting tunic, with sleeves of fine linen (lino byssino), which falls a little below the knees, and over it they put on another garment entirely made of black silk (holosericam), which is without sleeves and open in front so that the lawn sleeves and the lawn tunic itself may be seen in front'. For illustrations of the early post-Reformation use of the chimere, see Tomlinson on the Prayer Book 121, and cf. at 149, 164.

3 These ornaments are not mentioned in the rubrics of the First Prayer Book of Edward VI, nor in the Ordinal of 1550, nor in any subsequent rubric. Not being mentioned in the First Prayer Book, they were not, in the view of the Privy Council, included among lawful church ornaments under the 'Ornaments Rubric': see Liddell v Westerton (1856) 5 WR 470, PC; Martin v Mackonochie (1868) LR 2 PC 365; Hebbert v Purchas (1871) LR 3 PC 605; Ridsdale v Clifton (1877) 2 PD 276, PC, in which case, when considering the question of the vestments to be worn by the parochial clergy, the Privy Council stated that it did not express any opinion as to the vestures proper to be worn by bishops, as to which separate considerations might arise (see at 307). The question of wearing the cope (a sleeveless hooded cape) was not before the court in Hebbert v Purchas supra, or Ridsdale v Clifton supra, but in the latter case it is said obiter that the use of the cope was legal up to 1662 in cathedral and collegiate churches, when administering the communion on certain occasions (see Advertisements of 1565, and Canons Ecclesiastical (1603) 24). Copes have by ancient and continuous custom been worn by bishops and other clergy on state occasions, eg at coronations, and are now largely used at other services. Their use 'on any appropriate occasion' has been expressly authorised by the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical: see Canon B8 para 3. Further as to the vestments worn by bishops, see the evidence given before the Royal Commission on Ecclesiastical Discipline 1906 (Cds. 3069, 3070, 3071), and the reports of committees of the Upper Houses of the Convocations of Canterbury and York presented 5th February 1908. As to mitres, see also Hierurgia Anglicana, Part 1, 223 et seq. As to the Ornaments Rubric, see further PARA 960 post.

4 Cf. rubrics in the statutory Ordinals of 1550, 1552 and 1662; and see Gib Cod 118. The legal position of the pastoral staff is discussed in the reports of Committees of the Upper Houses of the Convocations of Canterbury and York presented 5th February 1908, where the revival of its use is justified by reference to the rubric for the forms of consecrating an archbishop or bishop in the Ordinal of 1500, which expressly prescribed its use in that ceremony.

478. Privilege of bishop's charge.

The question whether a bishop's charge to his clergy is absolutely privileged in the same way as the charge of a judge to a jury, or a speech in Parliament¹, has not been decided²; but there appears to be no absolute privilege if the bishop sends a report of his charge to the press³.

It does not necessarily follow, however, that the publication of his charge by a bishop in a local newspaper is equally privileged: Laughton v Bishop of Sodor and Man supra at 504.

Bishops have very considerable patronage. They have in their gift a large number of benefices¹. They appoint to chancellorships², archdeaconries³, deaneries⁴, honorary canonries⁵, and most of the canonries⁶.

The bishop of the diocese has important duties in relation to the transfer of rights of patronage⁷ and the exercise of rights of presentation⁸, and is chairman of the diocesan board of patronage⁹.

481. Regulation of public worship.

The bishop has a general right, save in respect of places and persons exempt by law or custom, of ordering, controlling and authorising all services in churches, chapels, churchyards and consecrated burial grounds within his diocese¹. In exercising this right he must act in conformity with the law relating to public worship. Except to the extent permitted by the relevant enactments, the bishop has no power to dispense with adherence to the prescribed forms of service or with the obligatory performance of the services required by law². Equally he has no power to limit the discretion of an incumbent in choosing between alternative forms of service allowed by law³. A clergyman is, however, bound by the oath of canonical obedience to obey all such commands as the bishop by law is authorised to impose⁴.

1 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C18 para 4. See also the Book of Common Prayer, Concerning the Service of the Church, which recognises a discretion on the part of the bishop to 'take order for the quieting and appeasing' of diversity and resolving of doubts, including the right to refer a question, if necessary, for decision by the archbishop. As to the jus liturgicum, see PARA 934 note 10 post.

D. STIPENDS AND PENSIONS

482. Schemes to secure income.

In the case of any see, the Church Commissioners¹, after consultation with the bishop and the diocesan board of finance, may, with Her Majesty's consent, prepare and submit to Her Majesty in Council for confirmation a scheme for vesting in the commissioners all endowments² and other property³ belonging to or held in trust for the see or the bishop and for securing to the bishop by way of a charge on their general fund such reduced stipend as the commissioners deem appropriate⁴.

The Order in Council confirming the scheme must be published in the London Gazette and, upon publication, the scheme comes into operation and has the force of law⁵, whereupon so much of any Act of Parliament, Measure, Order in Council, trust deed or other instrument as is inconsistent with any provision of the scheme ceases to have effect in relation to the see affected⁶. A scheme may be amended at any time by a subsequent scheme prepared, submitted and confirmed in the same manner but the amending scheme must be approved by the Standing Committee of the General Synod before it is submitted for confirmation⁷.

The endowments and other property to be vested in the commissioners under the scheme must be listed in a schedule to it and, upon the scheme coming into operation, vest in the commissioners without any conveyance or other assurance, freed and discharged from all previously existing trusts in favour of the see or the bishop⁸. In respect of any see where a scheme is in force the commissioners have a discretion to pay the whole or any part of the stipend of any suffragan bishop or any chaplain to the bishop⁹, and also such office expenses (including salaries and provision for the superannuation of secretaries and clerks) as they consider it necessary for the bishop to incur¹⁰.

1 The Church Commissioners act as successors to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners: see PARA 362 ante.

2 'Endowments' includes any commutation or other payment charged on the commissioners' general fund and any money in their hands which represents the proceeds of a sale of land or of a house of residence or a fund for repair of a house of residence: Episcopal Endowments and Stipends Measure 1943, s 8 (1).

Where by any scheme¹ a house of residence² has become vested in the Church Commissioners they may, at any time while it remains so vested, make any alterations they deem necessary and let it to the bishop³ and, if at any time they are of opinion that it is too large, or is not and cannot be made convenient, or is not required for occupation by the bishop, they may (1) transfer it by agreement to the diocesan authority⁴ for use for purposes connected with its diocese⁵; (2) convert it or any part of it for use for such other purposes as, having regard to any historical or other associations attaching to it, they may from time to time deem proper⁶; (3) sell, let or otherwise dispose of it⁷; or (4) wholly or partly demolish it⁸.

Where a house of residence has been so disposed of, converted or demolished the commissioners may provide another house and let it to the bishop, and, where part only has been demolished or converted for other use, they may alter or adapt and let the remainder of it to the bishop⁹. Any house or part of a house let to the bishop under these provisions is an episcopal house of residence of the see¹⁰. Where the commissioners consider that the exercise of any of the foregoing powers may prejudicially affect any building of archaeological, historic or artistic interest, they must consult with the Ancient Monuments Board for England¹¹ before exercising that power¹².

484. Pension rights.

A diocesan bishop¹ who retires after performing a qualifying period of pensionable service² is entitled to receive a pension from the Church Commissioners for the remainder of his life³. For this purpose the standard retiring age is seventy years⁴ and the minimum period of pensionable service to qualify for a pension at the full rate is forty years⁵. On that basis, the annual rate of pension is £1,750 for the bishops of London, Durham and Winchester, and £1,250 for other diocesan bishops⁵. If the period actually served is less than forty years, the pension is proportionately reduced⁶. If the bishop retires under the retiring age by reason of infirmity, his pension is reduced by 1 per cent for each year by which his age is less than the retiring age⁷. If he retires between the age of sixty-five and seventy otherwise than on the ground of infirmity his pension is reduced by 5 per cent for each year by which his age is less than the retiring age⁸.

Special provision is made for the case of a bishop who resigns because a change of administration is desirable; if he has not attained the retiring age he is entitled to a pension of an amount equal to three-quarters of the pension to which he would have been entitled if he had retired by reason of infirmity⁹.

Provisions as to pensions for bishops' widows and dependants are similar to those for the widows and dependants of other clergy¹⁰.

TEXT AND NOTE 4--1951 Measure replaced: Bishops (Retirement) Measure 1986.

Provision as to voluntary resignation is made as follows: where a person holding the office of diocesan bishop or suffragan bishop wishes to resign his office he must, after consultation with the archbishop, tender his resignation to the archbishop, in a written instrument in the prescribed form: s 1(1). 'Prescribed' means prescribed by the Vicars-General of the provinces of Canterbury and York acting jointly: s 10(1). If the archbishop decides to accept the resignation, he must, within 28 days of receiving the instrument, by indorsement upon the instrument in the prescribed form declare the bishopric vacant as from a date specified in the indorsement, which subject to the provisions of the Ecclesiastical Offices (Age Limit) Measure 1975 ss 1(3), 3, be the date proposed by the bishop in the instrument or such later date as may be agreed by the archbishop and bishop concerned; the instrument must be filed in the provincial registry: 1986 Measure s 1(2).

Where a bishopric is declared vacant under 1986 Measure, any other preferment held by the bishop must also be vacated unless the archbishop declares that it shall not be vacated: s 8(1). 'Preferment' includes an archbishopric, a bishopric, archdeaconry, deanery or office in a cathedral or collegiate church, and a benefice, and every curacy, lectureship, readership, chaplaincy, office or place which require the discharge of any spiritual duty: s 10(1).

486. Retirement of bishop for incapacity.

If in the opinion of the archbishop of the province a bishop is incapacitated by physical or mental disability from the due performance of his episcopal duties, the bishop may, and if so requested by the archbishop with the concurrence of three bishops selected by him from a panel of bishops appointed by the Upper House of the convocation of the province must, tender the resignation of his bishopric to the archbishop¹. The bishop is entitled to notice² of the intention to make the request and may demand, within fifteen days after receiving the notice or within such extended time as the archbishop allows, a medical examination³.

If the bishop resigns, the bishopric must be declared vacant by the archbishop⁴, and if the bishop refuses or fails within two months of a request to comply with it, or is by reason of infirmity prevented from complying, the archbishop may declare the bishopric vacant⁵. In neither case is the declaration effective unless and until it is confirmed by Her Majesty in Council⁶. If the declaration is confirmed the vacancy may be filled in the same manner as if the bishop were dead and, unless the archbishop otherwise directs, any other preferment held by the bishop in addition to his bishopric must also be vacated⁷.

1 Bishops (Retirement) Measure 1951, ss 1 (1), 16 (1). Not less than six months before the date on which a person holding the office of diocesan bishop or suffragan bishop is required to vacate his office in accordance with the above age limit, the archbishop must by written instrument in the prescribed form declare the bishopric vacant as from that date or, if his continuance in office beyond that date is authorised under the 1975 Measure s 3(1), from the later date so authorised: Bishops (Retirement) Measure 1986 s 2(1). For the meaning of 'prescribed' see infra. Where, after the making of such an instrument, in the case of an instrument relating to a diocesan bishop, the archbishop authorises his continuance in office under the 1975 Measure s 3(1), or in the case of an instrument relating to a suffragan bishop, the diocesan bishop authorises his continuance in office under s 3 the archbishop may by written instrument in the prescribed form substitute for the date of vacancy under the 1986 Measure s 2(1) the date of the expiration of the period for which continuance in office is authorised: s 2(2). Any instrument made under these provisions must be filed in the provincial registry: s 2(3). 'Archbishop' in relation to any diocesan bishop means the archbishop of the province in which his diocese is situated and in relation to any suffragan bishop means the archbishop of the province in which the diocese of the bishop to whom he is suffragan is situated: s 10(1).

The concurrence of two senior diocesan bishops of the province to the archbishop's request is required: s 3(1). Resignation must be tendered in a written instrument in the prescribed form, which means a form prescribed by the Vicars-General of the provinces of Canterbury and York acting jointly: ss 3(1), 10(1).

Where a bishopric is declared vacant under s 3 the bishop is treated for the purposes of the Church of England Pensions Regulations 1988, SI 1988/2256, reg 4 (see PARA 742) as having retired on the ground of infirmity on the date on which the bishopric is declared vacant: 1986 Measure s 7. Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(7) DIOCESES/(ii) Diocesan Bishops/E. RETIREMENT AND VACANCIES/488. Guardianship of the temporalities.

488. Guardianship of the temporalities.

During the vacancy of a bishopric the Queen is the guardian and custodian of the temporalities¹. The temporalities are those things which the bishops have by livery from the Queen, such as castles, manors, land, tenements, parsonages, tithes and all other certainties for which the Queen is responsible during the vacancy². They include rights of presentation to livings of which the bishop in right of his see is patron, and even if the Crown restores the temporalities to the new bishop without filling an incumbency which is vacant during the time when the Crown holds the temporalities, the right to fill it remains with the Crown³.

The temporalities remain in the Queen's hands until the new bishop sues for them out of her hands by a writ de restitutione temporalium⁴. He cannot do this as of right until he has been consecrated⁴, or, if already a bishop, confirmed; the Queen by her letters patent may, however, grant them to him after confirmation and before consecration⁴. The new bishop, as soon as he is consecrated and confirmed, usually receives the restitution of his temporalities entire and untouched from the Queen. Thereupon he has a fee simple in his bishopric, and may maintain an action for the profits⁵.

The temporalities of all archbishoprics and bishoprics (except rights of patronage) are now vested in the Church Commissioners⁶.

489. Guardianship of the spiritualities.

Whenever a bishopric is vacant the guardianship of the spiritualities belongs to the dean and chapter of the cathedral church of the diocese unless by prescription or composition it belongs to the archbishop of the province acting by and through such person or persons as he may nominate according to the prescription or composition¹. In respect of most dioceses it seems that the guardianship has by long usage been exercised by the archbishop².

The guardian or guardians of the spiritualities exercise the spiritual jurisdiction of the diocese during the vacancy, including the giving of institution to benefices, the granting of licences for the solemnisation of matrimony without the publication of banns and the granting of commissions for ordination *sede vacante*³, but their powers do not extend to such matters as are excluded from their jurisdiction by the laws of the realm, or to the presentation to benefices sede vacante of which the bishop is patron, which presentation belongs to the Crown by the royal prerogative³.

The functions of a diocesan bishop under the Church Representation Rules are, during a vacancy in the see, exercisable by such person in episcopal orders as the archbishop of the province may appoint⁴.

After election and confirmation, or appointment by letters patent, the new bishop becomes entitled to exercise all the spiritual jurisdiction exercised during the vacancy by the guardian, whose power then ceases⁵.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(7) DIOCESES/(ii) Diocesan Bishops/F. EPISCOPAL VISITATION/490.
Meaning and objects of visitation.

F. EPISCOPAL VISITATION

490. Meaning and objects of visitation.

Visitation, in the common acceptance of the term, denotes the act of the bishop or of some other Ordinary going his circuit throughout his diocese or district with a full power of inquiring into such matters as relate to the government and discipline of the church.

The principal object of visitation is that the bishop, archdeacon or other person assigned to visit may get some good knowledge of the state, sufficiency and ability of the clergy and other person whom he is to visit¹.

Visitation implies, however, some coercive authority²; the bishop has the right to visit his diocese in a more solemn manner at times and places limited by law or custom³, and on his visitation to perform all such acts as by law or custom are assigned to his charge in that behalf for the edifying and well-governing of Christ's flock, that means may be taken thereby for the supply of such things as are lacking and the correction of such things as are amiss⁴. During the time of the visitation the jurisdiction of all inferior Ordinaries is suspended, save in places which by law or custom are exempt⁵.

The Roman canon law concerning visitors has not, as a whole, been incorporated into the common law, and consequently has no binding effect except insofar as it has been adopted by custom or legislation⁶.

Even within the accepted body of English ecclesiastical law many of the reported cases are of doubtful relevance at the present day, when a visitation no longer has the character, or even the semblance, of court proceedings⁷.

1 See the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C18 para 4. As to archiepiscopal visitations, see PARA 431 ante; as to archidiaconal visitations, see PARA 500 post.

2 Ayl Par 514.

3 This provision, insofar as it concerns the times of visitation, supersedes the former requirement (contained in the Canons Ecclesiastical (1603) 60 (repealed)) that an episcopal visitation should normally be held every third year.

4 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon G5 para 1.

5 Ibid Canon G5 para 2. It has been said that the bishop brings with him not only the means of visiting the churches and directing ecclesiastical affairs but the power of acting judicially by his official principal ie the chancellor of the diocese (R v Thorogood (1840) 3 Per & Dav 629 at 640, per Lord Denman); but the exercise of such power is now governed by the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 (see PARA 491 post; and see also PARA 1275 et seq post). An episcopal visitation is sometimes conducted by the chancellor, acting on behalf of the bishop.

6 Philips v Bury (1694) 1 Ld Raym 5 at 7; 1 Bl Com (14th Edn) 79, 80. As to visitation generally, see CHARITIES vol 8 (2010) PARA 510 et seq, and CORPORATIONS vol 9(2) (2006 Reissue) PARA 1186.

7 See PARA 491 post. The effect of modern changes is thus described in the Report of the Archbishop's Commission on Ecclesiastical Courts (SPCK 1954) 51: 'A bishop's relationship with both his clergy and his laity today is predominantly a pastoral one. It should be recognised that a great change in the general conception of this relationship has taken place not only since the middle ages but even during the past century. The bishop is today first and foremost a pastor rather than a judge'.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(7) DIOCESES/(ii) Diocesan Bishops/F. EPISCOPAL VISITATION/491. Conduct and scope of visitation.

491. Conduct and scope of visitation.

Every spiritual person is visitable by the Ordinary. This includes a dean and chapter¹ and the inferior clergy, and the Ordinary may also visit spiritual hospitals². Laymen (except churchwardens and perhaps sidesmen) are not visitable³.

When the bishop summons his visitation he must deliver or cause to be delivered to the minister and churchwardens of every parish such articles of inquiry as he requires them to ground their presentments upon⁴, together with the form of declaration which must be made immediately before any such presentment⁵. In modern practice the making of presentments, in the sense in which the word was formerly understood⁶, is uncommon and would probably be confined to complaints by the churchwardens against the incumbent⁷.

Although the Ordinary's authority over the clergy of his diocese formerly included a summary power of correction, his power of correcting them can now be exercised only by proceedings in the ecclesiastical courts. Private admonition may in some cases be sufficient, but where it is necessary to take proceedings they must be by articles against a clergyman when acting contrary to his duty as a minister of the Church of England and as a beneficed clergyman⁸, or otherwise by the legal procedure for the time being in force⁹.

Fees are no longer payable at a visitation¹⁰.

Provision is required to be made in the constitution and statutes of each cathedral respecting the bishop's functions as visitor: see PARA 617 post. In a diocesan visitation it was usual in the past for the bishop to visit first his cathedral church and afterwards the diocese (see Gib Cod 957), but it seems doubtful whether this practice is now generally observed.

Procurations were in their origin refreshments provided for the bishop or archdeacon by the incumbents of outlying parishes, when visited. They were afterwards commuted into fixed money payments, charged upon the benefice: see Saunderson v Clagget (1721) 1 P Wms 657; Archdeacon of Exeter v Green [1913] P 21. (iii) Suffragan Bishops

493. Status and appointment of suffragan bishops.

Strictly speaking all the bishops of a province are suffragans or helpers to the archbishop, but the term 'suffragan' is now only applied to bishops who assist the diocesan bishop.

When a diocesan bishop desires to have a suffragan, he petitions the Queen to appoint one of two spiritual persons named by him whereupon Her Majesty has power to give to one of those two persons the title of bishop suffragan of such see as she may think convenient¹. The Queen then sends her letters patent to the archbishop of the province requiring him to consecrate that person within three months, unless he is already a bishop². Two bishops or suffragans must assist at the consecration³.

Every person who is to be consecrated or translated to a suffragan bishopric must first take and swear the oath of allegiance⁴, the oath of due obedience to the archbishop and to the metropolitan church of the province⁵, and must make and subscribe the declaration against simony⁶, and on the occasion of his consecration and investment by the archbishop must make the declaration of assent⁷.

It is the duty of a suffragan bishop to endeavour faithfully to execute such things pertaining to the episcopal office as are commissioned to him by the diocesan bishop to whom he is suffragan¹. He is empowered to use, have or execute only such jurisdiction or episcopal power or authority in any diocese as are licensed or limited to him by the bishop of that diocese².

A suffragan bishop must reside within the diocese of the bishop to whom he is suffragan unless he has a licence from that bishop to reside elsewhere³. He is, by express statutory provision, permitted to hold two benefices with cure⁴. He is not entitled to sit in the House of Lords; but he may be elected to the Upper House of the convocation of the province within which he is a suffragan bishop⁵. His style and title is 'bishop suffragan of the same see whereunto he shall be named'⁶. He is an ex officio member of the diocesan synod⁷ and of the pastoral committee⁸ in his diocese. The diocesan bishop may nominate any suffragan or assistant bishop of the diocese to act in his place as a member and as chairman of the diocesan board of patronage⁹.

(iv) Archdeacons

496. The office of archdeacon.

An archdeacon is an ordained minister, having statutory jurisdiction under the Crown and next after the bishop over a portion of a diocese, called an archdeaconry, in matters ecclesiastical¹. Originally the office was, as the name ('chief deacon') implies, limited to deacons², but now a clergyman to hold it must not only be a priest, but must have been for six years complete in priest's orders³. Thus, he must be thirty years of age at least⁴.

There seems to be a difference of opinion as to whether a dean or archdeacon is of the higher rank⁵. It seems clear that an archdeacon is inferior in rank to the chancellor of the diocese. The precedence is given to the latter by all writers because the chancellor represents the person of the bishop, and has the greater jurisdiction⁶.

An archdeacon is by custom styled 'the Venerable'. His office is recognised as one of freehold tenure⁷. He is a corporation sole⁸. It is doubtful whether an archdeacon as such has a cure of souls⁹.

3 Ecclesiastical Commissioners Act 1840, s 27; Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C22 para 1.

4 As to the age requirements for ordination, see PARA 654 post.

5 A dean is styled archpresbyter; therefore some authorities say that he is superior to an archdeacon in the same way as a priest is superior to a deacon: Stephens, Laws relating to the Clergy 45. It has also been stated that a dean and chapter is of higher rank than an archdeacon: Parham v Templar (1821) 3 Phillim 223 at 243, per Sir John Nicholl. However, Ayliffe says an archdeacon of common right within his own precinct is the next great person in point of dignity after the bishop and his chancellor, saving the right of the dean which belongs to him in the cathedral church: Ayl Par 95. Also a dean is a dignitary (see PARA 435 ante), whereas it has been doubted whether an archdeacon is one. Watson says he is: Watson, Clergyman's Law (4th Edn) 9; and see Godolphin's Repertorium Canonicum 60 (but see also App. 5; contra Boughton v Gousley (1599) Cro Eliz 663). See also Dean and Chapter of Rochester v Pierce (1808) 1 Camp 466. For the purposes of the Church Dignitaries (Retirement) Measure 1949 (see PARA 502 post) an archdeacon is a dignitary (see s 12). An archdeacon is usually appointed by the bishop, who prefers him by collation. Every archdeacon must before collation make and subscribe the declaration of assent and the declaration against simony and take the oath of allegiance³ and the oath of obedience to his bishop⁴.

498. Archdeacon's jurisdiction.

An archdeaconry is a legal division of a diocese for administrative purposes. The dioceses in England are usually divided into two, three or four archdeaconries, although an archdeaconry may comprise the whole diocese, or any part of one. Provision may be made by a pastoral scheme or a pastoral order¹ for creating, altering or dissolving an archdeaconry, for naming any new archdeaconry so created and for altering the name of any archdeaconry². Within their respective archdeaconries all archdeacons throughout England have and exercise full and equal jurisdiction³.

The archdeacon's jurisdiction is described as an ordinary jurisdiction⁴ and is exercised either by himself in person or by an official or commissary to whom he has formally committed authority in that behalf⁵.

2 Pastoral Measure 1968, ss 18, 38 (d). A provision of a pastoral scheme (but not of a pastoral order) which dissolves an archdeaconry may be brought into operation without the assent of the archdeacon and without waiting for a vacancy in the archdeaconry (ss. 24 (1), 38 proviso), but if the archdeaconry is not already vacant a prescribed period must elapse before the provision can come into operation (s. 24 (3)). Where an archdeaconry is dissolved by a pastoral scheme, and when in certain specified circumstances an archdeacon resigns his office by agreement with the pastoral committee, the archdeacon is entitled to compensation for any consequential loss suffered by him: s 25, Sch. 4; see PARA 888 post.

The archdeacon must, within his archdeaconry, carry out his duties under the bishop and assist him in his pastoral care and office, and particularly he must see that all who hold any ecclesiastical office within the archdeaconry perform their duties with diligence, and must bring to the bishop's attention what calls for correction or merits praise¹.

The archdeacon must hold yearly visitations² within his archdeaconry, save when inhibited by a superior Ordinary³. He must also survey in person or by the rural dean all churches, chancels and churchyards at least once in three years, and give direction for the amendment of all defects in their walls, fabric, ornaments and furniture⁴; in particular he is required to exercise the powers conferred upon him by the Inspection of Churches Measure 1955⁴. He has important functions and authority in relation to faculty jurisdiction⁵, and is a member of the diocesan advisory committee for the care of churches⁶.

It is the archdeacon's duty, either in person or by deputy, to examine and present candidates for ordination⁷ and, on receiving letters mandatory of the bishop, he must induct any priest who has been instituted to a benefice into possession of its temporalities⁸.

The archdeacon is an ex officio member of numerous bodies, including the diocesan synod⁹, the pastoral committee of the diocese¹⁰, and the parsonages board (if one is appointed for the diocese)¹¹. He may have to serve as a member of the Lower House of the convocation of the province¹², of the House of Clergy of the General Synod¹³ and of the diocesan board of patronage¹⁴.

In addition, the archdeacon has other functions under various enactments¹⁵, including such functions as the bishop may be specifically authorised to delegate to an archdeacon¹⁶.

An archdeacon has the right to visit, at times and places limited by law or custom, the archdeaconry committed to his charge in a more solemn manner, and in the visitation to perform all acts by law or custom assigned to his charge in that behalf for the edifying and well-governing of Christ's flock, that means may be taken thereby for the supply of such things as are lacking and the correction of such things as are amiss¹. Except when inhibited by a superior Ordinary² the archdeacon is required to hold yearly visitations within his archdeaconry³.

The annual visitation is usually held soon after the end of April, at which time churchwardens are to be admitted and presentments received⁴. The archdeacon is expected on that occasion to deliver an address (called a charge)⁵, and it seems that he has power also to require one of the clergy to preach a visitation sermon⁶. He has power to cite the clergy to attend, but not the laity, except the churchwardens and perhaps sidesmen⁷. An archdeacon may visit by his official or commissary if he himself is hindered from performing the visitation⁸.

The archdeacon's visitation is for the benefit of the parish at large and, among others, of the churchwardens themselves; it may, however, be held by grouping a large number of parishes together and holding the visitation for all at some one parish church⁹.

Fees are no longer payable at an archidiaconal visitation¹⁰.

The estates which formerly belonged to archdeaconries became vested in the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, whose powers and functions subsequently passed to the Church Commissioners¹.

The Church Commissioners have power at their discretion to pay out of their general fund such sum or sums as they think fit in augmentation of the income of any archdeaconry in either province, subject to the limitation that no such payment may be made so as to increase the total augmentation in any one financial year of the commissioners out of that fund above £400 or such other sum as may have been fixed by resolution of the Church Assembly or the General Synod².

Archdeacons formerly had the benefit of special statutory concessions in regard to the holding of offices in plurality³. They are now, however, subject to the general provisions which prohibit (1) the holding of benefices in plurality except in pursuance of a pastoral scheme or order⁴, and (2) the holding of a cathedral preferment with a benefice, or with two or more benefices authorised to be held in plurality by a pastoral scheme or order, unless the cathedral statutes so provide⁵.

A. DIOCESAN SYNODS

(A) CONSTITUTION AND MEMBERSHIP

503. Constitution of diocesan synods.

In 1970, as part of the new system created by the Synodical Government Measure 1969¹, diocesan synods were constituted for all dioceses², and thereupon the diocesan conferences which had previously existed were dissolved and all their functions were transferred to the diocesan synods³.

A diocesan synod consists of three authorities: the bishop (who is president of the synod)⁴, a House of Clergy and a House of Laity⁵. The total number of members must be not less than 150 and not more than 270⁶.

Provisions relating to membership of the diocesan synod, including the composition of the House of Clergy and the House of Laity and the procedure for the election of members to them, are contained in the Church Representation Rules⁷. If it appears to the diocesan synod that those provisions ought to be varied to meet the special circumstances of the diocese and to secure better representation of clergy or laity, or both, it may make a scheme for such variation⁸. Every such scheme requires the assent of the bishop and of a two-thirds majority of the membership of each House of the synod present and voting⁹ and it must thereafter be laid before a session of the General Synod¹⁰. If not annulled by resolution of the General Synod the scheme will come into operation on the prescribed or specified date, and the relevant provisions of the Church Representation Rules will then have effect subject to the scheme¹⁰.

The registrar of the diocese is the registrar of the diocesan synod, and may appoint a deputy¹¹.

See also the Synodical Government (Channel Islands) Order 1970, S.I. 1970 No. 1117, whereby the Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 4, applies to the Channel Islands so far as may be necessary to secure that the functions of the diocesan synod of Winchester are exercisable with respect to matters concerning the Church of England in the Channel Islands.

3 Ibid s 4 (7). References in any Measure or instrument to diocesan conferences are now to be construed as references to diocesan synods: s 4 (7). The bishop is not prevented by this enactment from summoning a conference of persons appearing to him to be representative of the clergy and laity of the diocese on such occasions and for such purposes as he thinks fit: s 4 (7) proviso. Under transitional provisions (see s 8) the dissolution of the diocesan conference and the transfer of functions are not to affect the validity of previous action by the diocesan conference or the continuance in being of any other diocesan body, and provision is made for the continuing force and effect, where appropriate, of things given, made or done by the diocesan conference: Sch. 4 para 3 (1).

4 During a vacancy in the see the bishop's functions as one of the authorities of the diocesan synod are exercisable by such person in episcopal orders as the archbishop of the province may appoint: Church Representation Rules, r 43 (7), contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3 (substituted by S.I. 1973 No. 1865).

504. New dioceses.

The General Synod has power to make provision, upon the foundation of a new bishopric, for the constitution or reconstitution of the diocesan synod of any new diocese¹ concerned, and for any matters incidental to it or consequential upon it². In exercising this power the General Synod may dissolve, with a view to its reconstitution, the diocesan synod of any diocese the area of which is altered by the foundation of the new bishopric³, and may sanction a scheme made or approved by the bishop of a new diocese concerned for the original constitution or the reconstitution of its diocesan synod⁴.

1 'New diocese' includes both any diocese constituted upon, and any diocese the area of which is altered by, the foundation of a new bishopric: New Dioceses (Transitional Provisions) Measure 1927, s 3 (1).

2 Ibid s 1 (1); Synodical Government Measure 1969, ss 2 (2), 4 (7). As to the foundation of new bishoprics, see PARA 454 ante. The New Dioceses (Transitional Provisions) Measure 1927 does not apply to the Channel Islands or the Isle of Man: s 5.

4 New Dioceses (Transitional Provisions) Measure 1927, s 1 (2) (iv); Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 4 (7). The Measure of 1927 (as originally enacted) also empowered the Church Assembly, for the purposes only of the original constitution or the reconstitution of the diocesan conference of a new diocese concerned, to modify the provisions of the Diocesan Conferences Regulations 1922 as to the election of representatives and other matters relating to diocesan conferences: s 1 (2) (iii). Whether this would enable the General Synod to modify the corresponding provisions of the Church Representation Rules relating to diocesan synods seems open to doubt.

505. Membership of the House of Clergy.

The House of Clergy of a diocesan synod consists of ex officio members, elected members and co-opted members, with the possible addition of some members nominated by the bishop.

The ex officio members are (1) the suffragan bishop or bishops and any assistant bishop or bishops nominated by the bishop of the diocese¹; (2) the dean or provost of the cathedral (including, in appropriate dioceses, the Dean of Westminster, the Dean of Windsor and the Deans of Jersey and Guernsey)²; (3) the archdeacons³; (4) the proctors elected from the diocese or from any university in the diocese⁴ to the Lower House of the convocation of the province, excluding the registrar of the diocese (if so elected)⁵; (5) any other member of that House, being the person chosen by and from among the clerical members of religious communities in the province, who resides in the diocese⁶; (6) the chancellor of the diocese (if in holy orders)⁷; and (7) the chairman of the diocesan board of finance (if in holy orders)⁸.

The elected members are those elected by the Houses of Clergy of the deanery synods in the diocese in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Church Representation Rules⁹.

The co-opted members are those clerks in holy orders who are co-opted by the House of Clergy of the diocesan synod¹⁰. They must not exceed five in number¹⁰.

The bishop of the diocese may nominate ten additional members of the diocesan synod, and any clergymen so nominated will be members of the House of Clergy¹¹.

Elected members of the Houses of Clergy and Laity normally hold office for a term of three years beginning with 1st September next following their election¹, but a person elected to fill a casual vacancy holds office only for the unexpired portion of the term of office of the person in whose place he is elected².

Where a member of a diocesan synod elected by the House of Clergy of a deanery synod ceases to be qualified for election by that House, then, unless he continues to work or reside in the diocese, his seat will forthwith be vacated³. Where a lay member of a diocesan synod elected by the House of Laity of a deanery synod ceases to have the qualification of entry on the roll of any parish in that deanery or (in appropriate cases) of being declared a habitual worshipper at the cathedral church of the diocese⁴, his seat is forthwith vacated⁵, but this provision will not apply to a member whose name is entered on the roll of any other parish in the diocese or who, being declared a habitual worshipper at the cathedral, is declared by the dean to be associated with a deanery in the diocese⁶.

A person is not deemed to vacate his seat as an elected member by reason only of the fact that subsequently to his election he has become a member of the synod ex officio⁷.

A member of a diocesan synod may resign his membership by written notice to the secretary of the synod⁸.

511. Conduct of elections.

The presiding officers for the deaneries in each diocese are appointed by the bishop, and the expenses of elections must be paid out of diocesan funds¹.

Every candidate must be nominated and seconded by a qualified elector². If more candidates are nominated than there are seats to be filled, their names must be circulated on a voting paper to every qualified elector³. The voting paper is returnable to the presiding officer within such period (not being less than fourteen days) as he specifies⁴. Only one vote may be given to any one candidate, and no elector may give more votes than there are seats to be filled⁴. Where owing to an equality of votes an election is not decided, the decision between the persons for whom the equal number of votes have been cast must be taken by lot by the presiding officer⁵.

Not later than 1st September in each election year the presiding officer must send a return of the result of the election to the secretary of the diocesan synod, and a statement of the result to every candidate⁶.

In any case in which there has been no valid election the bishop may direct a fresh election to be held, and may give such directions in connection with it as he may think necessary⁷.

Elections to fill casual vacancies are conducted in the same manner as ordinary elections⁸.

511 Conduct of elections

TEXT AND NOTES--Rule 26 now r 32 (amended by SI 1994/3118). In every diocese, there must be a diocesan electoral registration officer appointed by the bishop's council and standing committee of the diocesan synod. He must record the names and addresses of all members of the House of Clergy and House of Laity of the deanery synods in two registers, ie the register of clerical electors and the register of lay electors. The members co-opted to the house must be listed separately in the appropriate register: r

29(1) (amended by SI 1989/2094, SI 1994/3118). The diocesan electoral registration officer must, not later than 21 days before the nomination papers are circulated, send a copy of the names and addresses of clerical electors and lay electors as recorded by him to the secretary of the deanery synod of which those electors are members and the secretary of the deanery synod must within seven days of receipt certify in writing to the electoral registration officer that the names and addresses are correct or notify him in writing of any necessary corrections: r 29(2) (amended by SI 1994/3118). The diocesan electoral registration officer must, not later than seven days before nomination papers are circulated, send a copy of the corrected names and addresses of electors to the appropriate presiding officer in the election: r 29(3) (amended by SI 1994/3118).

TEXT AND NOTE 1--No person may be appointed as a presiding officer for an election by a house of which he is a member: r 32(2) (amended by SI 1989/2094, SI 1994/3118).

The diocesan electoral registration officer (see TEXT AND NOTES) must furnish the presiding officer with the names and addresses of the qualified electors and the presiding officer must ensure that the persons qualified to nominate and vote in elections to the diocesan synod, and only such persons, are sent or given nomination and voting papers in respect of the election at the address entered against their names in the register of electors: r 32(3) (amended by SI 1989/2094).

NOTE 2--Rule 32(4) (as renumbered) amended by SI 1981/1650, SI 1989/2094, SI 1994/3118, SI 2009/2129. App 1 s 5 further amended by SI 1980/178, SI 1984/1039, SI 1989/2094, SI 1994/3118. App 1 s 6 further amended by SI 1989/2094, SI 1994/3118.

It is the duty of the presiding officer to scrutinise nomination papers as soon as they have been lodged and he must, without delay, inform the candidate concerned whether the nomination is valid; where the nomination is invalid, the presiding officer must give his reasons for so ruling and if, by the close of the nomination period, no valid nomination is received, the candidate must be excluded from the election: r 32(5)(a); SI 1994/3118. It is also the duty of the presiding officer to supply free of charge to a duly nominated candidate in the election one copy of the names and addresses of the qualified electors within seven days of receiving his written request: r 32(5)(b) (amended by SI 1994/3118).

TEXT AND NOTE 3--For the form of voting paper, see now App 1 ss 7, 8 (amended by SI 1980/178, SI 1984/1039, SI 1989/2094, SI 1994/3118, SI 2004/1889). The diocesan synod must, not later than 31 December in each year preceding any such election as is referred to in r 31, make a determination as to which form of voting paper is to be used by the deaneries in that election, and that determination will apply to any election to fill a casual vacancy which occurs during the next ensuing three years: r 32(6) (amended by SI 1980/178, SI 1984/1039).

TEXT AND NOTE 4--Now the voting paper marked and, on the reverse thereof, signed by the elector and with his full name written is returnable to the presiding officer within such period, not being less than fourteen days, as he specifies. No vote will be counted if given on a voting paper not in accordance with this provision: r 32(7) (amended by SI 1980/178, SI 1984/1039).

TEXT AND NOTE 5--This provision applies where voting papers in the form set out in App 1 s 7 have been used: r 32(8); SI 1980/178. Where voting papers in the form set out in App 1 s 8 (added by SI 1980/178, SI 1994/3118) are used, the election must be conducted under rules, with the necessary modifications, made by the General Synod under r 39(4) (see PARA 422) and for the time being in force: r 32(9) (amended by SI 1980/178).

TEXT AND NOTE 6--Rule 26(7) renumbered as r 32(10). For September, now read August:
r 32(10) (amended by SI 1981/1650, SI 1994/3118).

512. Appeals.

A person aggrieved may appeal against the allowance or disallowance of a vote¹ or against the result of an election². Notice of the appeal must be given in writing to the bishop within the time prescribed³.

In each diocese the diocesan synod must constitute an electoral commission to whom the bishop must refer any appeal unless the parties agree to a settlement of their dispute⁴.

The commission must appoint three or more (being an odd number) of its members to decide the appeal⁵. All or the majority of the members so appointed must be laymen unless the question arises in connection with an election of members of the House of Clergy, when all or the majority must be clerks in holy orders⁶. These members are entitled to inspect all documents and papers relating to the subject matter of the appeal, and to be furnished with all information respecting it which they may require, and they must give the parties an opportunity of appearing before them in person or through a legal or other representative⁷. Their decision is final⁸.

2 Church Representation Rules, r 36 (1) (d) (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865). In this case an appellant will not be entitled to rely, as a ground of appeal, either (1) on an error in the electoral roll unless (i) either it has been determined that there has been such an error or the question is awaiting determination, and (ii) the error would or might be material to the result of the election; or (2) on the allowance or disallowance of a vote unless the allowance or disallowance would or might be so material: r 36 (3). As to appeals in respect of alleged errors in the electoral roll, see PARA 596 post.

3 Ibid r 36 (2). The time is normally fourteen days from the allowance or disallowance of a vote or from the announcement of the result of the election, as the case may be (r. 36 (2) (b), (c)), but the electoral commission (as to which see infra) may grant an extension of time (r. 36 (7)).

TEXT AND NOTES 4-6--Now in any appeal arising under r 44 except an appeal arising out of an election to the House of Laity of the General Synod, the chairman of the House of Laity of the diocesan synod or the lay chairman of the deanery synod, as the case may be, must refer any appeal to the bishop's council and standing committee of the diocese, who must appoint three or a greater number, being an odd number, of their lay members to consider and decide the appeal: r 44(10); SI 1989/2094, SI 1994/3118. In any appeal arising under r 44 to the House of Clergy of the diocesan synod the chairman of the House of Clergy of the said synod must refer any appeal to the bishop's council and standing committee of the diocese which must appoint three or a greater odd number of their clerical members to consider and decide the appeal: r 44(11); SI 1989/2094. Where an appeal is pending in respect of an election to any synod, any person who was declared elected in accordance with r 33 (see PARA 503) but whose election is or may be affected by the appeal is deemed to be a member of that synod until the appeal is heard or disposed of: r 44(12); SI 1994/3118.

513. Casual vacancies.

Where a casual vacancy among the members of a diocesan synod elected by either House of a deanery synod occurs, the vacancy may be filled by the election by that House of a person qualified to be so elected, and a meeting of the members of that House who are electors may be held for that purpose¹. Subject to that, the election is to be conducted in the same manner as an ordinary election².

An election to fill a casual vacancy in either House of the diocesan synod must normally be held as soon as reasonably practicable and must be completed within six months from the occurrence of the vacancy³, but if the period for holding a general election to that House is due to begin within nine months of the vacancy, the vacancy is not to be filled unless the bishop otherwise directs⁴.

Any person elected to fill a casual vacancy will hold office only for the unexpired portion of the term of office of the person in whose place he is elected⁵.

(C) FUNCTIONS AND PROCEEDINGS OF DIOCESAN SYNODS

514. Functions in general.

The functions of the diocesan synod are: (1) to consider matters concerning the Church of England and to make provision for such matters in relation to its diocese, and to consider and express its opinion on any other matters of religious or public interest¹; (2) to advise the bishop on any matters on which he may consult the synod²; and (3) to consider and express its opinion on any matters referred to it by the General Synod, and in particular to approve or disapprove provisions referred to it³ relating to forms of worship or union with another Christian body⁴.

It is the bishop's duty to consult with the diocesan synod on matters of general concern and importance to the diocese⁵.

The diocesan synod must keep the deanery synods of the diocese informed of the policies and problems of the diocese and of the business which is to come before meetings of the diocesan synod, and may delegate executive functions to deanery synods⁶. It must keep itself informed, through the deanery synods, of events and opinion in the parishes, and it must give opportunities for discussing at meetings of the diocesan synod matters raised by deanery synods and parochial church councils⁶.

The General Synod may by canon or regulation extend, amend or further define the functions of diocesan synods⁷.

515. Specific functions.

Specific functions are assigned to diocesan synods by a number of enactments. Their functions under the Church Representation Rules include the making of provision, by schemes, rules and otherwise, for the membership and procedure of deanery synods¹, and the division of a diocese into electoral areas for the purposes of elections to the House of Laity of the General Synod².

Diocesan synods have extensive functions in connection with the repair of benefice buildings, including the making of provision by scheme for the appointment or designation of parsonages boards, for the constitution and procedure of these boards³, and for the inspection and repair of parsonage houses and other buildings belonging to a benefice⁴. They are required also to establish schemes providing for the inspection of churches by architects at least once in every five years⁵.

The diocesan board of finance is subject to the control of the diocesan synod⁶, and the synod exercises various powers in relation to other boards and committees operating in the diocese⁷.

The elected advisers for the purpose of advising the bishop in the matter of presentations to benefices are elected triennially by the Houses of Clergy and Laity of the diocesan synod⁸, and the elected members of diocesan boards of patronage are similarly elected⁹.

516. Meetings and procedure.

The diocesan synod is required to make standing orders, and these must include certain specified provisions by virtue of which the following requirements will have effect¹.

A specified minimum number of meetings, being not less than two, must be held in each year², and a meeting must be held if not less than a specified number of members so request³.

The bishop need not be chairman of the meetings if and to the extent that standing orders otherwise provide⁴. There must be a secretary of the synod⁵.

In general, nothing is deemed to have the assent of the diocesan synod unless the three authorities which constitute the synod⁶ have assented to it⁷; this is subject to the following exceptions and qualifications: (1) questions relating only to the conduct of business are to be decided by the votes of all the members of the synod present and voting⁸; (2) every other question is to be decided in like manner, the assent of the three authorities being presumed, unless either any ten members present demand that a separate vote of each of the Houses of Clergy and Laity be taken, or the bishop requires his distinct opinion to be recorded⁹; (3) for the purposes of the provisions of the constitution of the General Synod relating to forms of worship or union with another Christian body⁹, any matter referred to the diocesan synod by the General Synod under those provisions is deemed to have been approved if the votes of the House of Clergy and of the House of Laity are in favour of it¹⁰.

There must be a bishop's council and standing committee of the diocesan synod, with such membership as may be provided by standing orders, and with responsibility for exercising the advisory and consultative functions of the synod in relation to the bishop¹¹, together with such other functions as may be assigned to it by the standing orders, by the Church Representation Rules or by any Measure or canon¹².

1 Church Representation Rules, r 28 (1), contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3. The standing orders may contain such further provisions consistent with the Church Representation Rules as the diocesan synod considers appropriate: r 28 (1). B. DIOCESAN BOARDS OF FINANCE

517. Constitution of diocesan boards of finance.

A diocesan board of finance is a company constituted by the diocesan synod¹ of a diocese² and regulated by the Companies Acts 1948 to 1967³. The company's memorandum and articles of association must empower the board to hold property for purposes connected with the Church of England⁴, to transact business in that connection, and to act as a committee of the diocesan synod⁵, and must confer such further powers as the diocesan synod may think necessary or expedient in view of the requirements of the diocese⁶.

The memorandum and articles must also provide that the bishop of the diocese is an ex officio member, and that not less than three-quarters of the other members must be elected by the diocesan synod (or, if the memorandum and articles of association so provide or allow, wholly or in part by the deanery synods in the diocese), and that the remainder must be elected, nominated or co-opted in such manner as the memorandum or articles of association provide or allow⁷, but so that not less than two-thirds of the members elected by the diocesan synods or by deanery synods are members of the diocesan synod⁸, and that a majority are laymen⁹.

Provision was made by the Diocesan Boards of Finance Measure 1925 whereby an existing board of finance¹⁰, diocesan trust¹¹ or other appropriate body could, if certain specified requirements were satisfied, be declared to be the diocesan board of finance for the diocese¹².

property held by the existing board, or the whole or part of the property held by the diocesan trust, to the diocesan board of finance constituted under the Measure; such property would remain subject to all the trusts affecting the same: s 4 (1).

517 Constitution of diocesan boards of finance

TEXT--The constitution is deemed to include the furtherance of the work of the Church of England by the exercise of functions under the Endowments and Glebe Measure 1976: s 40.

The board must take steps to ensure that the diocesan member of the Central Board of Finance, see PARA 394, is (unless he is already the secretary of the diocesan board) a voting member of the diocesan board: Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1978 s 5.

518. Functions of diocesan board of finance.

In the exercise of its functions a diocesan board of finance must comply with the directions of the diocesan synod¹. These functions include the granting or withholding of consent to the acquisition by parochial church councils of any interest in land (other than a short lease) or in any personal property to be held on permanent trusts; the holding of any such interest; and the granting or withholding of consent to the sale, leasing, letting, exchange, charging or taking of legal proceedings with respect to the property concerned². A diocesan board of finance has certain functions in connection with the repair of benefice buildings³, and may itself be designated by a scheme of the diocesan synod as the parsonages board for the diocese⁴.

Its consent is necessary for the revocation or variation of the provisions of a pastoral scheme concerning payment of the endowment income of a benefice by the Church Commissioners to the diocesan stipends fund⁵, and it must be consulted by the commissioners as to the allocation of the diocesan stipends fund⁶ and concur in the application of money held to the credit of the income and capital accounts of that fund⁷.

519. Statutory boards and committees.

In addition to the bishop's council and standing committee¹, and the diocesan board of finance², there is in each diocese a number of statutory boards and committees which, in respect of their constitutions and functions, stand in various degrees of relationship to the diocesan synod. In the case of the diocesan parsonages board, the diocesan synod prescribes the board's constitution and procedure, and the board must comply with the directions of, and submit reports to, the synod³. The synod has some measure of control over the composition of the pastoral committee of the diocese and over its procedure, but the committee is subject to the directions of the bishop and must submit its recommendations to him⁴. The diocesan education committee includes a substantial number of members elected by the diocesan synod and is declared to be responsible to the synod, but the extent of the control exercisable by the synod is not precisely defined⁵. The diocesan board of patronage includes members elected by the Houses of Clergy and of Laity of the diocesan synod, but in the exercise of its powers the board is independent of the synod⁶. The diocesan advisory committee for the care of churches⁷, the diocesan redundant churches uses committee⁸, and the ministerial committee of the diocese⁹ are, in respect of their constitution and their functions, fully independent of the diocesan synod. There is in addition a wide variety of non-statutory boards and committees in each diocese¹⁰.

519 Statutory boards and committees

TEXT AND NOTES--The diocesan synod of every diocese must establish a committee, to be known for statutory purposes as the mission and pastoral committee, which has the following functions: (1) to make or assist in making better provision for the cure of souls in the diocese as a whole and, to the extent that the committee thinks appropriate, in particular parts of the diocese or in particular parishes; (2) from time to time, as the bishop may direct, or as the committee thinks fit, to review arrangements for pastoral supervision and care in the diocese as a whole and, to the extent that the committee thinks appropriate, in particular parts of the diocese or in particular parishes (including sharing agreements in respect of a church or parsonage house and any proposals for sharing agreements); (3) from time to time, as the bishop may direct, or as the committee thinks fit, to prepare strategies or proposals for carrying out the committee's functions under heads (1) or (2) above for submission to the bishop and the diocesan synod for their approval; (4) to maintain an overview of matters relating to church buildings in the diocese and their use, other than matters which are within the jurisdiction of the consistory court or within the functions of the Diocesan Advisory Committee; (5) in the case of listed buildings or buildings in a conservation area, to make every endeavour to find a suitable alternative use or suitable alternative uses for churches which are proposed to be closed and buildings which have been closed for regular public worship in the diocese under a pastoral church buildings scheme and, in the case of any other such building, to develop proposals for the suitable alternative use or uses of the building or for the demolition of the building and the disposal of its site; (6) where it considers it desirable, to make recommendations to the bishop in accordance with the 1983 Measure s 3 for any of the matters for which provision may be made under the 1983 Measure, other than s 36, by a pastoral scheme or order; and (6) to carry out any other functions conferred on a pastoral committee or a redundant churches uses committee of a diocese by or under the 1983 Measure or any other enactment: Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 ss 52(1), (2), 53(3), Sch 3. 520. Diocesan parsonages board.

The diocesan synod must provide by scheme¹ either for the appointment of a parsonages board², or for designating the diocesan board of finance as the parsonages board for the diocese³. Every such scheme must provide also for the appointment of diocesan surveyors and for determining their remuneration and terms of service⁴. Where a parsonages board is appointed, all archdeacons of the diocese are members of it ex officio, and of remaining members at least one-third must be clergymen elected by clergy of the diocese⁵, and at least one-third must be lay persons⁶; but subject to these requirements the membership of the board and the method of election or appointment and term of office of its members (other than ex officio members) must be prescribed by the scheme⁶. Subject to the foregoing provisions, the constitution and procedure of a parsonages board are to be prescribed by scheme of the diocesan synod⁷.

The parsonages board is a body corporate with perpetual succession and a common seal; it has power, in the exercise of its functions, to enter into contracts, hold property, borrow money and execute works, and has such other ancillary powers as may be provided by scheme of the diocesan synod⁸.

It must present an annual report and annual accounts to the diocesan synod⁹; and it must comply with any directions given by resolution of the synod¹⁰. The Church Commissioners may at any time seek information from, and give advice to, the board on any matter concerning its functions, and the board must provide the information and have regard to the advice¹¹.

1 Schemes made by a diocesan synod under the Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972 do not take effect until they have been approved by the Church Commissioners either without variation or with such variations as may be agreed by the commissioners and the synod, and a copy of every scheme must be left in the diocesan registry: s 30 (1). The duties and powers of diocesan synods under the Measure may be exercised by a single scheme or by separate schemes, and any scheme may be varied, revoked or replaced by a subsequent scheme made and approved in like manner: s 30 (2). Any scheme may contain necessary or expedient supplementary and incidental provisions, may provide a commencement date, and may specify different dates for different provisions or different areas: s 30 (3). No scheme might come into operation until the appointed day, as to which, and as to the extent of the Measure, see PARA 1165 note 4 post.

As to the secretary of the board, see s 1 (3). If the diocesan board of finance is designated as the parsonages board (see the text and note 3 supra), the scheme must provide for the delegation of its functions under the Measure to a committee or committees (which may include persons other than members of the board), and in prescribing the membership of the committee or committees regard must be had to the need for adequate representation of the clergy and laity; and it may contain provisions as to the procedure of the committee: s 1 (9) (a). The memorandum and articles of association of the board or (if it is not a registered company) its constitution will be deemed to include the appropriate purposes and powers: s 1 (9) (b). The diocesan synod of every diocese except Sodor and Man must appoint a committee known as the pastoral committee of the diocese¹. The diocesan bishop will be a member of the committee if he so desires², and every suffragan bishop and archdeacon in the diocese is an ex officio member³. The diocesan board of finance, the diocesan parsonages board and the diocesan advisory committee for the care of churches must each appoint a member of the pastoral committee, who must be a member or office of the body appointing him⁴. The remaining members are to be appointed or elected in such manner as the diocesan synod may determine, but at least one-third of all the members of the committee must be of the clergy and at least one-third must be of the laity, and not more than one-third may be ex officio members⁵. Members (other than ex officio members) hold office for five years or such lesser period as the diocesan synod may determine, but are eligible for reappointment⁶.

At a meeting of the committee not less than one-third of the members form a quorum⁷, and every question submitted is to be decided by a majority of those present and voting⁸. The committee has power to delegate certain of its functions to sub-committees, which may include persons who are not members of the committee⁹. Subject to these provisions and to any directions given by the diocesan synod, the committee has power to regulate its own procedure¹⁰. It must present an annual report to the diocesan synod¹¹.

522. Diocesan education committee.

For every diocese except Sodor and Man there must be a diocesan education committee¹ responsible to the diocesan synod and having the rights, powers, duties and obligations vested in it by the Diocesan Education Committees Measure 1955². The committee must be constituted either in accordance with that Measure³ or in accordance with an order made by the Secretary of State upon a request by the diocesan synod and with the consent of the bishop⁴. If constituted in accordance with the Measure the committee will consist of (1) the bishop, any suffragan and assistant bishops, and the archdeacons of the diocese, all being members *ex officio*⁵; (2) at least twelve and not more than twenty members elected by the diocesan synod, of whom at least four must be clergymen and at least six must be lay persons (including at least two women)⁶; (3) not more than eight co-opted members⁷; and (4) not more than four additional members who may be nominated by the bishop⁸. The committee, if so constituted, has power to fill any casual vacancies, and may act notwithstanding any vacancy in its membership⁹. It may appoint sub-committees, which may include persons who are not members of the committee¹⁰. Subject to these provisions and to any directions given by the diocesan synod, the committee may regulate its own procedure¹¹.

The committee has the right, power, duty and obligation, from time to time: (a) to take such steps as appear conducive to promoting religious education, according to the faith and practice of the Church of England¹², and to promote and co-operate with other religious bodies and local educational authorities¹³ in promoting religious education within the diocese¹⁴; (b) to watch the interests of church schools¹⁵ and take action to secure the provision of new schools¹⁶; (c) to give advice to trustees, owners and managers or governors of church schools and others concerned as to any matters affecting church schools within the diocese¹⁷; and (d) to make plans to further the development and organisation of religious education in the diocese and in particular of instruction in religious knowledge according to the faith and practice of the Church of England after consultation with trustees, owners and managers or governors of church schools within the diocese and others concerned¹⁸. Trustees, owners and managers or governors of every church school in a diocese are bound to consult the committee before making any agreement or arrangement with the Secretary of State, the Charity Commissioners or the local education authority for or with respect to the restoration, rearrangement, continuance, discontinuance, closing, sale or lease of, or other dealing with, the church school or for its amalgamation with any other school¹⁹.

522A. Diocesan boards of education.

1. Formation

For every diocese there must be a diocesan board of education responsible to the diocesan synod¹. The bishop, after consultation with the board, must appoint a director of education for the diocese who must act as secretary of the board². The board may be a body corporate or unincorporate³. The functions of the board are (1) to promote or assist in the promotion of education in the diocese, being education which is consistent with the faith and practice of the Church of England; (2) to promote or assist in the promotion of religious education and religious worship in the diocese; (3) to promote or assist in the promotion of church schools in the diocese and to advise the governors of such schools and trustees of church educational endowments and any other body or person concerned on any matter affecting church schools in the diocese; (4) to promote co-operation between the board and bodies or persons concerned in any respect with education in the diocese; (5) certain advisory and consultative functions⁴; and (6) such other functions as are assigned to the board by the diocesan synod, other than functions relating to church schools or church educational endowments⁵. The board must make an annual report on the exercise of its functions to the diocesan synod⁶.

1 Diocesan Boards of Education Measure 1991 s 1(1). As to the constitution of the board see s 1(2), (3), Schedule Pt I. As to the proceedings of the board see s 1(6), Schedule Pt II.

3 Ibid s 1(5).

4 Ie those assigned to the board by the 1991 Measure (see PARA 522A.2).

5 Ibid s 2(1). The board also has power to do all things incidental or conducive to the discharge of its functions: s 2(2).

6 Ibid s 2(3).

2. Advisory functions

The governing body of any church school, and the trustees of any church educational endowment, must obtain the advice of the board for the diocese in which the school is situated and must have regard to that advice before (1) publishing proposals for any prescribed alteration to the school¹; (2) publishing proposals for the discontinuance of the school²; (3) serving notice of an intention to discontinue the school³; (4) consulting⁴ about proposed admission arrangements for any school year; (5) in the case of a school in Wales, publishing proposals for changing the category of the school⁵; or (6) making any application to, or entering into any agreement with, any body or person for or in connection with any disposal (whether by sale or otherwise) of the premises of the school or any part of them⁶.

The governing body of a church school in England must not, unless it has obtained the consent in writing of the board for the diocese in which the school is situated, publish proposals⁷ (a) where the school is a voluntary school, for a change of category to foundation school; or (b) where the school is a foundation school, for a change in the instrument of government which results in the majority of governors being foundation governors⁸.

The governing body of any church school which is a voluntary aided school must not, unless it has obtained the consent in writing of the board for the diocese in which it is situated, enter into any agreement or arrangement for any alteration or repair of the premises of the school, being an alteration or repair in respect of which grant may be paid by the Secretary of State or of which the approval of the Secretary of State is required before it is carried out⁹. Where the giving of advice or consent is to be considered at any meeting of the board, at least 14 days' notice of the time and place at which the meeting is to be held must be given by the secretary of the board to the clerk to the governing body of the school concerned, and the governors of the school are entitled to attend the meeting¹⁰.

The trustees of any church educational endowment held for a church school must obtain the advice of the board and must have regard to that advice before making or agreeing to the making of any alteration in the purposes for which the endowment may be applied¹¹.

A local authority must consult the board for any diocese in which the authority exercises its functions before appointing a person to represent the Church of England as a member of a standing advisory council on religious education¹².

12 1991 Measure s 6(1). As to the standing advisory council, see the Education Act 1996 s 390, amended by School Standards and Framework Act 1998 Sch 30 para 93. This provision is without prejudice to the local authority's duty under the 1996 Act s 392(2) to assure itself that the person appointed is representative of the denomination: 1991 Measure s 6(1); 1996 Act Sch 37 para 104.

3. Power to give directions

Where the board is satisfied that the governing body of a voluntary aided church school in the diocese in discharging, or failing to discharge, its functions so far as relating to (1) the making of any prescribed alteration to the school¹; (2) the discontinuance of the school², or (3) in the case of a school in Wales, changing the school's category³, is acting in a manner which is not in the interests of that school or of church schools generally, the Board may give directions to the governing body as to the discharge of those functions⁴. Where the giving of directions is to be considered at any meeting of the board, at least 14 days notice of the time and place at which the meeting is to be held must be given by the secretary of the Board to the clerk of the governing body of the school concerned, and the governors of that school are entitled to attend the meeting⁵. No directions may be given unless they have been approved by a two-thirds majority of the members of the board present and voting at the meeting⁶. It is the duty of any governing body to comply with any lawful directions given to it⁷. Where the board gives directions, it must cause a report on them to be laid before the next meeting of the diocesan synod⁸.

Corresponding provision is made for the giving of directions to the trustees of church educational endowments⁹.

1 Ie, in the case of a school in England, under of the Education and Inspections Act 2006 Pt 2 (ss 7-32), or in the case of a school in Wales, under the School Standards and Framework Act 1998 Pt II Ch II (ss 28-35); see EDUCATION.

2 Ie, in the case of a school in England, under of the 2006 Act Pt 2 (ss 7-32) or the 1998 Act s 30, or in the case of a school in Wales, under the 1998 Act Pt II Ch II (ss 28-35); see EDUCATION.

However, the board may not, under 1991 Measure s 7(1), give directions as to the publication of proposals under 2006 Act s 19(3) or 1998 Act Sch 8 para 2 or 3 which would prevent the publication of proposals for the school to become a foundation school: 1991 Measure s 7(1A), added by 1998 Act Sch 30 para 31, amended by the 2006 Act Sch 3 para 5.

5 1991 Measure s 7(2), amended by 1998 Act Sch 30 para 31.

If, before the expiration of six months beginning on the date on which the directions are given, the governing body fails to comply with directions with respect to the publication of proposals for any prescribed alteration to the school under 1998 Act 28(2)(b) (see EDUCATION vol 15(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 132) or publication of proposals under ibid Sch 8 paras 2 or 3 (see EDUCATION vol 15(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 114), the Board may itself publish those proposals, and the provisions of the 1998 Act will apply to anything done by the Board by virtue of the 1991 Measure s 7(3) as if it had been done by the governing body of the school: s 7(3), as amended.

523. Diocesan advisory committee.

In every diocese except Sodor and Man there must be an advisory committee for the care of churches; known as the diocesan advisory committee, consisting of the archdeacons of all the archdeaconries in the diocese and such other persons as the bishop may by writing appoint¹. It is this committee's duty to advise the archdeacon before the issue of a certificate in the exercise of his functions under the faculty jurisdiction² and, if required to do so, to advise (1) the judge³; (2) intending applicants for faculties⁴; (3) persons building new churches, converting buildings for the purpose of churches or erecting buildings or converting existing buildings with the intention that they shall be licensed for public worship⁵; and (4) persons owning or responsible for the upkeep of unconsecrated buildings licensed for public worship⁶.

A diocesan advisory committee may make its own rules of procedure, and may adopt any general regulations as to procedure made by the Council for Places of Worship⁷.

The term of office of appointed members is five years and they are eligible for reappointment; the bishop may appoint one of the members of the committee to be chairman: s 13 (1). 523 Diocesan advisory committee

TEXT AND NOTES--1964 Measure s 13 repealed: Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 s 2(8). Each advisory committee must have a written constitution provided by the diocesan synod: s 2(1). As to the provisions to be contained in a constitution see ibid Sch 1. The constitution may also include such further provisions as the diocesan synod considers appropriate in connection with its procedure or for the establishment of sub-committees: s 2(3). The advisory committee must have certain specified functions and such other functions as may be determined by the diocesan synod by resolution: s 2(5), Sch 2. In carrying out its functions the committee and sub-committees must have regard to the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England: s 2(5). Any expenses incurred for the purpose of giving the advisory committee a constitution and for enabling it to discharge its functions properly and effectively must be paid by the diocesan board of finance: s 2(6). As soon as practicable after the end of each year, the advisory committee must prepare a report of its work and proceedings during that year and cause it to be laid before the diocesan synod, and send a copy to the Council for the Care of Churches: s 2(7). Until an advisory committee is given a constitution, it must continue to be formed and act in accordance with the 1964 Measure s 13: 1991 Measure s 2(8).

As to the keeping of a register of petitions for faculties by the secretary to the advisory committee see PARA 1321.

Any person or body carrying out functions of care and conservation must have due regard to the role of a church as a local centre of worship and mission: 1991 Measure s 1.

524. Rural deans.

The office of rural dean is of ancient origin. It declined in importance in the later middle ages and was virtually in abeyance for some centuries after the Reformation, but it was revived in the nineteenth century and now has an important place in the organisation of synodical government¹.

There appears to be no statutory qualification for the office of rural dean², but a clergyman beneficed in the deanery is usually appointed. The rural dean is to be a clerk in holy orders resident in the rural deanery, of the best ability, integrity and piety. The appointment is in the hands of the bishop of the diocese and archdeacon³, and the bishop sometimes appoints by letters patent under the episcopal seal. The rural dean is not a permanent officer, but may be removed at the will of his superior, whose minister he is³. It is said that he may give induction in the absence of the archdeacon⁴. The office carries no remuneration.

2 The Church Representation Rules, however, contemplate that the rural dean will invariably be a member of the deanery synod, thus implying that he will be a person who has the qualifications for such membership: see rr 19 (2), 23 (1) (a), contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3, and PARA 533 post.

525. Rural dean's functions.

It is the duty of the rural dean to report to the bishop any matter in any parish within the deanery which it may be necessary or useful for the bishop to know, particularly any case of serious illness or other form of distress among the clergy, the vacancy of any cure of souls and the measures taken by the sequestrators to secure the ministration of the Word and sacraments and other rites of the Church during the vacancy, and any case of a minister from another diocese officiating without authority¹. If any omission in a parish to prepare and maintain a church electoral roll or to form or maintain a parochial church council or to hold the annual parochial church meeting is brought to the notice of the rural dean, he must ascertain and report to the bishop its cause². If at any time the rural dean has reason to believe that there is any serious defect in the fabric, ornaments and furniture of any church or chapel, or that the buildings of any benefice are in a state of disrepair, he must report the matter to the archdeacon³.

The rural dean is a joint chairman, with a member of the House of Laity, of the deanery synod⁴. He is a member of the diocesan board of patronage when the board is transacting business in respect of any benefice within the deanery⁵, he is an 'interested party' for the purposes of representations to the pastoral committee of the diocese⁶, and he frequently acts as one of the sequestrators of a vacant benefice within the deanery⁷.

Every parish is within some rural deanery¹ or, as it is often called today, deanery². A pastoral scheme or order may provide for creating, altering or dissolving a deanery, and must name any new deanery so created; it must, where necessary, designate the deanery to which any benefice created or altered by the scheme or order is to belong; and it may alter the name of any deanery³. A provision which dissolves a deanery may be brought into operation without the assent of the rural dean and without waiting for a vacancy in the deanery⁴.

528. Membership of deanery synods.

A deanery synod consists of a House of Clergy and a House of Laity¹.

The members of the House of Clergy consist of (1) the clerks in holy orders beneficed in or licensed to any parish in the deanery²; (2) any clerks in holy orders licensed to institutions in the deanery under the Extra-Parochial Ministry Measure 1967³; (3) any clerical members of the General Synod or diocesan synod resident in the deanery⁴; and (4) such other clerks in holy orders holding the bishop's licence and resident or working in any part of the deanery as may be determined by or in accordance with a resolution⁵ of the diocesan synod⁶.

The members of the House of Laity consist of (a) the parochial representatives elected to the deanery synod by the annual meetings of the parishes of the deanery⁷; (b) any lay members of the General Synod or diocesan synod whose names are entered on the roll of any parish in the deanery⁸; (c) if in the diocesan bishop's opinion any community of persons in the deanery who are in the spiritual care of a chaplain licensed by the bishop should be represented in that House, one lay person chosen in the manner approved by the bishop from among the members of that community⁹; and (d) such other lay persons, being deaconesses or whole-time lay workers licensed by the bishop to work in any part of the deanery, as may be determined by or in accordance with a resolution of the diocesan synod¹⁰.

Each House may co-opt additional members¹¹, but the number co-opted by either House must not exceed 5 per cent of the total number of members of that House or three, whichever is the greater¹².

The diocesan synod must exercise its powers¹³ so as to secure that the total number of members of any deanery synod, shall not exceed 150¹⁴ nor, as far as practicable, be less than fifty¹⁵, but the maximum number of 150 may be exceeded for the purpose of securing that the House of Laity is not less in number than the House of Clergy¹⁶.

NOTES--Rule 19 now r 24; SI 1994/3118.

TEXT AND NOTES 2-6--Head (4) now such other clerks in holy orders holding the bishop's licence to work throughout the diocese or in more than one deanery and resident in the deanery subject to any direction which may be given by the members of the House of Clergy of the bishop's council that, having regard to the number of parochial and non-parochial clergy in the deanery, such clerk must have membership of a specified deanery synod other than the deanery where he resides provided that no person is thereby a member of more than one deanery synod in the diocese: r 24(2)(d); SI 1994/3118. Add head (5) one or more clerks in holy orders holding permission to officiate in the diocese who are resident in the deanery or who have habitually attended public worship in a parish in the deanery during the preceding six months; one clerk may be elected or chosen for every ten such clerks or part thereof, elected or chosen in such manner as may be approved by the bishop by and from such clerk: r 24(2)(e) (added by SI 1980/178, substituted by SI 2004/1889). In the case of an appeal arising out of the choosing of a retired clerk in accordance with r 24(2)(e), notice of the appeal must be given in writing to the bishop: r 43(2); SI 1984/1039, SI 1994/3118. As to where an extra-parochial place is not in a deanery, see r 24(3); SI 1984/1039. For these purposes, the relevant date is 31 December in the year immediately preceding any election of the parochial representatives of the laity, and as soon as possible after that date the rural dean of the deanery must inform the bishop of the number of clerks in holy orders who are qualified for membership of the deanery synod by virtue of r 24(2)(e): r 24(4); SI 1980/178; SI 1984/1039. Not later than 1 July following the election of parochial representatives of laity to the deanery synod the secretary of the synod must send to the diocesan electoral registration officer (see PARA 511) a list of the names and addresses of the members of the house of clergy, specifying the class of membership, and must keep that officer informed of subsequent changes in membership: r 24(5); SI 1989/2094. Any such person must be chosen every three years and holds office for a term of three years beginning with 1 June next following the date on which he is so chosen: r 25(4); SI 1980/178, SI 1994/3118.

TEXT AND NOTE 10--Head (d) now the deaconesses and lay workers licensed by the bishop to work in any part of the deanery: r 24(6)(d); SI 1994/3118. Add head (e) such other deaconesses or lay workers holding a bishop's licence to work throughout the diocese or in more than one deanery and resident in the deanery subject to any direction which may be given by the members of the House of Laity of the bishop's council that, having regard to the number of deaconesses or lay workers in the deanery, such person is to have membership of a specified deanery synod other than the deanery where they reside, provided that no person is thereby a member of more than one deanery synod in the diocese: r 24(6)(e); SI 1994/3118.

NOTE 11--Rule 29(2) (now r 35(3)) amended (see PARA 418). The names and addresses of co-opted members must be sent by the secretary of the deanery synod to the diocesan electoral registration officer (para 511): r 24(7); SI 1989/2094.

529. Election of parochial representatives.

The parochial representatives¹ on deanery synods are elected by annual parochial church meetings every three years², their term of office being three years from 1st June following their election³. The numbers to be elected from the several parishes are determined by resolution of the diocesan synod and must be related to the numbers of names on the rolls of the parishes⁴. The qualifications of a person to be elected are that his name is on the roll of the parish concerned⁵; that he is an actual communicant member of the Church of England⁶; and that he is of eighteen years or upwards⁷. The registrar of a diocese is not qualified for election to a deanery synod in that diocese⁸.

A casual vacancy among the parochial representatives may be filled by the election by the parochial church council of a person qualified to be so elected⁹.

If it appears that the foregoing provisions relating to membership of deanery synods ought to be varied to meet the special circumstances of the diocese or the deaneries and to secure better representation of clergy or laity, or both, the diocesan synod may make a scheme for the appropriate variation¹. Every such scheme requires the assent of the bishop and of a two-thirds majority of the members of each House of the diocesan synod present and voting², and it must thereafter be laid before a session of the General Synod³. If not annulled by resolution of the General Synod the scheme will come into operation on the prescribed or specified date³, and the relevant provisions of the Church Representation Rules will then have effect subject to the scheme⁴.

The diocesan synod may also provide by scheme for the representation on a deanery synod⁵ of the dean or provost, the residentiary canons and other ministers of the cathedral church of the diocese or any of them ⁶, and of lay persons who in a parish church cathedral are on the electoral roll of the parish⁷, or in any other cathedral are declared by the dean to be habitual worshippers at the cathedral and whose names are not entered on the roll of any parish⁸. Every such scheme requires the assent of the bishop and of a two-thirds majority of the members of each House of the diocesan synod present and voting⁹.

532. Functions of deanery synods.

The functions of a deanery synod are (1) to consider matters concerning the Church of England and to make provision for such matters in relation to their deanery, and to consider and express their opinion on any other matters of religious or public interest¹; (2) to bring together the views of the parishes of the deanery on common problems, to discuss and formulate common policies on those problems, to foster a sense of community and interdependence among those parishes, and generally to promote in the deanery the whole mission of the Church, pastoral, evangelistic, social and ecumenical²; (3) to make known and so far as appropriate put into effect any provision made by the diocesan synod³; (4) to consider the business of the diocesan synod, and particularly any matters referred to that synod by the General Synod, and to sound parochial opinion whenever it is required or considers it appropriate to do so⁴; and (5) to raise such matters as the deanery synod considers appropriate with the diocesan synod⁵.

If the diocesan synod delegates to deanery synods functions in relation to the parishes of its deaneries, and in particular the determination of parochial shares in quotas⁶ allocated to the deaneries, the deanery synod must exercise those functions⁷. The General Synod may by canon or regulation extend, amend or further define the functions of deanery synods⁸.

The deanery synod may be required to elect members to the diocesan board of finance⁹. The House of Clergy and the House of Laity of the deanery synod are required to elect members to the corresponding Houses of the diocesan synod¹⁰. The members of the House of Laity of the deanery synod are diocesan electors for the purpose of electing members to the House of Laity of the General Synod¹¹.

The diocesan synod is required to make rules for deanery synods; these must include certain specified provisions by virtue of which the following requirements will have effect¹.

The rural dean and a member of the House of Laity are to be joint chairmen of the deanery synod², and there must be a secretary of the synod³. A specified number of meetings must be held in each year⁴. On such matters and in such circumstances as the rules may specify voting must be by Houses; otherwise decisions are to be taken by a majority of the members present and voting⁵. There must be a standing committee of the synod⁶. A report of the synod's proceedings must be prepared and circulated to all parochial church councils in the deanery⁷.

Subject to the rules made by the diocesan synod the deanery synod has powers to determine its own procedure⁸.

534. Meaning of 'parish'.

According to the general definition of the term an ecclesiastical parish is a district committed to the charge of one incumbent having the cure of souls in it¹. For certain purposes, however, a special statutory definition may be applicable. Thus, in the Church Representation Rules 'Parish' is defined as including also a district which is constituted a conventional district² for the cure of souls and has a separate curate licensed to it³. In the Pastoral Measure 1968 'parish' means a parish constituted for ecclesiastical purposes, and does not include a conventional district⁴.

535. Ancient parishes.

The ancient parishes appear to have been gradually formed between the seventh and twelfth or thirteenth centuries¹. Their boundaries seem to have been originally identical with or determined by those of manors, as a manor very seldom extends over more than one of these parishes, although in many cases one parish contains two or more manors². Besides being ecclesiastical units, ancient parishes have been at different periods, and in many cases still are, administrative areas for various civil purposes, although the boundaries of parishes for civil purposes³ have in many cases been altered under statutory authority.

1 Parishes were instituted for the ease and benefit of the people, and not of the parson: Britton v Standish (1704) Holt KB 141. Originally there was simply the diocese, which was called 'parochia', and the bishop was the sole parson and had the sole cure of souls throughout the diocese. In course of time the diocese was divided ecclesiastically into several districts, and ministers, ordained by the bishop to assist him, were sent out to serve the cure and preach in the districts assigned to them by the bishop for the purpose; they and the bishop resided together in the place where the church or cathedral was. When churches were founded and endowed districts were annexed to them and clergy were sent to reside and officiate in these churches and in the annexed districts, which became parishes. The bishop, however, reserved a certain number (now called the dean and prebendaries or canons) in his cathedral to counsel and assist him. The cathedral continued, as before, to be the parish church of the whole diocese. The bishop remained chief pastor or universal incumbent of the diocese, having the cure of souls there and in all its parishes, and he had, therefore, the right of instituting or collating clerks to the parishes. The instituted or collated clerks received the cure of souls in their parishes from him and as his assistants, and they were for a long time called 'curates': Bishop of Down v Miller (1861) 11 I Ch R App 1 at vii, viii, per Dr Radcliffe. Gradually, as more churches were built, the ministrations of the church became more localised, and partly by the deliberate acts of the bishop and those serving under him, partly by the allocation by the monasteries of particular districts to be served by individual members of their number, and partly by agreement between great nobles and ecclesiastical authorities, smaller ecclesiastical districts were formed and the parochial system was evolved: 1 BI Com (14th Edn) 112. The fact that the vicar of a parish received the vicarial tithe arising in a chapelry, and that residents in a parish are in the habit of being married in the parish church, is almost conclusive evidence that the chapelry is part of the parish: Re Sandbach School and Almshouse Foundation, A-G v Earl of Crewe [1901] 2 Ch 317.

2 1 BI Com (14th Edn) 112. There have, in consequence, been many instances of an isolated portion of an ancient parish separated from the rest by other parishes and even sometimes situate in the midst of another parish.

3 As to parishes for civil purposes, see the Local Government Act 1972, s 1(6), and LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 37 et seq.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(9) PARISHES/(i) Origin and Development of the Parochial System/536. Extra-parochial areas.

536. Extra-parochial areas.

In the ancient division of the country into parishes certain areas were for unknown reasons left extra-parochial¹. In many cases these have been united with adjoining parishes for ecclesiastical purposes². Where that has not been done the bishop is empowered to authorise the publication of banns and solemnisation of marriages in any church or chapel belonging to or situate within the area and, where this authority is given, marriage registers are to be kept in the church or chapel as if it were a parish church³. Provision may be made by pastoral scheme for the creation of new extra-parochial places, or for the incorporation in parishes of existing extra-parochial places, and by pastoral scheme or order for the alteration or definition of the boundaries of existing extra-parochial places⁴. With the consent of the diocesan bishop a military or air force station may by Order in Council be created an extra-parochial district for ecclesiastical purposes with an extra-parochial chapel under the charge of an army or air force chaplain⁵.

1 1 BI Com (14th Edn) 113. Extra-parochial places have been dealt with for civil purposes by modern legislation, and have in many cases been united for those purposes to adjoining parishes: see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 37 et seq.

537. New ecclesiastical parishes.

To meet the needs arising from the increase and movement of population the creation of new ecclesiastical parishes became necessary, and this required statutory authority. In some cases the process was effected by a local or special Act of Parliament¹, but after the passing of the Church Building Act 1818², the New Parishes Act 1843³ and many Acts amending them, the process was generally carried out by an Order in Council⁴ ratifying a scheme of the Church Building Commissioners⁵. By the New Parishes Measure 1943 the existing body of legislation was in the main repealed and re-enacted with amendments. The present code of law on the subject is contained in the Pastoral Measure 1968, which enables new parishes to be created by means of pastoral schemes made by the Church Commissioners and confirmed by Order in Council⁶, and which also makes provision for the dissolution of existing parishes, for the alteration of their areas, and for the definition of their boundaries⁷.

1 Eg the Parish of Manchester Division Act 1850; Parish of Manchester Division Act 1850 (Amendment) Measure 1926.

2 The Church Building Act 1818 (repealed) was the first of a series of Acts known as the Church Building Acts 1818 to 1884 (now mainly repealed), under which churches were built and districts assigned.

3 The New Parishes Act 1843 (repealed except for s 6) was the first of a series of Acts known as the New Parishes Acts 1843 to 1884 (now mainly repealed), under which new districts were created and ministers appointed, and latterly churches were provided.

4 See Fitzgerald v Fitzpatrick (1864) 4 New Rep 87 (Order in Council constituting district chapelry withdrew chapel from all purposes included in a trust deed which had regulated its administration).

5 After 1865 these became the Ecclesiastical Commissioners (Church Building Commissioners (Transfer of Powers) Act 1856 (repealed)), and are now the Church Commissioners (see PARA 362 et seq ante).

6 Pastoral Measure 1968, s 16: see PARA 856 et seq post. See also s 86, by virtue of which all districts constituted for ecclesiastical purposes by or under any Act or Measure, and all other districts constituted for ecclesiastical purposes, the minister of which has a separate cure of souls, are (with effect from 1st April 1969) parishes with full parochial status. This provision does not, however, extend to conventional districts: see PARA 540 post.

7 Ibid s 16 (1) (b), (c): see PARA 864 post. Where a part of a parish in which there is no church used for public worship is wholly surrounded by another parish the bishop may, after consultation with the pastoral committee and with the consents of the interested parties, submit of his own motion to the Church Commissioners proposals for including that part in the other parish: s 13 (4).

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(9) PARISHES/(i) Origin and Development of the Parochial System/538. Provisions relating to parish churches.

538. Provisions relating to parish churches.

Where a pastoral scheme creates a new parish or alters a parish¹, then (1) if there is one existing parish church² in the parish so created or altered, that church will be the parish church, unless the scheme designates another church as the parish church³; (2) if there are two or more existing parish churches in the parish so created or altered, the scheme may provide that the parish shall have more than one church with the status of a parish church, and the scheme must designate the church or churches which will have this status (the choice not being limited to the existing parish churches)⁴; (3) if there is no existing parish church in the parish so created or altered, but the Church Commissioners have already approved a church in the parish as suitable to be a parish church, that church will, on the coming into operation of the scheme or on its consecration (whichever last occurs), become the parish church⁵.

A pastoral scheme or order may substitute for a parish church of any parish another church situated in that parish which has been approved by the commissioners as suitable to be a parish church, whether or not the parish is otherwise affected by the scheme or order⁶.

1 See PARA 537 ante.

2 'Existing parish church' means a church which, immediately before the scheme comes into operation, is a parish church and is not declared redundant by the scheme: Pastoral Measure 1968, s 27 (1).

3 Ibid s 27 (1) (a).

4 Ibid s 27 (1) (b). Where by virtue of such a designation a parish has more than one parish church, then (1) the parishioners have the same rights of worship in each of the parish churches; (2) marriages may be solemnised in any of the parish churches, and the bishop may give directions (see the Marriage Act 1949, s 23; Pastoral Measure 1968, Sch. 3 para 14 (3)) as to where banns are to be published and marriages solemnised; (3) burial rights are not affected by the designation (but are governed by Sch. 3 para 15); (4) the powers, duties and liabilities of the parochial church council of the parish extend to each of the parish churches; (5) two churchwardens are to be appointed for each of the parish churches (the Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964 applies to each pair separately), but they will all be churchwardens of the whole parish, except insofar as they arrange to perform separate duties in relation to the separate parish churches; and the pastoral scheme may make such other adaptations or modifications of enactments or Measures relating to parish churches (including the foregoing provisions) as may be necessary or expedient: Pastoral Measure 1968, s 27 (3).

5 Ibid s 27 (1) (c). In any church designated by a pastoral scheme as a parish church or becoming a parish church under s 27, it is lawful to publish banns and solemnise marriages and to perform all other offices which may be performed in parish church; and a pastoral scheme may provide certain specified matters (ie transfer of registers or other documents and determination of claims to sittings etc.): s 27 (6).

6 Ibid ss 27 (4), 38 (h). If the bishop is of opinion that proposals should be submitted to the commissioners for the substitution for a parish church of some other church in the parish approved by them as suitable for a parish church, or for altering the name of any benefice or parish, being proposals which could be implemented under Part II (ss. 16-41) by pastoral order, and is satisfied, after consulting the pastoral committee and any parochial church councils affected that no other interested party would be likely to object, he may of his own motion formulate and submit such proposals, which have effect as if they had been submitted under s 3 (6) (see PARA 878 post): s 13 (5). As to pastoral schemes and orders, see PARA 856 et seq post; and as to provision for a new church by pastoral scheme, see PARA 856 post.

538 Provisions relating to parish churches

TEXT AND NOTES--Consolidated, with amendments, in Pastoral Measure 1983; see generally s 27.

TEXT AND NOTES 1-5--Now a pastoral scheme may, in relation to any parish, including a new parish to be created by the scheme or a parish the area of which is to be altered thereby (1) designate as the parish church or as an additional parish church, or as parish churches or additional parish churches, any church or churches in the parish; (2) provide for a church in the parish which immediately before the scheme comes into operation is a parish church to cease to be a parish church; (3) provide for a new church and for it to become, after its approval by the bishop, after consultation with the diocesan advisory committee and the pastoral committee, as suitable to be a parish church and its consecration, the parish church, or an additional parish church, of the parish either in substitution for an existing parish church or otherwise; (4) require the bishop to notify the commissioners of his approval of a building or church as suitable to be a parish church and of its consecration: 1983 Measure s 27(1) (amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 Sch 6 para 3).

The powers referred to above are also exercisable by pastoral order: s 37(1)(g), as renumbered by Team and Group Ministries Measure 1995 s 5.

The designation by a pastoral scheme as a parish church of a building which immediately before the scheme comes into operation is not a parish church will not take effect unless and until it has been approved by the bishop, after consultation with the diocesan advisory committee and the pastoral committee, as suitable to be a parish church and, if necessary, the building has been consecrated: 1983 Measure s 27(2) (amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 Sch 6 para 3).

If the area of a parish is altered by a pastoral scheme but no provision with respect to the churches in that area is made by the scheme, every church in that area will have the same status on and after the date on which the scheme comes into operation as it had immediately before that date: 1983 Measure s 27(3).

NOTE 4--These provisions, other than head (5), now apply where by virtue of a designation made by a pastoral scheme or otherwise a parish has more than one parish church: ibid s 27(5) (amended by the Churchwardens Measure 2001 s 15(2), Sch 3). The scheme may also make such adaptations or modifications of enactments or Measures relating to churchwardens as may be necessary or expedient: 1983 Measure s 27(5) (as amended).

539. Parishes without parish churches.

In the event of a parish having no parish church¹ the bishop must make provision for public worship according to the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England by licensing one or more buildings or parts of buildings for such worship², and he may designate any building or parts of a building so licensed as the parish centre of worship³. For the purposes of the law of marriage and for other legal requirements affecting parish churches a building or part of a building so designated is deemed to be the parish church⁴.

Where, in a parish which has no parish church, a church is approved by the Church Commissioners as suitable to be a parish church and is consecrated, it becomes the parish church of that parish⁵. A pastoral scheme may provide for a new church, and, after its approval by the commissioners as suitable for a parish church and its consecration, for it to become the parish church either in substitution for an existing parish church or otherwise⁶.

1 See the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 16 (4), which enables provision to be made by pastoral scheme for the creation of a new parish with full parochial status notwithstanding that the parish so created will have no parish church when the provision comes into operation; see also PARA 864 post. Another situation in which a parish may exist without a parish church is where the parish church has been declared redundant: see s 28 (2), and PARA 1119 post.

3 Ibid s 29 (2). Any such designation is revocable (s. 29 (3)). The designation or revocation must be under seal and registered in the diocesan registry, and public notice of it must be given in the local press: s 29 (4).

4 Ibid s 29 (2): see PARA 1006 post. The parties to a marriage are, however, given the option of recourse to the parish church of an adjoining parish: s 29 (2) proviso (a); and see the Marriage Act 1949, ss 6 (3), 15 (2). Designation of a building or part of a building under the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 29 (2), does not make it subject to the faculty jurisdiction, but the bishop may, under the Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964, s 6, direct that it shall be so subject: Pastoral Measure 1968, s 29 (2) proviso (b); see PARA 1309 post.

5 Ibid s 27 (2). As to consequential matters (marriages, custody of register, claims to sittings etc.), see s 27 (6).

539 Parishes without parish churches

TEXT AND NOTES 1-4--Consolidated, with amendments, in Pastoral Measure 1983; see s 29.

Where a parish has no church, the bishop must make provision for public worship according to the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England by licensing one or more buildings or parts of buildings for such worship: 1983 Measure s 29(1); Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1992 Sch 3 para 19. He may designate any church in the parish, other than a parish church, or any building or part of a building licensed for public worship in any parish, as a parish centre of worship and thereupon, but subject to s 29(3), (4), for the purposes of the Marriage Act 1949 and 1983 Measure Sch 3 para 14, any other enactment, provision of a Measure (including the 1983 Measure), rule or law requiring or authorising any service or ceremony to be held or notices to be affixed or other thing done in or at the parish church or a parish church, a church building or part of a building so designated is deemed, while the designation is in force, to be a parish church: 1983 Measure s 29(2) (amended by the Churchwardens Measure 2001 s 15(2), Sch 3).

Where a church, building or part of a building in a parish has been so designated and the parish has no parish church, then, if the persons to be married so elect, they may proceed under Marriage Act 1949 ss 6, 15 as if the church, building or part had not been so designated; and these provisions have effect notwithstanding that there is in the parish a church or chapel licensed for marriages or a church or chapel in which divine service is usually solemnised every Sunday: 1983 Measure s 29(3). A building or part of a building so designated is not by virtue only of the designation subject to the faculty jurisdiction, but without prejudice to the power of the bishop under Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964 s 6 to direct that it is to be so subject: 1983 Measure s 29(4).

A designation under these provisions may be revoked by the bishop, but without prejudice to the continuation in force of any licence thereunder, if the bishop thinks fit: s 29(5). Any such designation or revocation must be under seal and registered in the registry of the diocese, and the registrar of the diocese must give public notice of it in one or more newspapers circulating in the locality: s 29(6).

540. Conventional districts.

A conventional district is not a parish, but is an area placed, by agreement between the incumbent or incumbents of the parish or parishes in which the district is situated and the bishop, under the care of a curate in charge, licensed by the bishop, who is responsible for the care of souls in the district¹. The arrangement requires renewal with every change of incumbency in the parish or parishes. Conventional districts are normally formed, often as a result of housing development, in anticipation of their subsequently becoming new parishes. The parishioners remain parishioners of the original parish or parishes, although the bishop may license a chapel in the district for marriages of persons residing in the district², and the annual parochial church meeting or meetings may make a scheme for the election of a district church council for the district³. In the Pastoral Measure 1968 'Parish' does not include a conventional district⁴, but 'parish' in the Church Representation Rules does include a conventional district; and consequently it can have churchwardens⁵, and may have its own parochial church council separate from that of the parish to which it belongs⁷.

(iii) Churchwardens

A. APPOINTMENT AND TENURE OF OFFICE

542. The office of churchwarden.

The office of churchwarden is of ancient origin. Its functions formerly extended into the sphere of civil administration, and in ancient parishes church membership was not an essential qualification¹. The office is now, for practical purposes, a purely ecclesiastical one, and the holder of it must normally be a communicant member of the Church of England²; but some vestige of the churchwardens' role as representatives of the general body of parishioners is to be found in the provision that persons resident in the parish who are local government electors are entitled to take part in the choosing of churchwardens³. It was formerly the legal duty of any householder who was not disqualified or exempted to serve as churchwarden if appointed, but a person may not be chosen as a churchwarden today unless he has signified his consent to serve⁴.

The number, qualifications, appointment and tenure of office of churchwardens are largely governed by the Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964⁵. The Measure contains, however, certain saving provisions⁶, in particular as to existing customs regulating the number of churchwardens or the manner in which they are chosen⁷.

1 See Phillimore, Ecclesiastical Law (2nd Edn) 1463 et seq.

2 See PARA 543 post.

3 See PARA 545 post.

4 See PARA 543 post.

5 The Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964 (which has been amended by the Church Representation Rules, r 11 (2), contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3) does not, except for the provision requiring churchwardens to be actual communicant members of the Church of England, apply to the churchwardens of the Guild Churches in the City of London: see the Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964, s 10, and PARA 605 post. The Measure does not extend to the Channel Islands or to the Isle of Man unless special provision is made under the Channel Islands (Church Legislation) Measures 1931 and 1957 or by Act of Tynwald, as the case may be: Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964, s 15 (2); and see PARAS 388, 402 ante. As to misconduct by churchwardens, see PARA 547 post.

6 See ibid s 12, which includes a provision that, save in the case of Guild Churches (see note 5 supra), nothing in the Measure shall be deemed to amend, repeal or affect any local Act or any scheme made under any enactment affecting the churchwardens of a parish (s. 12 (1)); but for the purposes of the Measure, the Parish of Manchester Division Act 1850 is deemed to be a general Act: Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964, s 12 (1) proviso.

7 Ibid s 12 (2); and see PARA 543 note 1 post, and 544 note 3 post. 'Existing custom' means a custom existing at the commencement of the Measure (27th February 1964) which has continued for a period including the last forty years before that date: s 13. Such customs are special in each case and require to be clearly proved: R v Cough (1848) 3 New Mag Cas 47; and see CUSTOM AND USAGE vol 12(1) (Reissue) PARAS 626-628; CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARAS 780-781. Customs concerning the number of churchwardens are illustrated by R v Hinckley Inhabitants (1810) 12 East 361 at 365; R v Earl Shilton Inhabitants (1818) 1 B & Ald 275; R v Catesby Inhabitants (1824) 2 B & C 814 (one churchwarden only); R v Marsh (1836) 5 Ad & El 468; Bremner v Hull (1866) LR 1 CP 748; Vicar of St Sepulchre v Churchwardens of St Sepulchre (1879) 5 PD 64 (more than two churchwardens). Customs concerning the manner of appointment were considered in Hubbard v Penrice (1746)

TEXT AND NOTES 5-7--Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964 replaced: Churchwardens Measure 2001.

NOTE 5--1964 Measures 10 now the 2001 Measure s 9, which defines for these purposes 'actual communicant member of the Church of England' as a member of the Church of England who is confirmed or ready and desirous of being confirmed and has received Communion according to the use of the Church of England at least three times during the twelve months preceding the date of his election or appointment. 1964 Measure s 15(2) now the 2001 Measure s 16(3).

NOTE 6--1964 Measure s 12(1) now the 2001 Measure s 11(1).

NOTE 7--1964 Measure s 12(2) now the 2001 Measure s 11(2) which applies subject to the following provisions. A meeting of the parishioners of the parish may pass a resolution abolishing any existing custom which regulates the number of church wardens of the parish or the manner in which the churchwardens of the parish are chosen: s 12(1). Where any such resolution is passed, the existing custom to which it relates ceases to have effect on the date on which the next meeting of parishioners by which the churchwardens are to be elected is held: s 12(2). In the case of an existing custom which involves a person other than the minister in the choice of the churchwardens, a resolution passed under s 12(1) must not be passed without the written consent of that person: s 12(3). 'Existing custom' now means a custom existing at the coming into force of the Measure (1 January 2002) which has continued for a period commencing before 1 January 1925: s 13(1). For the meaning of 'minister' see PARA 544 NOTE 6.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(9) PARISHES/(iii) Churchwardens/A. APPOINTMENT AND TENURE OF OFFICE/543. Number and qualifications of churchwardens.

543. Number and qualifications of churchwardens.

There must normally be two¹ churchwardens of every parish². They must be chosen from persons who are resident³ in the parish or whose names are on the church electoral roll of the parish⁴, and they must be actual communicant members of the Church of England⁵ except where the bishop otherwise permits, and of twenty-one years of age and upwards⁶. No person may be chosen as a churchwarden unless he has signified his consent to serve⁷.

Several categories of disqualified persons have been recognised in the past, and the existing law on this subject has remained unaffected by recent legislation⁸. Aliens are, it seems, still disqualified⁹; probably also Jews¹⁰, and possibly persons convicted of certain offences¹¹.

1 In the case of a particular parish this is, however, subject to any existing custom which regulates the number of churchwardens: (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964, s 12 (2); and see PARA 542 note 7 ante. Another exception occurs where, by virtue of a designation contained in a pastoral scheme, a parish has more than one parish church; in this case two churchwardens must be appointed for each of the parish churches, and the Measure of 1964 applies separately to each pair of churchwardens, but all the churchwardens are churchwardens of the whole parish except insofar as they may arrange to perform separate duties in relation to the several parish churches: Pastoral Measure 1968, s 27 (3) (e). As to deputy churchwardens, see PARA 549 post.

2 Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964, s 1 (1). In this Measure 'parish' means (1) an ecclesiastical parish, and (2) a district which is constituted a conventional district for the cure of souls (see PARA 540 ante) and has a separate curate licensed to it: s 13; Church Representation Rules, r 44 (1), contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3.

3 'Residence' is not defined in the Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964, but some guidance as to its meaning in this context may be obtained by reference to analogous cases. Thus, for purposes of qualification for entry on the church electoral roll of a parish, words importing residence include residence of a regular but not a casual nature: Church Representation Rules, rr 1 (2) (d), 44 (5). See also Herbert v Byrne [1964] 1 All ER 882, [1964] 1 WLR 519, CA (a case under the Rent Acts), where Lord Denning MR stated at 886 and at 527, respectively, that for the purpose of establishing that a tenant is in occupation of a house as his home it need not be shown that he is there with his family all the time or that it is his only home.

4 Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964, s 1 (2). As to the church electoral roll, see PARA 591 post.

5 For the meaning of 'actual communicant member of the Church of England', see ibid s 13, applying the definition in PARA 420 note 1 ante.

6 Ibid s 1 (3). See however s 12 (3), which provides that nothing in the Measure affects a churchwarden in office before the passing of the Measure during the period for which he was chosen.

7 Ibid s 1 (4).

8 See ibid s 12 (4), which provides that nothing in the Measure is deemed to authorise the choice of any person as churchwarden who under the existing law is disqualified from being chosen for that office. As to the possibility of Roman Catholics or nonconformists being churchwardens, see PARAS 1395, 1401 post.

11 In Anthony v Seger (1789) 1 Hag Con 9, Sir William Scott expressed the opinion that the Ordinary would be bound to reject a person convicted of felony. See also Phillimore, Ecclesiastical Law (2nd Edn) 1469. Some text writers have included conviction of fraud or perjury among the grounds of disqualification (see Cripps, Church and Clergy (8th Edn) 160), but the authority for this proposition seems less clear. In the Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1921, s 15 (2) (repealed), it was provided that a conviction which would render a clergyman incapable of holding preferment under the Clergy Discipline Act 1892, s 1 (repealed), would disqualify a person from being elected or being a churchwarden, but no such provision was included in the Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956.

With certain exceptions a convicted person is treated for all purposes, after a rehabilitation period, as if he had not committed the offence which was the subject of the conviction: see the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974, and SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 660 et seq.

UPDATE

543 Number and qualifications of churchwardens

TEXT AND NOTES--1964 Measure replaced: Churchwardens Measure 2001. Transitional provision is made so that nothing in the 2001 Measure affects a churchwarden in office before 1 January 2002 during the period for which he was chosen: s 14, Sch 1 para 1.

NOTE 1--1964 Measure s 12(2) now the 2001 Measure s 11(2) (see PARA 542 NOTE 7). 1968 Measure s 27(3)(e) now the 2001 Measure s 1(2)(a). 'Pastoral scheme' has the same meaning as in the Pastoral Measure 1983 s 87(1): 2001 Measure s 13(1). A church building or part of a building designated as a parish centre of worship under the Pastoral Measure 1983 s 29(2) (see PARA 539 NOTE 3) is, subject to the provisions of s 29(4), deemed, while the designation is in force, to be a parish church: 2001 Measure s 1(2)(b).

NOTE 2--1964 Measure s 1(1) now the 2001 Measure s 1(1). Church Representation Rules r 44 now r 54; SI 1994/3118. Words 'and has a separate curate licensed to it' in r 54(1) revoked: SI 1980/178. In relation to the Diocese in Europe, a chaplaincy which is constituted as part of the diocese is also included in the definition: r 54(1). 1964 Measure s 13 now the 2001 Measure s 13(1) (and see PARA 540).

TEXT AND NOTES 3-7--Replaced. The churchwardens of every parish must be chosen from persons who have been baptised and (1) whose names are on the church electoral role; (2) who are actual communicants; (3) who are twenty-one years of age or upwards; and (4) who are not disqualified under the 2001 Measure ss 2, 3 (see NOTES 8-11): s 1(3). 'Actual communicant' has the same meaning as that assigned to it in the Church Representation Rules r 54(1) (see PARA 420 TEXT AND NOTE 1): 2001 Measure s 13(1).

If it appears to the bishop, in the case of any particular person who is not qualified by virtue of heads (1)-(3), that there are exceptional circumstances which justify a departure from the requirements of those provisions, the bishop may permit that person to hold the office of churchwarden notwithstanding that those requirements are not met: s 1(4). Any such permission applies only to the period of office next following the date on which the permission is given: s 1(4) proviso. 'Bishop' means the diocesan bishop concerned: s 13(1).

No person may be chosen as churchwarden of a parish for any period of office unless he (a) has signified consent to serve as such; and (b) has not signified consent to serve as such for the same period of office in any other parish (not being a related parish), or, if such consent has been signified and the meeting of the parishioners to elect churchwardens of that other parish has been held, was not chosen as churchwarden of that other parish: s 1(5). For these purposes, 'related parish' means a parish belonging to the benefice to which the first-mentioned parish belongs, or belonging to a benefice held in plurality with the benefice to which the first-mentioned parish belongs, or having the same minister as the first-mentioned parish: s 1(5). For the meaning of 'minister' see PARA 544.

In relation to the filling of a casual vacancy among the churchwardens, the reference in head (b) to the same period of office is to be construed as a reference to a period of office which includes the period for which the casual vacancy is to be filled: s 1(6).

NOTES 8-11--The 2001 Measure disqualifies the following persons from being chosen for the office of churchwarden: (1) a person who is disqualified from being a charity trustee under the Charities Act 1993 s 72(1) (see CHARITIES vol 8 (2010) PARA 273) and the disqualification is not for the time being subject to a general waiver by the Charity Commissioners under s 72(4) or to a waiver by them under that provision in respect of all ecclesiastical charities established for purposes relating to the parish concerned; (2) a person who has been convicted of any offence mentioned in the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 Sch 1 (see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(3) (2006 Reissue) PARA 1164 NOTE 2), including an offence which, by virtue of any enactment, is to be treated as being included in any such reference in all or any of the provisions of that Act; and (3) a person who is disqualified from holding the office of churchwarden under the Incumbents (Vacation of Benefices) Measure 1977 (No 1) s 10(6) (see PARA 733F): 2001 Measure s 2(1)-(3). For the purposes of head (1), 'ecclesiastical charity' has the same meaning as that assigned to that expression in the Local Government Act 1894 (see CHARITIES vol 8 (2010) PARA 264 NOTE 4): 2001 Measure s 2(1).

Without prejudice to s 2, a person is disqualified from being chosen for the office of churchwarden when that person has served as a churchwarden of the same parish for six successive periods of office until the annual meeting of the parishioners to elect churchwardens in the next year but one following the date on which that person vacated office at the end of the last such period; provided that a meeting of the parishioners may by resolution decide that this provision does not apply in relation to the parish concerned: s 3. Any such resolution may be revoked by a subsequent meeting of the parishioners: s 3.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(9) PARISHES/(iii) Churchwardens/A. APPOINTMENT AND TENURE OF OFFICE/544. Procedure for choosing churchwardens.

544. Procedure for choosing churchwardens.

The churchwardens of a parish must be chosen annually¹ not later than 30th April in each year², in accordance with the Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964 and any other Measure, Act or scheme affecting churchwardens³. According to the procedure prescribed by the Measure of 1964 the primary method of choice⁴ is by the joint consent⁵ of the minister⁶ of the parish and a meeting of the parishioners⁷; but if that method is not effective, either because the minister and the meeting cannot agree on the choice of both churchwardens by joint consent or because, after due opportunity has been given, no motions or insufficient motions have been moved in accordance with the prescribed procedure⁸, then one churchwarden must be appointed by the minister and the other must then be elected by the meeting⁹.

A casual vacancy among the churchwardens may be filled at any time by a person chosen¹⁰ in the same manner as was the churchwarden in whose place he is appointed¹¹.

1 No parish can legally be without churchwardens, and their appointment can be compelled by order of mandamus: R v Wix Inhabitants (1832) 2 B & Ad 197. For the meaning of 'parish', see PARA 543 note 2 ante.

2 Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964, s 2 (1); Church Representation Rules, r 11 (2) (a), contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3. As to the bishop's power to alter or extend the time, see PARA 548 post.

3 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon E1 para 1. See also PARA 542 note 6 ante. In the case of any parish where there is an existing custom (see PARA 542 note 7 ante, and note 9 infra) which regulates the manner in which the churchwardens are chosen, nothing in the Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964 affects that custom (s. 12 (2)), and if in accordance with that custom any churchwarden is chosen by the vestry of that parish, either alone or jointly with any other person or persons, that churchwarden is to be chosen by the meeting of the parishioners (see PARA 545 post), either alone or jointly with the other person or persons, as the case may be (s. 12 (2) proviso).

4 No person, however, is deemed to have been chosen as a churchwarden by this method unless both churchwardens have been so chosen: ibid s 2 (2) proviso.

5 This joint consent is deemed to have been signified (1) if any motion stating the persons to be chosen or the name of either of them is declared by the person presiding over the meeting to have been carried, and (2) if in respect of any such motion the minister has announced his consent to the choice of the person or persons named in it, either before the putting of the motion or immediately upon the declaration of its result: ibid s 2 (2).

6 'Minister' means (1) the incumbent of a parish; (2) a curate licensed to the charge of a parish or a minister acting as priest-in-charge of a parish in respect of which rights of presentation are suspended; and (3) a vicar in a team ministry to the extent that the duties of a minister are assigned to him by a scheme under the Pastoral Measure 1968 or his licence from the bishop: Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964, s 13; Church Representation Rules, r 44 (1). During any period when there is no minister both the churchwardens must be elected by the meeting of the parishioners: Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964, s 2 (4): see PARA 545 post.

7 Ibid s 2 (2). As to the meeting of the parishioners, see PARA 545 post.

8 Ie in accordance with the provisions of ibid s 2 (2), respecting the signification of joint consent: see note 5 supra.

9 Ibid s 2 (3). Recourse to this alternative method of choice would not ordinarily be justified unless an attempt had first been made to choose the churchwardens by joint consent under s 2 (2). There is, it is true, a saving in respect of existing custom (see note 3 supra) but, according to an opinion of the Legal Board, the fact that for many years it has been the practice in a parish for the minister to nominate one churchwarden does not necessarily indicate or prove an 'existing custom', for the purposes of this Measure; rather it normally indicates an assumed disagreement between the two appointing parties (as originally provided for in Canons Ecclesiastical (1603) 89 (repealed), and the former practice may continue in a modified form under the new procedure laid down in the Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964, ss 2, 3: see Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) II/92.

UPDATE

544 Procedure for choosing churchwardens

TEXT AND NOTES--1964 Measure replaced: Churchwardens Measure 2001.

NOTE 2--1964 Measure s 2(1) (as amended) now the 2001 Measure s 4(1).

NOTE 3--1964 Measure s 12(2) now the 2001 Measure s 11(2) (see PARA 542 NOTE 7).

TEXT AND NOTES 4-9--Replaced. According to the procedure prescribed by the 2001 Measure, the primary method of choice is now by election by a meeting of the parishioners: s 4(2). Candidates for election at the meeting must be nominated and seconded in writing by persons entitled to attend the meeting and each nomination paper must include a statement, signed by the person nominated, to the effect that that person is willing to serve as a churchwarden and is not disqualified under s 2(1)-(3) (see PARA 543 NOTES 8-11): s 4(3). A nomination is not valid unless the nomination paper is received by the minister of the parish before the commencement of the meeting, and, in the case of a person who is not qualified by virtue of s 1(3)(a)-(c) (see PARA 543 TEXT AND NOTES 3-7 heads (1)-(3)), the bishop's permission was given under s 1(4) (see PARA 543 TEXT AND NOTES 3-7) before the nomination paper is received by the minister of the parish: s 4(4). 'Minister' now has the same meaning as in what is now the Church Representation Rules r 54(1) except that, where a special responsibility for pastoral care in respect of the parish in question has been assigned to a member of the team in a team ministry under the Pastoral Measure 1983 s 20(8A) (see PARA 870) but a special cure of souls in respect of the parish has not been assigned to a vicar in the team ministry by a scheme under that measure or by his licence from the bishop (see PARA 690), it means that member: 2001 Measure s 13(1). For the meaning of 'bishop' see PARA 543.

If it appears to the minister of the parish that the election of any particular person nominated might give rise to serious difficulties between the minister and that person in the carrying out of their respective functions the minister may, before the election is conducted, make a statement to the effect that only one churchwarden is to be elected by the meeting; in that event one churchwarden is to be appointed by the minister from among the persons nominated, the name of the person so appointed being announced before the election is conducted, and the other is then to be elected by the meeting: s 4(5).

During any period when there is no minister, s 4(4) applies with the substitution for the words 'minister of the parish' of the words 'churchwarden by whom the notice convening the meeting was signed', and s 4(5) will not apply: s 4(6).

Where by virtue of any custom existing on 1 January 1965 (ie the date on which the 1964 Measure came into force), the choice of a churchwarden was, under the 1964 Measure s 12(2), required to be made by the meeting of the parishioners jointly with another person or persons, that custom is deemed to be an existing custom for the purposes of the 2001 Measure: s 13(2).

TEXT AND NOTES 10, 11--Replaced. A person may be chosen to fill a casual vacancy among the churchwardens at any time: s 4(7). Any person chosen to fill a casual vacancy is to be chosen in the same manner as was the churchwarden whose place he is to fill except that, where the churchwarden concerned was appointed by the minister and the minister has ceased to hold office, the new churchwarden to fill the casual vacancy is to be elected by a meeting of the parishioners: s 4(8).

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(9) PARISHES/(iii) Churchwardens/A. APPOINTMENT AND TENURE OF OFFICE/545. Meeting of the parishioners.

545. Meeting of the parishioners.

A meeting of the parishioners for the purpose of choosing churchwardens¹ is a joint meeting of the persons whose names are entered on the church electoral roll² of the parish³ and the persons resident⁴ in the parish whose names are entered on a register of local government electors by reason of that residence⁵. The meeting is in practice usually held on the same occasion as the annual parochial church meeting⁶ and immediately before it, but in law the two meetings are distinct⁷. The meeting of the parishioners must be convened by the minister or the churchwardens of the parish⁸. The minister, if present, or, if he is not present, a chairman chosen by the meeting, must preside⁹. The meeting has power to adjourn, and to determine its own rules of procedure¹⁰.

Where the election of a churchwarden takes place at the meeting of the parishioners, either because there has been no joint consent¹¹ or because there is no minister¹², the election must be conducted, announced and notified in the same manner as elections at annual parochial church meetings, except that all persons entitled to attend the meeting of the parishioners other than the minister are entitled to nominate and vote at the election of the churchwarden¹³.

2 See PARA 591 post.

3 For the meaning of 'parish', see PARA 543 note 2 ante.

4 For the meaning of 'resident', see PARA 543 note 3 ante.

5 Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964, s 3 (1).

6 As to annual parochial church meetings, see PARA 563 post.

7 In particular, the qualifications for attendance and participation are wider in the case of a meeting of the parishioners than in the case of the annual parochial church meeting: see the text supra, and cf. para 542 ante, 563 post.

8 Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964, s 3 (2). A notice stating the place, day and hour of the meeting (s. 3 (3)), signed by the minister or a churchwarden (s. 3 (2)), must be affixed on or near the principal door of the parish church and of every other building licensed for public worship in the parish for a period including the last two Sundays before the meeting: s 3 (4). 'Public worship' means public worship according to the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England: s 13; Church Representation Rules, r 44 (1), contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3.

9 Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation Measure 1964, s 3 (5). The minister is not entitled to nominate or vote at the election of a churchwarden, but in respect of other business (eg procedural matters) he is free to exercise a vote, including a casting vote: see note 13 infra, and s 3 (6), excluded in relation to the election of churchwardens by the Church Representation Rules, r 11 (2) (c).

10 Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964, s 3 (7). A person appointed by the meeting must act as clerk and record the minutes: s 3 (8).

11 See PARA 544 ante.

12 See PARA 544 note 6 ante.

13 Church Representation Rules r 11 (1). As to the conduct of elections at annual parochial church meetings, see r 10, and PARA 566 post. As regards appeals, the Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure

1964, s 6, originally made separate provision for appeals in the case of elections of churchwardens, but s 6 was repealed by the Church Representation Rules, r 11 (2) (b), presumably because it was thought that r 11 (1) would have the effect of making r 36 applicable to elections of churchwardens. On that assumption, any person aggrieved has a right of appeal against the allowance or disallowance of a vote at such an election or against the result of it, and the procedure would be similar to that which is applicable in the case of an election to a diocesan or deanery synod: r 36 (1) (c), (d); see PARAS 426, 512 ante.

TEXT AND NOTES--1964 Measure s 3 replaced: Churchwardens Measure 2001 s 5.

TEXT AND NOTE 8--1964 Measure s 3(2) now 2001 Measure s 5(2), which provides that the meeting must be convened by the minister or, during any period where there is no minister or when the minister is unwilling or unable to do so, the meeting must be convened by the churchwardens of the parish by a notice signed by the minister or a churchwarden as the case may be. For the meaning of 'minister' see PARA 544. Church Representation Rules r 44 now r 54; SI 1994/3118.

TEXT AND NOTES 9-13--Church Representation Rules r 11 now r 13; SI 1994/3118. Church Representation Rules r 13 (as renumbered) substituted: SI 2009/2129.

NOTE 9--See now the 2001 Measure s 5(6), which provides that, in case of an equal division of votes on any question other than one to determine an election of a churchwarden, the chairman of the meeting of the parishioners does not have a second or casting vote and the motion on that question is to be treated as lost.

NOTE 13--Church Representation Rules r 36(1)(c), (d) now r 44(1)(a), (b); SI 1989/2094, SI 1994/3118, which is also applicable to elections of churchwardens.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(9) PARISHES/(iii) Churchwardens/A. APPOINTMENT AND TENURE OF OFFICE/546. Admission of churchwardens to office.

546. Admission of churchwardens to office.

At a time and place to be appointed by the Ordinary, as soon as may be after 30th April in each year, each person chosen for the office of churchwarden must appear before the Ordinary, or his substitute duly appointed, and be admitted to the office of churchwarden after subscribing the declaration that he will faithfully and diligently perform the duties of his office, and making the same in the presence of the Ordinary or his substitute¹. No person chosen for the office of churchwarden actually becomes churchwarden until he has thus been admitted to office². Subject to the provisions governing the resignation or vacation of their office³, the churchwardens so chosen and admitted will continue in their office until they, or others as their successors, are admitted in like manner by the Ordinary⁴.

1 Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964, s 7 (1); Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon E1 para 2 (amended by Amending Canon No. 1). The bishop is the Ordinary, and in years of episcopal visitation the admission of churchwardens is conducted by him or his chancellor or a surrogate: R v Sowter [1901] 1 KB 396, CA. In other years it is conducted by the archdeacon, normally at the time of his visitation. As to visitations, episcopal and archidiaconal, see PARA 490 et seq, 500 ante. Nothing in the Measure of 1964 appears to override or affect the practice whereby churchwardens make their declarations en bloc: see Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) II/90.

2 Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964, s 7 (1). The admission is, it seems, a ministerial, not a judicial act, and the Ordinary has no discretion to judge of the fitness of the person chosen by the parishioners, although he would be justified in refusing to admit one who lacked the qualifications required by law. The appropriate remedy for refusal to admit would apparently be an application for an order of mandamus: R v Bishop of Sarum [1916] 1 KB 466; see also R v Rice (1697) 1 Ld Raym 138; R v Twitty (1702) 2 Salk 433; R v Dr Harris (1763) 1 Wm Bl 430; Anon (1814) 2 Chit 254; R v Williams (1828) 8 B & C 681; Ex parte Winfield (1835) 3 Ad & El 614; R v Archdeacon of Middlesex (1835) 3 Ad & El 615; Ex parte Duffield (1836) 3 Ad & El 617; Searell v Rowlandson (1888) Trist 50; Ex parte Lowe (1835) 4 Dowl 15.

3 See PARA 547 post.

4 Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964, s 7 (2); Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon E1 para 3. It is implied that churchwardens are eligible for reappointment at the expiration of their year of office, and that in cases of such reappointment they are required to be readmitted, with renewal of the declaration: cf. Warner's Case (1619) Cro Jac 532; Stoughton v Reynolds (1736) 2 Stra 1045; and see Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) III/20.

UPDATE

546 Admission of churchwardens to office

TEXT AND NOTES--1964 Measure s 7 now the Churchwardens Measure 2001 s 6.

TEXT AND NOTES 1, 2--1964 Measure s 7(1) now 2001 Measure s 6(1) which refers to the bishop instead of the Ordinary and to 31 July in each year instead of 30 April in each year, and provides that each person chosen for the office of churchwarden must now also subscribe a declaration to the effect that he will faithfully and diligently perform his duties and also that he is not disqualified under s 2(1)-(3) (see PARA 543 NOTES 8-11). For the meaning of 'bishop' see PARA 543.

TEXT AND NOTES 3, 4--Replaced. Subject to the provisions of the 2001 Measure, the term of office of the churchwardens so chosen and admitted continues until a date determined as follows: (1) in the case of a person who is chosen again as churchwarden at the next annual meeting of the parishioners (a) if so admitted for the next term of office by 31 July in the year in question, the date of the admission; or (b) if not so admitted for the next term of office by 31 July in the year in question, that date; and (2) in the case of a person who is not chosen again as churchwarden at the next annual meeting of the parishioners (i) if that person's successor in office is so admitted for the next term of office by 31 July in the year in question, the date of the admission; or (ii) if that person's successor in office is not so admitted for the next term of office by 31 July in the year in question, that date: s 6(2).

In the application of head (2) to any person, where there is doubt as to which of the new churchwardens is that person's successor in office the bishop may designate one of the new churchwardens as that person's successor for the purposes of that provision: s 6(2) proviso.

Where any person ceases to hold the office of churchwarden at the end of July in any year by virtue of head (1)(b) or (2)(ii), a casual vacancy in that office is to be deemed to have arisen: s 6(3).

In relation to the filling of a casual vacancy, the reference in s 6(1) to 31 July is to be construed as a reference to a date three months after the person who is to fill the vacancy is chosen or the date of the next annual meeting of the parishioners to elect churchwardens, whichever is the earlier: s 6(4).

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(9) PARISHES/(iii) Churchwardens/A. APPOINTMENT AND TENURE OF OFFICE/547. Resignation and vacation of churchwarden's office.

547. Resignation and vacation of churchwarden's office.

If a churchwarden wishes to resign his office he may, with the written consent of the minister¹ and any other churchwarden of the parish, resign his office by a written instrument addressed to the bishop, and if the bishop accepts his resignation his office is forthwith vacated². A churchwarden is not entitled to resign his office otherwise than in accordance with these provisions³.

The office of churchwarden is vacated if the churchwarden is not resident in the parish and if his name is not on the church electoral roll of the parish⁴.

Churchwardens who, at the expiration of their year of office, are not chosen for the ensuing year vacate their office when their successors are admitted⁵.

1 For the meaning of 'minister', see PARA 544 note 6 ante.

2 Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964, s 8 (1).

3 Ibid s 8 (2).

4 Ibid s 9. That is to say, his office is vacated if he lacks both the qualifications specified in s 1 (2); see PARA 543 ante. The Measure contains no provisions as to vacation of office in the event of death, incapacity or misconduct. A vacancy caused by the death of a churchwarden in office could no doubt be dealt with under the provisions relating to casual vacancies: see PARA 544 ante. In the case of incapacity through physical or mental infirmity, it is uncertain whether, in default of the churchwarden's resignation, his office could be declared vacant, or the appointment of an additional churchwarden authorised, under s 11 (1): see PARA 548 post. As to misconduct, the older authorities made it clear that if a churchwarden wasted the goods of the parish or was guilty of other misconduct in his office, he was liable to be removed from office by an ecclesiastical court: see Parish Clerk (1611) 13 Co Rep 70; 1 Bl Com (14th Edn) 381; Com Dig, Esglise (F 1); Dawe v Williams (1824) 2 Add 130 at 133-135; Fry and Greata v Treasure (1865) 2 Moo PCCNS 539 at 555; Ritchings v Cordingley (1868) LR 3 A & E 113 at 117, 118. However, this remedy is no longer available in view of the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 82 (2) (c), whereby the jurisdiction of consistory courts to hear and determine proceedings against lay officers of a church was abolished: see PARA 1266 post. It is doubtful whether removal of a churchwarden could be effected by any alternative procedure, for example by extra-judicial proceedings at a visitation (as to which see PARA 490 ante) or by resolution of an extraordinary meeting of the parishioners, although there is authority for the use of the latter procedure in the past: see Parish Clerk supra; Ayl Par 171; Watson, Clergyman's Law (4th Edn) 390; Phillimore, Ecclesiastical Law (2nd Edn) 1489.

547 Resignation and vacation of churchwarden's office

TEXT AND NOTES--1964 Measure now the Churchwardens Measure 2001.

TEXT AND NOTES 1-3--Replaced. A churchwarden who wishes to resign his office must serve written notice of his intention to resign on the bishop by post: 2001 Measure s 7(2). The resignation has effect and the office is vacated at the end of the period of two months following service of the notice on the bishop, or on such earlier date as may be determined by the bishop after consultation with the minister and any other churchwarden of the parish: s 7(3). A person may not resign the office of churchwarden otherwise than in accordance with these provisions: s 7(1). For the meaning of 'bishop' see PARA 543; and for the meaning of 'minister' see PARA 544.

TEXT AND NOTE 4--1964 Measure s 9 now the 2001 Measure s 8(1), which provides that the office of churchwarden is vacated if (1) the name of the person concerned is removed from the church electoral roll of the parish under the Church Representation Rules r 1 (see PARA 591); or (2) the name of the person concerned is not on a new church electoral roll of the parish prepared under r 2(4) (see PARA 594); or (3) the churchwarden becomes disqualified under the 2001 Measure s 2(1)-(3) (see PARA 543 NOTES 8-11). For these purposes a person who has been chosen for the office of churchwarden but has not yet been admitted to that office is deemed to hold that office, and the expressions 'office' and 'churchwarden' are to be construed accordingly: 2001 Measure s 8(2).

549. Deputy churchwardens.

Where a pastoral scheme establishes a team ministry¹, provision may be made in or under the scheme² for the election of deputy churchwardens for the church or place of worship³ of any district within the area of the team ministry⁴ and for assigning to them certain of the functions of the churchwardens of the parish concerned⁵.

Where, in a parish which has two or more churches or buildings licensed for public worship, the annual parochial church meeting⁶ makes a scheme providing for the election of a district church council for a district in which such a church or building is situated⁷, the scheme may also provide for the election or choice of one or two deputy churchwardens in respect of that church or building, and for the delegation to them of such functions of the churchwardens relating to it as the scheme may specify⁸.

2 The scheme may either make such provision itself or authorise the bishop to make it by instrument under his hand with the concurrence of the rector: Pastoral Measure 1968, Sch. 3 para 3 (2).

3 'Place of worship' in this context means a building or part of a building licensed for public worship according to the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England: ibid Sch. 3 para 3 (2).

4 Ibid Sch. 3 para 3 (2) (a).

5 Ibid Sch. 3 para 3 (2) (b). Provision may likewise be made for the election of a district church council (see PARA 871 post); the electing body is in each case the annual parochial church meeting: Sch. 3 para 3 (2).

B. CHURCHWARDENS' STATUS AND FUNCTIONS

550. Churchwardens as corporations.

Churchwardens are a quasi-corporation for the purpose of holding in perpetual succession the church's goods and also, in the City of London, for the purpose of holding land for ecclesiastical or parochial purposes¹. However, they must sue and be sued in their individual names and not by a corporate or official title, and they have no other legal incidents of a corporation². They can bring an action in their own names in respect of a matter which occurred during their predecessors' term of office³, but an action for a matter occurring in the discharge of their office cannot be brought against their successors⁴. The general rule is that both churchwardens must concur in bringing an action⁵ and doing any other official act⁶. However one churchwarden can apply for a faculty for alterations in the church⁷.

Churchwardens have frequently been responsible as trustees (usually in conjunction with the incumbent) for the holding and administration of property on charitable ecclesiastical trusts. To a large extent the duty of holding such property is now imposed by statute on the diocesan board of finance or other diocesan authority as custodian trustee⁸.

551. Extent of churchwardens' functions.

Most of the former functions of churchwardens have been transferred to the parochial church council¹, but churchwardens, if they are actual communicant members of the Church of England² and have their names on the church electoral roll of the parish³, are ex officio members of the parochial church council⁴. The present functions of churchwardens may be divided into their functions as officers of the Ordinary and their functions as guardians of the parish church and its services. As officers of the Ordinary⁵ churchwardens must present to the Ordinary the answers to such questions as are put to them⁶, and they have powers, duties and liabilities with respect to visitations⁷. As guardians of the parish church they are the owners of the movables of the church⁸ and their functions extend to every consecrated church and chapel within the parish which is not provided with separate wardens, and to the churchyard and its curtilage⁹. These functions include (1) the maintenance of order in the church and churchyard¹⁰; (2) the allocation of seats in the church¹¹; (3) the provision (with the advice and direction of the minister) of the bread and wine for communion¹²; (4) taking part in the collection and disposal of the alms at the offertory in the communion service¹³; and (5) special duties during a vacancy in the benefice¹⁴.

552. Churchwardens as officers of the Ordinary.

The churchwardens when admitted are officers of the Ordinary¹. In former times churchwardens, questmen and sidesmen who were admitted by the Ordinary or his representative² had the duty of presenting to the Ordinary in his court all those in the parish guilty of ecclesiastical offences³. The duties of questmen and sidesmen in this respect have, by custom, devolved upon churchwardens, but in practice the extent of this duty of presentment is now very limited. In each year, upon the visitation of the Ordinary or his representative (usually the archdeacon⁴), churchwardens must present whatever is amiss or irregular in their parish⁵. At any time the Ordinary can make inquiry of them as to parochial matters and at any time they can inform the Ordinary of any such irregularities or derelictions of duty as need his intervention⁶. It is for the churchwardens to ensure that when a faculty or an archdeacon's certificate is required by law the necessary action is taken to obtain it⁷.

The plate, ornaments and other movable goods of the church are in the legal ownership of the churchwardens as a quasi-corporation¹, and they are the persons to take proceedings for the recovery of those goods if they are stolen or improperly removed². While the incumbent is the proper custodian of the keys of the church⁴, the churchwardens have a right of free access for the performance of their duties⁵.

553A. Recording of information about churches.

In every parish¹ the churchwardens must (1) compile and maintain a full terrier of all lands appertaining to the church and a full inventory of all articles appertaining to the church, and (2) insert in a log-book maintained for the purpose a full note of all alterations, additions and repairs to, and other events affecting, the church and the lands and articles appertaining thereto and of the location of any other documents relating to such alterations, additions, repairs and events which are not kept in the log-book². In carrying out this duty, the churchwardens must act in consultation with the minister³. They must send a copy of the inventory to a person designated by the bishop as soon as practicable and must notify that person of any alterations in accordance with the bishop's directions⁴.

Any person or body carrying out functions of care and conservation must have due regard to the role of a church as a local centre of worship and mission⁵.

1 These provisions apply to each church in a parish containing more than one church: Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 s 4(5).

In every parish¹ the churchwardens must (i) at least once in every year inspect the fabric of the church and all articles appertaining to the church, and (ii) in every year deliver to the parochial church council, and on behalf of that council to the annual parochial church meeting, an annual fabric report on the fabric of the church and all articles appertaining to the church, including an account of all actions taken or proposed during the previous year for their protection and maintenance and, in particular, for the implementation of any recommendation contained in an inspection scheme² report³. In carrying out this duty, the churchwardens must act in consultation with the minister⁴. The annual fabric report must be delivered to the parochial church council at its meeting next before the annual parochial church meeting and to the ensuing annual parochial church meeting⁵. The churchwardens must, as soon as practicable after the beginning of each year, produce to the parochial church council the terrier, the inventory and the log-book⁶ relating to events occurring in the previous year and such other records as they consider likely to assist the council in discharging its functions in relation to the fabric and articles of the church⁷.

554. Maintenance of order.

Churchwardens are charged with the maintenance of order and decency in the church and churchyard, especially during the time of divine service¹. They and their assistants must not suffer the church or chapel to be profaned by any meeting in it for temporal objects inconsistent with the sanctity of the place², nor the bells to be rung at any time contrary to the minister's direction³, nor any person so to behave in the church, church porch or churchyard during the time of divine service as to create disturbance³. They may remove from the church persons who disturb the service⁴ or who, before its commencement, indicate an intention of doing so⁵. If any person is guilty of riotous, violent or indecent behaviour in any church, chapel or churchyard, whether or not in any time of divine service, or of disturbing, vexing, troubling or misusing any minister officiating there, the churchwardens or their assistants must take care to restrain the offender and if necessary proceed against him according to law⁶. However, they cannot interfere with the conduct of the service by the minister on the ground of any impropriety in its performance, unless his behaviour amounts to being actually riotous, violent or indecent⁷.

555. Allocation of seats.

Seats must be provided in every church and chapel for the use of the parishioners and others who attend divine service¹. In parish churches and chapels it belongs to the churchwardens, acting for this purpose as the officers of the Ordinary² and subject to his direction³, to allocate the seats among the parishioners and others⁴ in such manner as the service of God may be best celebrated in the church or chapel⁵, but this provision does not affect the minister's right to allocate seats in the chancel⁶ or the right of any person to a seat or to allocate seats conferred by faculty, prescription or statutory authority⁷.

In carrying out their duty the churchwardens may direct individuals as to where they shall or shall not sit, and may assign seats to individuals either beforehand or at the time for a particular service or for an indefinite period. They cannot make an irrevocable assignment or divest themselves or their successors of the power of making a fresh arrangement whenever circumstances render it desirable⁸. They have no right to prevent a parishioner from entering the church to attend service on the ground of insufficiency of convenient accommodation or from standing during the service if he cannot get a seat⁹. Except where expressly directed or sanctioned by statute¹⁰, they cannot demand a rent or payment for a pew or seat¹¹. They may remove a parishioner who intrudes into a seat which they have assigned to another, provided they do so without using any unnecessary force and without causing public scandal or disturbing divine service¹².

6 The extent, and indeed the existence, of this right, seems open to question: see note 7 infra.

7 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon F7 para 2. There may be rights of ownership in a private aisle or chapel (Chapman v Jones (1869) LR 4 Exch 273: see PARA 1107 post, and PARA 1225 note 5 post), or, by faculty or prescription, in a pew in the chancel or elsewhere in the church (see PARA 1086 et seq post); see also Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) III/15, 16. The rector (lay or ecclesiastical) may have a right to a seat in the chancel for himself and his family (Stileman-Gibbard v Wilkinson [1897] 1 QB 749 at 761, 62; see also PARA 1258 post), and in some cases the vicar may have a similar right to a seat in the church by prescription (see PARA 1086 post). The reference in the saving provision of Canon F7 para 2, to the minister's right to allocate seats in the chancel is hardly sufficient to create a general right of this kind if it does not already exist; and on this question there is a conflict of opinion in the authorities. In Gib Cod at 200 it is stated that seats in the chancel are under the disposition of the Ordinary, in like manner as those in the body of the church; and the majority of later writers appear to follow this opinion: see eg Phillimore, Ecclesiastical Law (2nd Edn) 1432; Pridaux, Churchwardens' Guide (16th Edn) 294; Cripps, Church and Clergy (8th Edn) 213; Dale, Law of the Parish Church (4th Edn) 89. As to the effect of a faculty conferring the right to occupy a pew, see Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) III/46, 47, and PARA 1312 post.

Before dispossessing a parishioner of a seat usually occupied by him the churchwardens ought to give him notice and an opportunity for remonstrance: Horsfall v Holland and Woolley (1859) 6 Jur NS 278. There may be immemorial customs as to the allocation of seats: Brabin v Trediman (1618) 2 Roll Rep 24; Colebach v Baldwyn (1692) 2 Lut 1032. Parishioners to whom seats are assigned have no right to exclude others if they and their families do not occupy the whole. In that event the churchwardens may fill up the assigned seats after the service commences (Re Cathedral Church of St Columb, Londonderry (Pews) (1863) 8 LT 861), but not before (Vicar etc of Claverley v Parishioners etc of Claverley [1909] P 195 at 216). 556. Miscellaneous functions of churchwardens.

The responsibility for providing the necessary requisites for divine service, such as books, linen, plate and furniture, now rests in general on the parochial church council¹, although in practice it is often left to the churchwardens to act on behalf of the council in such matters. It is still, however, the duty of the churchwardens as such, with the advice and direction of the minister, to provide sufficient bread and wine for Holy Communion².

Churchwardens take part in the collection and disposal of the alms and other offerings given at the offertory in the communion service³.

When a benefice becomes vacant and its profits are sequestrated⁴ the churchwardens are usually appointed sequestrators⁵. Their right and duty in reference to the performance of divine service during the vacancy arises from their filling that position⁶. The church register books are in their custody during the vacancy⁷.

1 As to these requisites, see the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canons F1-F14, and PARAS 579, 951 post. It was formerly the duty of the churchwardens to provide them: see Canons Ecclesiastical (1603) 52, 80-84 (repealed).

557. Sidesmen.

The sidesmen of the parish are by law elected by the annual parochial church meeting¹. A person is not qualified to be elected a sidesman unless his name is on the church electoral roll of the parish², and no person may be elected unless he has signed his consent to serve or there is, in the meeting's opinion, sufficient evidence of his willingness³.

It is the sidesmen's duty to promote the cause of true religion in the parish and to assist the churchwardens in the discharge of their duties in maintaining order and decency in the church and churchyard, especially during the time of divine service⁴.

558. Parish clerks.

A parish clerk may be appointed in accordance with the law in any parish in which the services of such an officer are required¹. The parochial church council has power jointly with the minister to appoint and dismiss² the parish clerk or any persons performing or assisting to perform the duties of parish clerk, and to determine their salaries and the conditions of the tenure of their offices or of their employment³. The office of parish clerk may be held by a lay person (male or female⁴) or by a person in holy orders⁵. The traditional function of the parish clerk has been to lead the laity in its part in divine service and the offices of the church, but nowadays it seems open to the council and the minister to define more broadly the duties of the office⁶.

1 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon E3. He must be a fit and proper person, and he may be appointed to perform such services upon such terms and conditions as the minister and the council may think fit: Canon E3. As to guild church clerks, see PARA 605 post.

2 The appointment may be made by parol and without formal words: Gatton Parish v Milwich Parish (1712) 2 Salk 536; Anon (1774) Lofft 434; R v Bobbing Inhabitants (1836) 5 Ad & El 682. The office of parish clerk has been held to be a temporal office within the jurisdiction of the temporal courts: 1 Bl Com (14th Edn) 385; Lawrence v Edwards [1891] 2 Ch 72. In ancient parishes it was formerly a freehold for life (1 Bl Com (14th Edn) 395); and the present statutory power of dismissal is subject to the rights of any persons holding the office at the appointed day: Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956, s 7 (iii). 'Appointed day' is not defined, but is thought to be 1st July 1921: cf. para 575 note 2 post. As to the application of s 7 (iii), see note 3 infra. Appointment and dismissal will be subject also to the provisions of the general law relating to employment: see Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) III/63; see further EMPLOYMENT.

3 Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956, s 7 (iii). If the council and the minister are unable to agree, the matter must be dealt with or determined in such manner as the bishop may direct: s 9 (3). Sections 7 (iii) and 9 do not apply where the parochial church council's functions have been transferred to the administrative body of a parish church cathedral: Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 12 (4) (b). Apart from the salary payable under his contract, if any, the clerk is remunerated by the fees payable on marriages and burials: Ecclesiastical Fees Measure 1962, s 2; Parochial Fees Order 1972: see PARA 1198 post; see also Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) III/63, where it was stated that the clerk can sue for his fees either the incumbent or the churchwardens to whom they have been paid.

4 See Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) III/63.

5 If a person in holy orders is appointed, he must be licensed by the bishop in the same manner as a stipendiary curate (see PARA 706 post), and he is then entitled to perform all such spiritual and ecclesiastical duties within the parish or district as the incumbent, with the bishop's sanction, from time to time requires: Lecturers and Parish Clerks Act 1844, s 2. The provisions of s 3 as to the mode of appointment are rendered obsolete by the Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956, s 7 (iii). He may be suspended or removed from the office in the same manner and for the like causes and subject to the same right of appeal as a stipendiary curate (see PARAS 721, 722 post), and the appointment does not exempt the incumbent from any obligation to employ a curate or curates to assist him in his ministrations to which he would be otherwise subject: Lecturers and Parish Clerks Act 1844, s 4.

A sexton, now often designated verger, or any persons performing or assisting to perform the duties of his office, may be appointed and dismissed by the parochial church council jointly with the minister, who together determine the salary and conditions of the tenure of their office and of their employment¹. The sexton's or verger's remuneration may be provided wholly or partly out of the fees payable on marriages, burials and other occasions². The office may be held by a woman³.

A sexton's or verger's duties vary from parish to parish⁴ and may include the care of the church and of its furniture and the sacred vestments, the ringing of the bells, the care of the churchyard and the digging of the graves⁵.

5 See 3 Burn's Ecclesiastical Law (4th Edn) 602. The council and the minister have, it seems, some discretion as to the services to be required of the person appointed. The name 'sacristan', which was identical with sexton, seems now to be confined to one who has no grave-digging duties, but is mainly concerned with the care of sacred vessels and vestments and is frequently a voluntary worker. The title 'beadle' is still sometimes found, but the office in its true meaning is now obsolete; he was the messenger and servant of the vestry, and executed its orders: 1 Burn's Ecclesiastical Law (4th Edn) 415.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(9) PARISHES/(iv) Other Parish Officers/560. Organists.

560. Organists.

The right of appointment to the office of organist, which is not an office known to the common law, belongs in law to the incumbent, who cannot bind his successor in this matter, but the exercise of the right depends in practice on the person or persons willing to become responsible for payment of the organist's salary (generally now the parochial church council), and the direction and other conditions of his office will be regulated by the terms of the agreement by which he is appointed¹.

In all churches and chapels (other than in cathedral or collegiate churches or chapels, where the matter is governed by or dependent upon the relevant statutes or custom) it belongs to the minister to direct when the organ shall, and when it shall not, be played, and to decide what part of the service shall be sung². The minister is required to pay due heed to the advice and assistance of the organist or choirmaster in the choosing of chants, hymns, anthems and other settings and in the ordering of the music of the church, but at all times the final responsibility and decision in these matters rests with the minister³.

1 As to the appointment and duties of the organist and the use of the organ generally, see Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) III/58 et seq. See also PARA 947 post.

2 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B20 para 1. The organist must not at any time play on the organ in opposition to the minister's directions: Wyndham v Cole (1875) 1 PD 130. If the minister arbitrarily forbids his playing the organist may appeal to the Ordinary, but must provisionally obey the minister's directions until the Ordinary prescribes the right course for the minister to adopt: Wyndham v Cole supra, at 134, per Sir Robert Phillimore.

3 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B20 para 2. The minister's authority in such matters extends to occasions when matrimony is to be solemnised in church: Canon B35. para 5. On all occasions it is the minister's duty to ensure that only such chants, hymns, anthems and other settings are chosen as are appropriate to worship and prayer in God's House and to the congregation, and to banish all irreverence in the practice and performance of the music: Canon B20 para 3.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(9) PARISHES/(v) Parishioners/561. Who are parishioners.

(v) Parishioners

561. Who are parishioners.

The term 'parishioners' is of frequent occurrence in ecclesiastical law, but its meaning is liable to vary according to the context. In the older authorities the parishioners are often identified with the inhabitant householders of the parish, but usually with the inclusion of persons who, though not actually resident, occupy lands or tenements in the parish and pay rates in respect of them¹. Parishioners in that sense were entitled to take part in the choosing of churchwardens² and other business of the vestry³; they could claim as of right to be allotted seats in the church⁴, and shared the liability for repairs to the church building⁵.

For certain purposes the term had, and still has, a wider connotation, for example, in relation to the right of access to the church for divine service, the right to be married in the church and the right to be buried in the churchyard⁶.

The exercise of the foregoing rights has not been regarded as conditional upon membership of the Church of England⁷. The tendency in recent legislation has been to emphasise actual residence rather than the status of householder⁸, and in some cases to recognise or require inclusion in the church electoral roll as a qualification for participation in the affairs of the church⁹.

3 See PARA 568 post.

4 See PARA 555 ante, 562 post.

5 See PARA 1096 post.

6 In reference to such privileges, residence alone (without any qualification as a householder or ratepayer) appears to be sufficient, a person lodging in the parish being regarded for this purpose as a parishioner: St Swithin's Parish Case (1695) Holt KB 139. See also PARA 562 post. As to the right to attend divine service, see Cole v Police Constable 443A [1937] 1 KB 316, [1936] 3 All ER 107, DC.

7 As to membership of the Church of England, see PARA 346 ante. In former times all the inhabitants of a parish were deemed to be members of the Church of England, in the absence of evidence to the contrary. A question may be raised whether by adhering to a dissenting body a person may lose the right to attend services in the parish church; but see Re Perry Almshouses [1898] 1 Ch 391 at 399, where the contrary view is implied.

562. Parishioners' rights.

A parishioner has a right to enter his parish church and remain there for the purpose of participating in divine worship so long as there is accommodation available¹. Subject to certain rights² he is entitled to a seat so long as there is a seat available³ and, although he must obey the reasonable directions of the churchwardens, acting as the officers of the bishop, as to which seat he shall occupy⁴ he cannot be prevented by them from entering and standing if no seat is available⁵. A parishioner is entitled to receive the ministrations of the church and of the parish clergy in the parish church and other proper places⁶ and to be buried in the churchyard or burial ground of or belonging to the parish⁷.

Subject to such special conditions as are imposed by law⁸ parishioners are entitled personally to attend and take part in the meetings, if any, of the vestry⁹, the meeting of parishioners for the choosing of churchwardens¹⁰ and all parochial church meetings¹¹.

1 Jarratt v Steele (1820) 3 Phillim 167. This right was formerly regarded as a corollary of the statutory duty (under the Act of Uniformity 1551, s 1 (repealed)) to attend divine service in the parish church; but in Cole v Police Constable 443A [1937] 1 KB 316, [1936] 3 All ER 107, DC, the view was expressed by Goddard J that it was a common law right not dependent on the statutory obligation.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(9) PARISHES/(vi) Parochial Church Meetings/563. Annual parochial church meeting.

(vi) Parochial Church Meetings

563. Annual parochial church meeting.

In every parish¹ there must be held not later than 30th April in each year the annual parochial church meeting². All lay persons³ whose names are entered on the church electoral roll⁴ of the parish are entitled to attend the meeting and to take part in its proceedings, and no other lay person is so entitled⁵. A clerk in holy orders is entitled to attend and take part if he is either beneficed in or licensed to the parish or any other parish in the area of the benefice to which the parish belongs⁶; or if the parish is in the area of a group ministry and he is an incumbent of any benefice in the group⁷; or if he is resident⁸ in the parish and is not beneficed in or licensed to any other parish⁹. The meeting must be convened by the minister¹⁰ of the parish by a notice in the prescribed form¹¹ affixed on or near to the principal door of every church in the parish, and every building licensed for public worship¹² in the parish, for a period including the last two Sundays before the day of the meeting¹³.

The minister, if present, or if he is not present the vice-chairman of the parochial church council, or if he also is not present a chairman chosen by the meeting, must preside¹⁴. The secretary of the parochial church council, or another person appointed by the meeting in his place, must act as a clerk of the annual meeting and record its minutes¹⁵. The meeting has power to adjourn and to determine its own rules of procedure¹⁶. In the case of an omission to hold the annual meeting, the rural dean, upon the omission being brought to his notice, must ascertain the cause and report it to the bishop¹⁷.

All vicars in a team ministry are entitled to attend the parochial church meetings of the parish or each of the parishes in the area of the benefice for which the team ministry is established: see s 19 (10), Sch. 3 para 3 (3), and PARA 871 post.

8 The residence must be of a regular, not casual, nature: Church Representation Rules, r 44 (5).

9 Ibid r 5 (3) (c). However, he is not entitled to vote in the election of any parochial representatives of the laity: r 10 (5). Residentiary and minor canons of a parish church cathedral are, it seems, entitled to attend the annual parochial church meeting of the parish of that cathedral, even though they are not qualified under r 5 (3): see the Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 45, which refers to the Rules for the Representation of the Laity, now replaced by the Church Representation Rules.

10 For the meaning of 'minister', see PARA 544 note 6 ante. During the vacancy of the benefice or curacy or when the minister is absent or incapacitated by illness or any other cause, the vice-chairman of the parochial church council, or if there is no vice-chairman, or if he is unable or unwilling to act, the secretary of or some other person appointed by that council, has all the powers vested in the minister under the Church Representation Rules, r 6: see r 6 (3).

11 For the prescribed form of notice, see ibid App. 1, s 4 (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865).

12 For the meaning of 'public worship', see PARA 545 note 8 ante.

13 Church Representation Rules, r 6 (1). The meeting must be held at such place (being a place within the parish unless the parochial church council decides otherwise: r 6 (4)) on such date and at such hour as is directed by the previous annual meeting or by the parochial church council (which may vary any direction given by a previous annual meeting) or, in the absence of any such direction, as is appointed by the minister (r. 6 (2)).

14 Ibid r 7. When there is an equal division of votes, otherwise than in the case of an election (as to which see PARA 566 post), the chairman of the meeting has a second or casting vote, but no clerical chairman has a vote in the election of the parochial representatives of the laity: r 7 (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865); see also r 10 (5), and PARA 566 note 11 post. For special provisions as to chairmanship in the case of a team ministry, see PARA 871 post.

17 Ibid r 43 (5). As to the bishop's powers in such a case, see PARA 389 ante.

UPDATE

563 Annual parochial church meeting

NOTES--Rules 5-8 now rr 6-9; SI 1994/3118.

TEXT AND NOTES 6-9--A clerk in holy orders is also entitled to attend and take part if he is not resident in the parish and is not beneficed or licensed to any other parish, the parochial church council with the concurrence of the minister has declared him to be a habitual worshipper in the parish, such declaration being effective until the conclusion of the annual meeting in the year in which a new roll is prepared under r 2 or his ceasing to be a habitual worshipper in the parish, whichever is the earlier, but without prejudice to a renewal of such declaration, or if he is a co-opted member of the parochial church council in accordance with r 14(1)(h) (see PARA 569): r 6(3)(c), (d); SI 1984/1039; SI 1995/3243.

TEXT AND NOTE 7--Rule 5(3)(b) revoked: SI 1981/959. The provisions of the 1968 Measure referred to are not reproduced in the Pastoral Measure 1983; see instead r 6(4), (5); SI 1981/959. Now, without prejudice to r 6(2), (3), all the members of the team of a team ministry are entitled to attend, and take part in the proceedings of, the annual meeting of the parish or each of the parishes in the area of the benefice for which the team ministry is established, and where the area of a group ministry includes the area of a benefice for which a team ministry is established, all the vicars in that ministry are entitled to attend, and take part in the proceedings of, the annual meeting of each of the other parishes in the area for which the group ministry is established; and all the incumbents and priests in charge in a group ministry are entitled to attend, and take part in the proceedings of, the annual meeting of each of the parishes in the area for which the group ministry is established: r 6(4); SI 1981/959.

Where two or more benefices are held in plurality and a team ministry is, or is to be, established for the area of one of those benefices, then, if a pastoral scheme provides for extending the operation of the team ministry, so long as the plurality continues, to the area of any other benefice so held, r 6(4) has effect as if the references to the area of the benefice were references to the combined area of the benefices concerned: r 6(5); SI 1981/959.

NOTE 9--Rule 5(3)(c) now r 6(3)(b); r 10(5) now r 11(5): SI 1984/1039, SI 1994/3118. Cathedrals Measure 1963 s 45 repealed with effect from the relevant date (see PARA 610A.1): Cathedrals Measure 1999 s 39(2), Sch 3.

TEXT AND NOTES 10-13--The minister of a new parish created by a pastoral scheme, or, in the absence of the minister, a person appointed by the bishops, must as soon as possible after the scheme comes into operation convene a special parochial church meeting, and, subject to r 7(6), these provisions relating to the convening and conduct of the annual meeting apply to such a special meeting: r 7(5); SI 1981/959. A special meeting so convened and held in the months of November or December may, if the meeting so resolves, be for all purposes the annual meeting for the succeeding year, and a special meeting so convened is in any event for all purposes the annual meeting for the year in which it is so convened and held: r 7(6); SI 1981/959.

NOTE 11--App 1 s 4 further amended by SI 1980/178, SI 1984/1039, SI 1989/2094, SI 1994/3118, SI 1995/3243, SI 2004/1889.

TEXT AND NOTE 14--Now r 8(1); SI 1981/959. It is subject to r 8(2); SI 1981/959, which provides that where a parish is in the area of a benefice for which a team ministry is established, and a vicar in that ministry is entitled to preside at an annual meeting of that parish by virtue of a provision in a pastoral scheme or the bishop's licence assigning to the vicar the duties, or a share in the duties, of the chairmanship of the annual meeting of that parish, then, if both he and the vice-chairman of the parochial church council are not present at that meeting, but the rector in that ministry is present, the rector must preside.

564. Business of the annual meeting.

The annual parochial church meeting receives from the parochial church council and is free to discuss a copy or copies of the church electoral roll¹, annual reports on the council's proceedings² and on the financial affairs of the parish³, the council's audited accounts for the year ending on the previous 31st December⁴, an audited statement of the funds and property, if any, remaining in the council's hands at that date⁵, a report upon the fabric, goods and ornaments of the church or churches of the parish⁶, and a report on the proceedings of the deanery synod⁷.

The annual meeting must elect parochial representatives of the laity to the deanery synod (in every third year⁸) and to the parochial church council⁹, and it must elect sidesmen¹⁰. The elections are to be carried out in that order¹¹. The annual meeting must also appoint the auditors to the parochial church council¹².

Any person entitled to attend the annual meeting¹³ may ask any question about parochial church matters, or bring about a discussion of any matter of parochial or general church interest, by moving a general resolution or by moving to give any particular recommendation to the council in relation to its duties¹⁴.

UPDATE

564 Business of the annual meeting

TEXT AND NOTES--Rule 8 now r 9; SI 1994/3118.

TEXT--Without prejudice to these provisions and r 7(6) (para 563), a special parochial church meeting convened under r 7(5) (para 563), must, in addition to other business, decide on the number of members of the parochial church council who are to be the elected representatives of the laity, and elect in the manner provided by r 11 (see PARA 566) parochial representatives of the laity to the deanery synod, if such representatives are required to be elected in the year for which that meeting is the annual meeting by virtue of r 7(6): r 9(6); SI 1981/959.

TEXT AND NOTE 1--Reference to copies of the church electoral roll now reference to a report on changes in the roll since the last annual parochial church meeting or, in a year in which a new roll is prepared, a report on the numbers entered on the new roll: r 9(2).

TEXT AND NOTES 2-5--Now the parochial church meeting receives an annual report on the proceedings of the parochial church council and the activities of the parish generally, and the financial statements of the parochial church council for the year ending on 31 December immediately preceding the meeting, independently examined or audited as provided by r 9(3): r 9(1)(b), (c); SI 1995/3243.

NOTE 5--Now the council must cause a copy of the church electoral roll to be available for inspection at the meeting: r 9(2); SI 1995/3243. The financial statements must (a) be independently examined or audited in the prescribed manner (ie in accordance with r 54(8)), (b) be considered and, if thought fit, approved by the parochial church council and signed by the chairman presiding at the meeting of the council, and (c) be displayed for a continuous period of at least seven days before the annual meeting, including at least one Sunday when the church is used for worship, on a notice board either inside or outside the church: r 9(3); SI 1995/3243. The annual report and financial statements must be prepared in the prescribed form (ie in accordance with r 54(8)) for consideration by the annual meeting: r 9(4); SI 1995/3243. Following such meeting the council must cause the copies of the annual report and statements to be sent within 28 days of the annual meeting to the secretary of the diocesan board of finance for retention by the board: r 9(4) (amended by SI 2004/1889).

Any matters or regulations to be prescribed must be prescribed by the Business Committee of the General Synod in accordance with the following procedure: r 54(8) (a); SI 1995/3243; National Institutions Measure 1998 Sch 5 para 2(e). Any matters or regulations made under this provision must be laid before the General Synod and must not come into force until they have been approved by the General Synod, whether with or without amendment: r 54(8)(b). Where the Business Committee determines that matters or regulations made under this provision do not need to be debated by the General Synod then, unless (i) notice is given by a member of the General Synod in accordance with standing orders that he wishes the business to be debated, or (ii) notice is so given by any such member that he wishes to move an amendment to the business, the matters or regulations are for the purpose of head (b) above deemed to have been approved by the General Synod without amendment: r 54(8)(c), as amended.

NOTES 6, 7--Rule 8(1)(f), (g) now r 9(1)(d), (e); SI 1995/3243.

TEXT AND NOTE 6--The report is now made under the Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 s 5 (see PARA 553B): Sch 7.

TEXT AND NOTES 8-12--Now the annual meeting must (a) elect in every third year parochial representatives of the laity to the deanery synod, (b) elect parochial representatives of the laity to the parochial church council, (c) appoint sidesmen, (d) appoint the independent examiner or auditor to the council for a term of office ending at the close of the next annual meeting, provided that such person must not be a member of the council: r 9(5); SI 1995/3243. 'Auditor' means a person eligible as the auditor of a charity under the Charities Act 1993 s 43(2); 'independent examiner' means a person as defined in the 1993 Act s 43(3)(a): r 54(1); SI 1995/3243. An independent examiner or auditor of the council's financial statements must (a) have a right of access with respect to books, documents or other records (however kept) which relate to the said financial statements, (b) have a right to require information and explanations from past or present treasurers or members of the council and, in case of default, the independent examiner or auditor may apply to the Charity Commissioners for an order for directions pursuant to the Charities Act 1993 s 44(2) or any statutory modification thereof for the time being in force: App II para 16; SI 1995/3243.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(9) PARISHES/(vi) Parochial Church Meetings/565. Power to make schemes.

565. Power to make schemes.

In any parish where there are two or more churches or buildings licensed for public worship the annual parochial church meeting may make a scheme providing for either or both of the following purposes (1) the election of representatives of the laity to the parochial church council in such manner as to ensure due representation of the congregation of each such church or building¹, and (2) the election of district church councils for any district in the parish in which such a church or building is situated².

No such scheme is valid unless approved by at least two-thirds of the persons present and voting at the annual meeting, nor can it be operative until the next ensuing annual meeting; and the bishop's council and standing committee of the diocesan synod may determine that the scheme is not to come into operation³.

1 Church Representation Rules, r 16 (1) (a), contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3 (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865).

2 Ibid r 16 (1) (b) (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865). A scheme for this purpose must provide for the election of representatives of the laity to the district council, for ex officio members and for the chairmanship of the council, and it must contain such other provisions as to membership and procedure as are considered appropriate by the annual meeting: r 16 (2). It may also provide for the delegation by the parochial church council to a district church council of such functions as the scheme may specify; and, subject to the scheme, the parochial church council may itself delegate to a district council such of its functions as it thinks fit: r 16 (3). Such a scheme may also provide for the election or choice of one or two deputy church wardens in respect of any such church or building and for the delegation to him or them of certain function: r 16 (4); see PARA 549 ante.

3 Ibid r 16 (5). Every scheme under r 16 must, on its approval, be communicated to the secretary of the diocesan synod, who may, if he considers it appropriate, lay the scheme before the bishop's council and standing committee: r 16 (5). Rule 16 is without prejudice to the provisions of the Pastoral Measure 1968, Sch. 3: see the Church Representation Rules, r 16 (6).

UPDATE

565 Power to make schemes

NOTES--Rule 16 now renumbered as r 18: SI 1994/3118.

TEXT AND NOTE 1--For 'buildings licensed for public worship', read 'places of worship': r 18(1)(a); SI 1981/959. 'Place of worship' means a building or part of a building licensed for public worship: r 18(11); SI 1981/959; SI 1984/1039.

TEXT AND NOTE 2--For head (2), read 'the election by the annual meeting for any district in the parish in which a church or place of worship is situated of a district church council for that district': Church Representation Rules r 18(1)(b); SI 1981/959.

NOTE 2--A scheme may not, however, provide for the delegation of the functions of a parochial church council (1) in respect of producing the financial statement of the parish; (2) as an interested party under the Pastoral Measure 1983 Pt I; (3) under the Priests (Ordination of Women) Measure 1993 s 3 (amended by the Cathedrals Measure 1999 s 39(1), Sch 2 para 9); or (4) under the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 Pt II: Church Representation Rules r 18(3); SI 1998/319; Synodical Government (Amendment) Measure 2003 Schedule para 6(a). Rule 18(4) now provides that such a scheme may provide for the election or choice of one or two deputy churchwardens and for the delegation to him or them of certain functions: SI 1981/959; SI 1984/1039.

TEXT AND NOTE 3--Now no such scheme is valid unless so appointed, nor may it provide for it to come into operation until such date as the bishop's council and standing committee may determine, being a date not later than the next ensuing annual meeting: r 18(5); SI 1984/1039.

Where a pastoral scheme establishing a team ministry, or an instrument of the bishop made by virtue of that scheme, makes, in relation to a parish in the area of the benefice for which the team ministry is established, any provision which may be made by a scheme under r 18, no scheme under r 18 relating to that parish may provide for the scheme to come into operation until on or after the date on which the provisions in question of the pastoral scheme or of the instrument, as the case may be, cease to have effect: r 18(7); SI 1981/959; SI 1984/1039.

A scheme under r 18 may be varied or revoked by a subsequent scheme: r 18(8); SI 1981/959; SI 1984/1039.

Every member of the team of a team ministry has a right to attend the meetings of any district church council elected for any district in a parish in the area of the benefice for which the team ministry is established: r 18(9); SI 1981/959; SI 1984/1039.

NOTE 3--Now every scheme under r 18 must on its approval be communicated to the bishop's council and standing committee of the diocesan synod, which may determine that the scheme is to come into operation, or that it is not to come into operation, or that it is to come into operation with specified amendments, if such amendments are approved by an annual or special parochial church meeting and the scheme as amended is approved by at least two-thirds of the persons present and voting at that meeting: r 18(5); SI 1984/1039. A special parochial church meeting of a parish to which r 18 applies may be convened for the purpose of deciding whether to make such a scheme; and the provisions of r 18(1)-(5) then have effect, if a meeting is convened, with the substitution of references to the special meeting for references to the annual meeting: r 18(6); SI 1989/2094, SI 1998/319; Synodical Government (Amendment) Measure 2003 Schedule para 6(c). Rule 18 is without prejudice to the appointment, in parishes with more than one parish church, of two churchwardens for each church under Pastoral Measure 1983 s 27(5) (see PARA 538): r 18(10); SI 1981/959; SI 1984/1039.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(9) PARISHES/(vi) Parochial Church Meetings/566. Elections at annual meetings.

566. Elections at annual meetings.

The qualifications of a person to be elected as a parochial representative of the laity to the deanery synod or to the parochial church council are that (1) his name is entered on the church electoral roll of the parish¹; (2) he is an actual communicant member of the Church of England² or, in the case of election to the parochial church council, of any church in communion with the Church of England³; and (3) in the case of election to the deanery synod⁴, he is of eighteen years or upwards⁵. The qualification of a person to be elected a sidesman is that his name is entered on the church electoral roll of the parish⁶. No person is to be elected as a parochial representative of the laity to the deanery synod or the parochial church council, or as a sidesman, unless he has signified his consent to serve or there is in the opinion of the meeting sufficient evidence of his willingness to serve⁷.

All candidates for election at an annual meeting must be nominated and seconded by persons who are entitled to attend the meeting⁸ and, in the case of parochial representatives of the laity, whose names are on the church electoral roll of the parish⁹. If the number of candidates nominated is not greater than the number of seats to be filled the candidates nominated must forthwith be declared elected¹⁰; if more candidates are nominated than there are seats to be filled the election must take place at the annual meeting¹¹.

Each person entitled to vote has as many votes as there are seats to be filled, but may not give more than one vote to any one candidate¹². Votes may be given on voting papers (which must be signed by the voter)¹³ or, if no person present objects, by show of hands¹⁴. Where owing to an equality of votes an election is not decided, the decision between the persons for whom the equal numbers of votes have been cast must be taken by lot¹⁵. The result of the election must be announced as soon as practicable by the person presiding, and notice of the result must be displayed in the prescribed manner¹⁶.

Any person aggrieved may appeal against the allowance or disallowance of any vote or against the result of an election by giving notice of appeal to the rural dean or, if there is no rural dean, to the archdeacon¹⁷.

Casual vacancies among the parochial representatives elected to the parochial church council or the deanery synod may be filled by the election by the parochial church council of persons qualified to be so elected¹⁸.

1 Church Representation Rules, r 9 (1) (a), contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3. As to the church electoral roll, see PARA 591 et seq post. A person whose name is entered on the roll of each of two or more parishes must choose one of those parishes for the purpose of qualification for election to a deanery synod: r 1 (3) (substituted by S.I. 1973 No. 1865).

2 For the meaning of 'actual communicant member of the Church of England', see ibid r 44 (1) (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865), and PARA 420 note 1 ante.

3 Ibid r 9 (1) (b) (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865). 'Actual communicant member of a church in communion with the Church of England' means a communicant member of a church in communion with the Church of England (see PARA 313 ante) who has received Communion according to the use of the Church of England or of a church in communion with the Church of England at least three times during the twelve months preceding the date of his election: r 44 (1) (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865). If any question arises whether a church is a church in communion with the Church of England it is to be conclusively determined for the purposes of the Church Representation Rules by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York: r 44 (4) (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865).

4 In the case of election to the parochial church council the age is seventeen, ie the minimum age for entry on the church electoral roll: see r 1 (2) (c).

5 Ibid r 9 (1) (c) (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865). The diocesan registrar is not, however, qualified for election to the deanery synod or the parochial church council: r 9 (1) proviso (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865). A person is not disqualified from being elected to either body by the fact that he is also a member ex officio: r 38 (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865).

7 Ibid r 9 (3).

8 As to the persons so entitled, see PARA 563 ante.

9 Church Representation Rules, r 10 (2). A candidate must be nominated or seconded either before the meeting in writing or at the meeting: r 10 (2). Rule 10 applies to all elections at annual parochial church meeting: r 10 (1).

10 Ibid r 10 (3).

11 Ibid r 10 (4). No clerk in holy orders is entitled to vote in the election of any parochial representatives of the laity: r 10 (5).

12 Ibid r 10 (6).

13 Ibid r 10 (7) (a).

14 Ibid r 10 (7) (b).

15 Ibid r 10 (8).

16 Ibid r 10 (9). The notice must be affixed on or near the principal door of every church and every building licensed for public worship in the parish, and must remain there for not less than fourteen days: r 10 (9). Returns of parochial representatives of the laity elected to the deanery synod must be sent to the secretary of that synod: r 10 (10).

17 See ibid r 36 (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865), and PARA 596 post. For the bishop's special powers in relation to elections, see PARA 389 ante.

UPDATE

566 Elections at annual meetings

NOTES--Rules 9, 10 now rr 10, 11 (amended by SI 1994/3118).

TEXT AND NOTES 1-5--Replaced. Subject to the provisions of r 1(4) (see PARA 591) and r 10(3), the qualifications of a person to be elected a parochial representative of the laity to either the parochial church council or the deanery synod are that (a) his name is entered on the roll of the parish and, unless he is under the age of eighteen years at the date of the election, has been so entered for at least the preceding period of six months, (b) he is an actual communicant (as defined; see PARA 420), and (c) he is of 16 years or upwards: r 10(1) (amended by the Synodical Government (Amendment) Measure 2003 Schedule para 2; SI 2004/1889).

NOTE 1--Rule 1(3) renumbered as r 1(4): SI 1994/3118; SI 1995/3243.

NOTE 3--Rule 44(4) renumbered r 54(5): SI 1980/178, SI 1994/3118.

NOTE 4--Minimum age now sixteen: r 1(2); SI 1994/3118.

NOTE 5--Rule 38 now r 47; SI 1994/3118.

TEXT AND NOTE 6--For 'elected' read 'appointed': r 10(2); SI 1994/3118.

TEXT AND NOTE 7--Replaced. No person must be nominated for election (a) to serve on either the parochial church council, or the deanery synod unless he has signified his consent to serve, or there is in the opinion of the meeting sufficient evidence of his willingness to serve; (b) to serve on the parochial church council, if he has been disqualified from serving on that council by the bishop under the Incumbents (Vacation of Benefices) Measures 1977 and 1993 s 10(6) (see PARA 733F); (c) to serve on the parochial church council if he is disqualified from being a charity trustee under the Charities Act 1993: r 10(3).

TEXT AND NOTES 8-16--These provisions are now subject to the provisions of any resolution made under r 12 (infra) and for the time being in force: r 11(1); SI 1980/178, SI 1994/3118. Rule 12; SI 1980/178, SI 1984/1039, SI 1990/2094, SI 1994/3118 empowers the annual meeting to pass a resolution providing for elections to be conducted by the method of the single transferable vote and enables arrangements for postal voting at annual parochial church meetings to be made. For form of application for postal vote, see App 1 s 4A; SI 1989/2094.

TEXT AND NOTE 13--Votes may be given by show of hands or, if one or more persons object, on voting papers signed by the voter on the reverse thereof or, if at least one tenth of the persons present and voting at the meeting so request, on numbered voting papers: Church Representation Rules r 11(7) (substituted by SI 2004/1889). Where, in accordance with the Church Representation Rules r 11(7), a vote is given on numbered voting papers, a record must be made of the identity of each person to whom a numbered voting paper is issued and any such record, so long as it is retained, must be kept separate from the voting papers: r 11(11) (added by SI 2004/1889).

TEXT AND NOTE 15--Rule 11(8) (as renumbered) now r 11(8)(a). When an election or any stage of an election is recounted, either on appeal or at the request of the presiding officer or of a candidate, if the original count and the recount are identical at the point when a lot must be drawn to resolve a tie, the original lot must be used to make the determination: r 11(8)(b); SI 1994/3118.

NOTE 16--The secretary of the parochial church council must hold a list of the names and addresses of the members of the council which must be available for inspection on reasonable notice being given by any person who either is resident in the parish or has his name on the electoral roll, but the secretary is not bound to provide a copy of the list: r 11(9); SI 1989/2094.

Rule 11(10) (as renumbered) substituted. Now names and addresses of parochial representatives of the laity elected to the deanery synod must be sent by the secretary of the parochial church council to the diocesan electoral registration officer appointed in accordance with r 29 (see PARA 511) and to the secretary of the deanery synod: r 11(10); SI 1989/2094.

567. Special and extraordinary meetings.

In addition to the annual parochial church meeting the minister may convene a special parochial church meeting, and he must do so on a written representation by not less than one-third of the lay members of the parochial church council¹. On a written representation made to the archdeacon by not less than one-third of the lay members of the council or by one-tenth of the persons whose names are on the church electoral roll² of the parish, and deemed by the archdeacon to have been made with sufficient cause, the archdeacon must convene an extraordinary parochial church meeting, and must either take the chair himself or appoint a chairman to preside³. The persons entitled to attend any such special or extraordinary meeting are those entitled to attend the annual meeting⁴.

Where a new parish is created by a pastoral scheme⁵ the incumbent must as soon as possible take all necessary steps to convene a special parochial church meeting⁶ which must, in addition to any other business, elect representatives of the laity to the parochial church council and the deanery synod⁷.

2 As to the church electoral roll, see PARA 591 post.

3 Church Representation Rules r 18 (2). The chairman, not being otherwise entitled to attend the meeting, is not entitled to vote on any resolution: r 18 (2). Where the archdeacon is himself the minister, any representation under r 18 (2) must be made to the bishop, and in any such case the references to the archdeacon in r 18 (2) are to be construed as references to the bishop or to a person appointed by him to act on his behalf: r 18 (3).

6 Pastoral Measure 1968, Sch. 3 para 12 (1) (b). The incumbent is required to act in accordance with the provisions of the Church Representation Rules: Pastoral Measure 1968, Sch. 3 para 12 (1). A special meeting so convened and held in November or December may, if the meeting so resolves, be for all purposes under the Church Representation Rules the annual parochial church meeting for the succeeding year, and a special meeting so convened is in any event for all such purposes the annual parochial church meeting for the year in which it is so convened and held: Pastoral Measure 1968, Sch. 3 para 12 (3).

TEXT AND NOTE 4--Now all lay persons whose names are entered on the roll of the parish on the day which is 21 clear days before the date on which any special or extraordinary parochial church meeting is to be held are entitled to attend the meeting and to take part in its proceedings, and no other lay person is so entitled: Church

Representation Rules rr 22(2), 23(3); SI 1989/2094. A clerk in Holy Orders is entitled to attend any such meeting and to take part in its proceedings if by virtue of r 6(3), (4) or (5) (see PARA 563) he would have been entitled to attend the annual meeting of the parish had it been held on the same date, and no other such clerk is so entitled: r 22(3); SI 1981/2094.

TEXT AND NOTES 5-7--Now a pastoral scheme which creates a new parish may make provision, or authorise the bishop by instrument under his hand to make provision, for ensuring that the congregation of every church or place of worship in the new parish will have its own elected representatives of the laity on the parochial church council of that parish: Pastoral Measure 1983 Sch 3 para 12(1). Any provision included in a pastoral scheme or the bishop's instrument by virtue of these provisions will cease to have effect at the expiration of such period as may be specified in the scheme or instrument, as the case may be, being a period which does not exceed five years beginning with the date on which the new parish comes into being, and that period may not be extended or renewed by a subsequent pastoral scheme or instrument of the bishop: Sch 3 para 12(2). Any such provision has effect notwithstanding anything in the Church Representation Rules: Sch 3 para 12(3).

(vii) Parochial Church Councils

A. HISTORY, CONSTITUTION AND MEMBERSHIP

568. Church councils in parishes.

The body constituting the council of the parish for ecclesiastical purposes was formerly the vestry¹, which was composed of the incumbent or curate-in-charge and the persons of both sexes who were rated to the general rate in respect of the parish, whether resident there or not, and the occupiers of hereditaments so rated². In addition to its ecclesiastical business, which included the election of church-wardens and sidesmen, the vestry exercised certain powers relating to civil matters.

In consequence of a succession of enactments in the last hundred years, vestries have been rendered virtually obsolete³, and the council of the parish for ecclesiastical purposes is now the parochial church council, composed of persons whose qualifications include church membership⁴. Legal provision for the establishment of parochial church councils in all parishes was introduced by the Church of England Assembly (Powers) Act 1919, and the Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1921⁵ defined the powers, duties and liabilities of the councils⁶. Their functions have been considerably extended by subsequent legislation, and provision has also been made for the establishment in certain cases of joint parochial church councils⁷, district church councils⁸ and group councils⁹. Provisions governing the constitution of parochial church councils are contained in the Church Representation Rules¹⁰.

The Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956, which repealed and replaced the Measure of 1921, extends to the whole of the Provinces of Canterbury and York except the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man¹¹.

1 Wilson v M' Math (1819) 3 Phillim 67 at 82. It took its name from the room in the church where the priest put on his vestments: Wilson v M' Math supra.

2 In some parishes the powers of the general vestry were exercised by a select vestry, consisting of a limited body of parishioners, which might exist by immemorial custom, by a local Act of Parliament or by adoption of the Vestries Act 1831.

3 The civil functions of vestries were assigned to local government bodies by the Local Government Act 1894, s 6 (rural parishes), the London Government Act 1899 (repealed), the Welsh Church Act 1914, s 25, and the Local Government Act 1933, s 269 (repealed) (urban parishes): see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 4; LONDON GOVERNMENT vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 2. Their ecclesiastical functions were largely transferred to parochial church councils (see PARA 574 et seq post), but in relation to the choosing of church-wardens vestries retained their former powers until they were superseded by the meetings of parishioners held in accordance with the Churchwardens (Appointment and Resignation) Measure 1964 (see PARA 545 ante). Such provisions of the Vestries Acts 1818 to 1853 as remain unrepealed (ie the Vestries Act 1818, ss 1-4, 7-11; Vestries Act 1819, ss 1-3; Vestries Act 1831, ss 1-38, 40-43), relating largely to elections, voting rights and accounts and audit, appear to have virtually no application at the present day, although one or two vestries remain in existence for limited purposes.

4 See PARA 569 post.

5 See the Church of England Assembly (Powers) Act 1919, Appendix, art. 17 (b), Schedule para 2 (1) (i) (repealed).

6 See PARA 574 et seq post. To a large extent they were made the successors to other bodies; thus many of the powers, duties and liabilities of vestries, churchwardens and church trustees were transferred to the new councils with effect from 1st July 1921: see PARAS 575-577 post.

569. Status and composition of parochial church council.

The council is a body corporate by the name of the parochial church council of the parish for which it is appointed, and has perpetual succession¹. It consists of (1) all clerks in holy orders beneficed in or licensed to the parish, including in the case of a team ministry all vicars in the team²; (2) any deaconess or woman worker licensed to the parish or any male lay worker licensed to the parish and receiving a stipend in respect of work for the cure of souls in the parish³; (3) the churchwardens, being actual communicant members of the Church of England⁴ whose names are on the church electoral roll of the parish⁵; (4) such, if any, of the readers whose names are on the church electoral roll of the parish as the annual meeting may determine⁶; (5) all persons whose names are on the church electoral roll of the parish and who are lay members of the General Synod or any diocesan or deanery synod⁷; (6) such number of representatives of the laity as the annual meeting may decide⁸; and (7) co-opted members, if the parochial church council so decides, not exceeding in number one-fifth of the representatives of the laity elected to the council, and being either clerks in holy orders or actual lay communicant members of the Church of England⁹ of seventeen years of age or upwards¹⁰.

² Church Representation Rules, r 12 (1) (a), contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3. As to team vicars, see the Pastoral Measure 1968, Sch. 3 para 3 (3). Incumbents in a group ministry may attend meetings of the parochial church council of all the parishes in the area for which the group ministry is established; they are entitled to receive documents circulated to members of councils of which they are not themselves members and to speak, but not to vote, at meetings of such councils: Church Representation Rules, r 12 (3); see also the Pastoral Measure 1968, Sch. 3 para 3 (5), and PARA 872 post.

³ Church Representation Rules, r 12 (1) (b). As to deaconesses, see PARA 759 et seq post; as to women workers, see PARA 767 post.

⁵ Church Representation Rules, r 12 (1) (c). As to the electoral roll, see PARA 591 et seq post.

election of representatives of the laity in such manner as to ensure due representation of each congregation: see PARA 565 ante.

9 See note 4 supra. It is apparently not necessary that a co-opted member should have his name on the church electoral roll: see Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) 1/43.

10 Church Representation Rules, r 12 (1) (g). As to the term of office of co-opted members, see PARA 570 post.

569 Status and composition of parochial church council

NOTES--Rule 12 now r 14; SI 1994/3118, SI 1995/3243.

NOTE 1--Cathedrals Measure 1963 s 12 repealed with effect from the relevant date (see PARA 610A.1); Cathedrals Measure 1999 s 39(2), Sch 3.

TEXT AND NOTES 2-10--These provisions are subject to the provisions of r 1(3) (see PARA 591) and r 14(3): r 14(1); SI 1980/178, SI 1994/3118.

Any person chosen, appointed or elected as a churchwarden of a parish, being an actual communicant member of the Church of England whose name is on the roll of the parish, will, as from the date on which the choice, appointment or election is made, be a member of the parochial church council until he is admitted to the office of churchwarden, and will thereafter continue to be a member of that council by virtue of r 14(1)(d) (see TEXT AND NOTE 5) unless and until he ceases to be qualified for membership by virtue of r 14(1)(d): r 14(2); SI 1980/178.

The parochial church council must also include any clerk in Holy Orders who is duly authorised to act as chairman of meetings of the council by the bishop in accordance with App II r 5(b) (see PARA 589): r 14(1)(aa); Synodical Government (Amendment) Measure 2003 Schedule para 3.

TEXT AND NOTE 2--Words 'including in the case of a team ministry all vicars in the team' now omitted: Church Representation Rules r 14(1)(a); SI 1981/959. Provisions of 1968 Measure referred to not included in Pastoral Measure 1983; see now instead Church Representation Rules r 14(1)(c); SI 1981/959, SI 1995/3243, by virtue of which, in the case of a parish in the area of a benefice for which a team ministry is established, the parochial church council also includes all the members of the team of that ministry.

Church Representation Rules r 14(4) (as renumbered) amended to apply to the incumbents of all benefices in the group, every priest in charge of any benefice in it and where the area of the group ministry includes the area of a benefice for which a team ministry is established, all the vicars in that ministry: SI 1981/959.

Where two or more benefices are held in plurality and a team ministry is, or is to be, established for the area of one those benefices, then, if a pastoral scheme provides for extending the operation of the team ministry, so long as the plurality continues, to the area of any other benefice so held, Church Representation Rules r 14(1)(c) and (3) have effect as if the references to the area of the benefice were references to the combined area of the benefices concerned: r 14(5); SI 1981/959.

TEXT AND NOTE 3--Head (2) now any deaconess or lay worker licensed to the parish: r 14(1)(b); SI 1984/1039.

TEXT AND NOTES 4, 5--For 'actual communicant members of the Church of England' read 'actual communicants': r 14(1)(d).

NOTE 5--Rule 12(1)(c) now r 14(1)(d); SI 1995/3243.

TEXT AND NOTE 6--Head (4) now such, if any, of the readers who are licensed to the parish or licensed to an area which includes the parish and whose names are on the roll of the parish as the annual meeting may determine: r 14(1)(e).

TEXT AND NOTE 7--A person whose name is entered on the roll of each of two or more parishes must choose one of those parishes for the purpose of qualification for membership of a parochial church council under r 14(1)(f): r 1(4); SI 1980/178, SI 1994/3118. Rule 35(3) now r 42; SI 1994/3118.

TEXT AND NOTE 8--Rule 12(1)(f) now r 14(1)(g); SI 1995/3243; Synodical Government (Amendment) Measure 2003 Schedule para 4. Laity now represented as follows: 6 representatives of the laity where there are not more than 50 names on the electoral roll, 9 such representatives where there are not more than 100 names on the roll and, where there are more than 100 names on the roll, a further 3 such representatives for every 100 (or part thereof) names on the roll up to a maximum of 15 such members, and the numbers 6, 9, 3 and 15 may be altered from time to time by a resolution passed at any annual meeting, but not so as to take effect before the next ensuing annual meeting: r 14(1)(g) (as so amended). See also Pastoral Measure 1983 Sch 3 para 12(1)-(3) (see PARA 567).

TEXT AND NOTE 10--Under head (7), the number of co-opted members should not exceed one-fifth of the representatives of the elected laity or two persons whichever is the greater: r 14(1)(h); SI 1989/2094. For 'actual lay communicant members of the Church of England of seventeen years of age' read 'actual lay communicants of sixteen years of age': r 14(1)(h); SI 1994/3118.

570. Period of membership.

Representatives of the laity¹ on the parochial church council hold office from the conclusion of the annual meeting until the conclusion of the next annual meeting of the parish², although the annual meeting may decide that one-third only (or the number nearest to one-third) of the representatives of the laity elected to the council are to retire from office in every year; where it is so decided the representatives to retire at each annual meeting are those who have been longest in office since last elected, and as between representatives elected on the same day the selection of those to retire, unless they otherwise agree among themselves, is made by lot³. A representative of the laity must in any event retire at the conclusion of the third annual meeting after that at which he was elected³.

Persons who are members of a council by virtue of their election as lay members of a deanery synod hold office for a term beginning with the date of their election and ending with 31st May next following the election of their successors⁴. A co-opted member holds office until the conclusion of the next annual meeting⁵.

The annual meeting may decide that no representative of the laity on the parochial church council may hold office for more than a specified number of years continuously, and may also decide that after a specified interval a person who has ceased to be eligible by reason of such a decision may again stand for election as a representative of the laity on the council⁶.

Provision is made for the termination of membership in certain cases otherwise than by effluxion of time. A member of the council may resign his membership by notice in writing signed by him and sent or given to the secretary of the council⁷. Any elected representative of the laity whose name is, under the relevant provisions⁸, removed from the church electoral roll forthwith ceases to be a member of the parochial church council⁹ except that where a person's name is removed from the roll at his own desire¹⁰ he does not cease to be a member of the council by virtue of that fact unless the council so resolves¹¹. No person is deemed to vacate his seat as an elected or chosen member of the council by reason only of the fact that subsequently to his election or choice he has become a member ex officio¹².

NOTES--Rules 12, 14, 15 now rr 14, 16, 17: SI 1994/3118.

TEXT AND NOTES 1-5--Replaced, and r 16 substituted: Synodical Government (Amendment) Measure 2003 Schedule para 5. Representatives of the laity serving on the parochial church council by virtue of r 14(1)(g) (see PARA 569) hold office from the conclusion of the annual meeting at which they were elected until the conclusion of the third annual meeting thereafter, one third retiring and being elected each year (determined by lot), but, subject to r 17, are eligible for re-election on retirement: r 16(1), (6). Where a representative of the laity resigns or otherwise fails to serve for his full term of office the casual vacancy must be filled for the remainder of his term of office in accordance with r 48(1): r 16(2). However, an annual meeting may decide that the representatives of the laity serving by virtue of r 14(1)(g) are to retire from office at the conclusion of the annual meeting next following their election, but any such decision (which must be reviewed at least every six years) does not affect the terms of office as members of the parochial church council of those due to retire from office at the conclusion of an annual meeting held after that at which the decision was taken: r 16(3), (4). Persons who are members of a parochial church council by virtue of their election as lay members of a deanery synod hold office as members of the council for a term beginning with the date of their election and ending with 31 May next following the election of their successors: r 16(5).

NOTE 7--Rule 40 now r 49; SI 1994/3118.

TEXT AND NOTES 8-11--Rule 12(2) now renumbered as r 14(3); SI 1994/3118. Now a person ceases to be a member of a parochial church council (a) if his name is removed from the roll of the parish under r 1 (see PARA 592), on the date on which his name is removed, (b) if he refuses or fails to apply for enrolment when a new roll is being prepared, on the date on which the new roll is completed, (c) if he is disqualified from being a charity trustee under the Charities Act 1993 or from serving on that parochial church council by the bishop under the Incumbents (Vacation of Benefices) Measures 1977 and 1993 s 10(6), on the date on which the disqualification takes effect: r 14(3); SI 1980/178, SI 1994/3118. So far as heads (a) and (b) are concerned, these provisions are without prejudice to any right which the council may have to make that person a co-opted member: r 14(3).

571. Officers of the parochial church council.

The minister¹ of the parish is chairman of the parochial church council², and a lay member of the council must be elected as vice-chairman³. During a vacancy of the benefice and when the chairman is incapacitated by absence or illness or any other cause the vice-chairman acts as, and has all the powers vested in, the chairman⁴.

The council may appoint one of its number to act as secretary of the council, and if no member is appointed so to act the council must appoint some other fit person with such remuneration (if any) as it thinks fit⁵. The council may appoint one or more of its number to act as treasurer solely or jointly and, failing such appointment, the office of treasurer must be discharged jointly by such of the churchwardens as are members of the council⁶ or, if there is only one such churchwarden, by the churchwarden solely⁷.

The council must appoint a church electoral roll officer who may, but need not, be a member of the council and may be the secretary⁸. He has charge of the church electoral roll and acts under the council's direction for the purpose of carrying out its functions with regard to the roll⁹.

If auditors to the council are not appointed by the annual meeting¹⁰ or if auditors appointed by the annual meeting are unable or unwilling to act, auditors must be appointed by the council¹¹.

The parochial church council has a standing committee which must consist of not less than five persons: the minister and such of the churchwardens as are members of the council¹ are ex officio members of the standing committee, and the council must by resolution appoint at least two other members to the committee from among its own members and may remove any person so appointed². Subject to any directions given by the council the standing committee has power to transact the council's business between council meetings³.

The council may appoint other committees for the purpose of the various branches of church work in the parish and may include in them persons who are not members of the council⁴. The minister is a member of all committees ex officio.

Where there are two or more parishes within the area of a single benefice or two or more benefices are held in plurality, a pastoral scheme or order¹ may provide for constituting a joint parochial church council for all or some of the parishes of the benefice or benefices and for empowering that council to exercise such of the powers of the parochial church councils of the several parishes concerned as may be determined by or in accordance with the scheme or order; and the scheme or order may apply in relation to the joint parochial church council, with such modifications as may be specified, the provisions of any Measure relating to parochial church councils, and may make provision for vesting in the joint parochial church council any property, rights and liabilities of the parochial church councils of the several parishes concerned².

A pastoral scheme which establishes a group ministry³ or a team ministry⁴ covering more than one parish may make provision for the establishment of a group council comprising the members of the ministry and lay representatives of each parochial church council in the area⁵.

A pastoral scheme which establishes a team ministry may make provision for the election by the annual parochial church meeting of the parish or any of the parishes in the area concerned of a district church council for any district in which a church or place of worship is situated⁶.

Further, the annual parochial church meeting of any parish in which there are two or more churches or buildings licensed for public worship may make a scheme for the election of district church councils for any district in the parish in which a church or licensed building is situated⁷.

TEXT AND NOTE 2--Now where a pastoral scheme provides for two or more parishes to be comprised in the area of a single benefice or a pastoral scheme or order provides for two or more benefices to be held in plurality, the scheme or order may make provision, or authorise the bishop by instrument under his hand with the concurrence of the incumbent of the benefice or benefices to make provision (a) for establishing a joint parochial church council for all or some of the parishes of the benefice or benefices, (b) for the chairmanship, meetings and procedure of that council and (c) subject to the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 Sch 2 para 20 (see PARA 818A.14), for the functions of the parochial church council of any such parish which must or may be delegated to the joint parochial church council, being provisions to the same effect as those which may be made by a scheme under the Church Representation Rules in the like case: Pastoral Measure 1983 Sch 3 para 13(1): 1986 Measure Sch 4 para 25.

Any provisions which are included in a pastoral scheme or order or the bishop's instrument by virtue of the above provisions will cease to have effect at the expiration of such period as may be specified in the scheme, order or instrument, being a period which does not exceed five years from the date on which the scheme or order, as the case may be, came into operation, and that period may not be extended or renewed by a subsequent pastoral scheme, pastoral order or instrument of the bishop: 1983 Measure Sch 3 para 13(2). Provision is also made for any provisions which were included in a pastoral scheme or order by virtue of Sch 3 para 13 as originally enacted to cease to have effect; see Sch 3 para 13(3).

Where the provisions of a pastoral scheme or order for the holding of benefices in plurality are terminated under s 18(2) (see PARA 853), any provision of a pastoral scheme or order or the bishop's instrument establishing a joint parochial church council for all or some of the parishes of those benefices and the other provisions of them affecting that council ceases to have effect on the date on which the first mentioned provisions cease to have effect: Sch 3 para 13(4).

B. DUTIES AND POWERS

(A) IN GENERAL

574. General functions of parochial church councils.

It is the duty of the incumbent¹ and the parochial church council to consult together on matters of general concern and importance to the parish². The council's functions include (1) co-operation with the incumbent in promoting in the parish the whole mission of the Church, pastoral, evangelistic, social and ecumenical³; (2) the consideration and discussion of matters concerning the Church of England or any other matters of religious or public interest, but not the declaration of the doctrine of the Church on any question⁴; (3) making known and putting into effect any provision made by the diocesan synod or the deanery synod⁵, but without prejudice to the powers of the council on any particular matter⁶; (4) giving advice to those synods on any matter referred to the council⁷; and (5) raising such matters as it considers appropriate with those synods⁸. In the exercise of its functions the council must take into consideration any expression of opinion by any parochial church meeting⁹.

1 'Incumbent' is not defined for the purposes of this provision; see however para 541 ante, and cf. the definition of 'minister' in the Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956, s 1, which adopts that contained in the Rules for the Representation of the Laity, replaced by the Church Representation Rules, r 44 (1), contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3; see PARA 544 note 6 ante. The 'minister of the parish' is the chairman of the parochial church council: see the Church Representation Rules, App. II para 1 (a), and PARA 571 ante.

2 Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956, s 2 (1); Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 6. This provision supersedes an earlier provision which declared it to be the primary duty of the council to co-operate with the minister in the initiation, conduct and development of church work. In Re St Peter, Roydon [1969] 2 All ER 1233 at 1235, [1969] 1 WLR 1849 at 1852, it was held by the Chelmsford Consistory Court, on the basis of that earlier provision, that in carrying out any particular duty the council must pay proper regard to the minister's wishes or suggestions but that, having done so, it must be free to differ from him if in its view the honest discharge of the particular duty, required it to do so. Such a proposition would be no less justified in the light of the revised wording of the section.

TEXT AND NOTES 1, 3--For 'incumbent' read 'minister': Church of England, (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1983 s 5. Rule 44 now r 54; SI 1994/3118.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(9) PARISHES/(vii) Parochial Church Councils/B. DUTIES AND POWERS/(A) In general/575. Transferred powers and duties of vestries.

575. Transferred powers and duties of vestries.

The parochial church council of every parish¹ has the like powers, duties and liabilities as, immediately before 1st July 1921², the vestry³ of that parish had with respect to the affairs of the church, except as regards the election of churchwardens and sidesmen, and as regards the administration of ecclesiastical charities, but including the power of presentation to the benefice of the parish if the right to present to it was vested in or in trust for the parishioners⁴, and the power of making any voluntary church rate⁵.

1 Provision is made by the Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 12, for the transfer of the functions of the parochial church council (with some modifications) to the administrative body of a parish church cathedral, and where such transfer takes place a reference to the administrative body of the cathedral must be substituted for any reference to the parochial church council contained in the Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956: Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 12 (4); see further PARA 623 post. Where a parish has more than one parish church by virtue of a designation under the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 27 (1), the powers, duties and liabilities of the parochial church council of the parish extend to each of the parish churches: s 27 (3) (d); see PARA 538 ante.

2 1st July 1921 was the date on which the Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1921 received the royal assent. That Measure was repealed and replaced by the Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956, but 1st July 1921 remains the 'relevant date': s 1.

4 See PARA 796 post.

5 Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956, s 4 (1) (i). Section 4 (1) is subject to the provisions of any Act or Measure passed after 1st July 1921 and to anything lawfully done under such provisions: s 4 (1). All enactments in any Act, whether general, local or personal, relating to any powers, duties or liabilities transferred to the council from the vestry, churchwardens or church trustees (see PARAS 576, 577 post) are subject to the provisions of the Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956 and are, so far as circumstances admit, to be construed as if any reference to the vestry or the churchwardens or church trustees referred to the parochial church council, and those enactments are to be construed with such modifications as may be necessary for carrying the Measure of 1956 into effect: s 4 (2). As to voluntary church rates, see PARA 586 post.

The parochial church council of every parish¹ has the like powers, duties and liabilities as, immediately before 1st July 1921², the churchwardens³ of that parish had with respect to (1) the financial affairs of the church, including the collection and administration of all money raised for church purposes and the keeping of accounts in relation to those affairs and that money⁴; (2) the care, maintenance, preservation and insurance of the fabric of the church and its goods and ornaments⁵; and (3) the care and maintenance of any churchyard (open or closed)⁶, with the like powers as, immediately before 1st July 1921, were possessed by the churchwardens to recover the cost of maintaining a closed churchyard⁷. The churchwardens' powers, duties and liabilities with respect to visitations⁸ are not affected by the transfer⁹.

1 See PARA 575 note 1 ante. See also the Pastoral Measure 1968, Sch. 3 para 12 (4), which provides that, without prejudice to any general rule of law relating to parochial church councils, the powers, duties and liabilities set out in the Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956, s 4 (1) (ii) (see notes 3-5 infra), continue to apply to any church which was formerly a parish church and becomes a chapel of ease as the result of a pastoral scheme or order (as to which see PARA 856 post), and to the churchyard of any such church, except so far as the scheme or order otherwise provides.

In some places by local custom the vestry formerly had, and the parochial church council now has¹, the right of electing the incumbent². A parochial church council has certain rights of objection or consultation with regard to transfer of rights of patronage³. Where a vacancy in the benefice occurs the council may make representations to the patron and may prevent a presentation until the statutory provisions have been complied with⁴. No right of patronage may be transferred by the diocesan board of patronage without the consent of the parochial church council of the parish concerned, except where the parish becomes part of another diocese⁵. The parochial church council may in certain cases purchase the rights of patronage of benefices situate within the parish⁶. The bishop's power to postpone the filling of a vacant benefice may be exercised only after consultation with the parochial church council⁷.

The parochial church council has power jointly with the minister to appoint and dismiss the parish clerk and sexton and their assistants⁸.

Decisions as to which of the authorised forms of service are to be used in a church in a parish must be taken jointly by the minister and the parochial church council¹, and alternative versions of the Bible may not be used in place of the portions set out in the Book of Common Prayer in any church in a parish without the agreement of the parochial church council². A minister is not permitted to change the form of vesture in use in the church or chapel in which he officiates unless he has ascertained by consultation with the parochial church council that the changes will be acceptable³.

The parochial church council must, insofar as the law may from time to time require, provide and pay for certain requisites of divine service⁴ including a font, a holy table, communion plate and linen, surplices for the minister, reading desks and pulpit, seats for the congregation, church bells, books for the conduct of services, an alms box and register books⁵.

580. Miscellaneous functions of parochial church councils.

The parochial church council has power to make representations to the bishop with regard to any matter affecting the welfare of the church in the parish¹.

Before deciding to make by recommendations to the bishop the pastoral committee of a diocese² must ascertain the views of the parochial church council of any parish which would be affected by the implementing of any recommendations, proposals or draft scheme or order³.

In the exercise of the faculty jurisdiction, a court will generally require a supporting resolution of the parochial church council before authorising any changes affecting the church or its contents or the churchyard, but the council's resolution is not conclusive, and may for good reasons be disregarded⁴. Under the alternative procedure by archdeacon's certificate every application must be supported by a resolution of the council⁵.

In the case of an agreement for the sharing of a church building or buildings between two or more churches the parties to the agreement must, as respects the Church of England, include the parochial church council of the parish concerned⁶.

The parochial church council is entitled to receive notice of, and to object to, any proposal for the sale or pulling down of a parsonage house or for the erection or purchase of a new parsonage house⁷. It must also be given notice of any proposed application or disposition of money arising from such transactions and may make representations to the Church Commissioners with respect to them⁸.

A pastoral scheme may provide, or authorise the bishop to provide, for the election by parochial church councils of representatives to a group council⁹.

1 Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956, s 7 (v). As to the making of representations to the archdeacon, or in some cases to the bishop, with a view to the convening of an extraordinary meeting of the council, see PARA 588 post.

3 See the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 3 (1), (2) (c), and PARA 862 post. The council is for this purpose an 'interested party' (see s 3 (2)), and is entitled to be given an opportunity of meeting the pastoral committee or a sub-committee or one of its representatives (s. 3 (3)). At a later stage in the procedure the council is entitled to receive a copy of any draft scheme or order prepared by the Church Commissioners, and to be allowed not less than twenty-eight days for making written representations with respect to it: s 5 (1); see PARA 878 post. For the council's rights in regard to termination of provisions of a pastoral scheme for the holding of benefices in plurality, see also s 17 (2).

580 Miscellaneous functions of parochial church councils

TEXT--A parochial church council may give the minister general guidance with respect to the burial in the churchyard or other parish burial ground of persons not having a right of burial there: Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1976 s 6(2). Burial includes disposal of cremated remains: 1976 Measure s 6(2); Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1992 Sch 3 para 12.

If it appears to an archdeacon that (i) anything has been done in a parish in his archdeaconry which ought not to have been done without a faculty, or (ii) anything which ought to have been done in connection with the care of any church in his archdeaconry or any article appertaining to any such church has not been done, he may convene an extraordinary meeting of the parochial church council, or an extraordinary parochial church meeting, for the purpose of discussing the matter, and must either take the chair himself or appoint a chairman to preside: Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 s 20. The chairman is not entitled to vote on any resolution before the meeting: s 20.

(B) PROPERTY AND MAINTENANCE

581. Maintenance and repair of church and churchyard.

The freehold of the church, with its fixtures, and of the churchyard is vested either in the incumbent or, in some cases, in the rector, when not the incumbent¹, but they are in the joint possession of the incumbent and the parochial church council, without whose consent no one has a right to enter them except for the purpose of some service². The council is entrusted with their care and maintenance, including the provision of necessary furniture and fittings in the church and the proper fencing of the churchyard³. It is not bound to perform the duty if it has no funds for the purpose⁴, and the duty does not extend to the chancel where it is repairable by the rector⁵, nor to a private chapel or aisle in the church⁶. The incumbent has a right to keep the key of the church, and the parochial church council is only entitled to access to the church for the discharge of its duties, and has no right to break open the door for that purpose⁷. When the rector is liable to repair the chancel⁸ the parochial church council has power to enforce the liability in the county court⁹. In the event of trespass or damage (actual or threatened) to the church or churchyard the council can institute proceedings in the appropriate court¹⁰.

583. Property.

The parochial church council¹ has power to acquire (whether by way of gift or otherwise) any property real or personal for any ecclesiastical purpose² affecting the parish or any part of it³ or for any purpose in connection with schemes (called 'educational schemes') for providing facilities for the spiritual, moral and physical training of persons residing in or near the parish⁴ with power to manage, administer and dispose of any property so acquired⁵.

A council may not acquire any interest in land, other than a short lease⁶, or in any personal property to be held on permanent trusts⁷, without the consent of the diocesan authority⁸. Where on or after 2nd January 1957⁹ a council holds or acquires any such interest in land or in personal property, the interest must be vested in the diocesan authority subject to all trusts, debts and liabilities affecting it¹⁰. Where any property is so vested in the diocesan authority the council may not sell, lease, let, exchange, charge or take any legal proceedings with respect to it without the authority's consent¹¹, and the council must keep the authority indemnified in respect of all existing and subsequent liabilities, all rates, taxes, insurance premiums and other outgoings, all costs, charges and expenses incurred by the authority in relation to the acquisition or insurance of the property or as its trustee, and all costs, proceedings, claims and demands in respect of any of the foregoing matters¹². The accounts of all trusts administered by the council must be laid before the diocesan authority annually¹³.

1 As to the special provisions applicable where the functions of the parochial church council are transferred to the administrative body of a parish church cathedral, see the Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 12 (4), (5), and PARA 623 post. The Parochial Church Council's (Powers) Measure 1956, ss 5 (1), 6, 8, do not apply where there has been such a transfer: Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 12 (4) (b).

2 'Ecclesiastical purpose', as used in this context, is not defined. For a discussion of the interpretation to be put upon it, see Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) II/71-73, where it is suggested that the meaning must be deduced from its context and should be narrowed or widened accordingly, but that any purpose furthering the work of the Church of England in a parish can, generally speaking, be assumed to be an 'ecclesiastical purpose' within the meaning of this provision.

4 Ibid s 5 (1) (b). See PARA 584 post.

5 Ibid s 5 (2); see PARA 1067 post. The powers of management, administration and disposal are subject to the provisions of the Measure (see in particular s 6 infra) and of the general law and to the provisions of any trusts affecting any such property: s 5 (2).

6 'Short lease' means a lease for a term not exceeding one year, and includes any tenancy from week to week, from month to month, from quarter to quarter, or from year to year: ibid s 6 (6).

7 Any question as to whether personal property is to be held on permanent trusts is to be determined, for the purposes of ibid s 6, by a person appointed by the bishop: s 6 (7).

8 Ibid s 6 (1). 'Diocesan authority' means the diocesan board of finance or any existing or future body appointed by the diocesan synod to act as trustee of diocesan trust property: s 1; Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 4 (7); see PARAS 517, 518 ante. See also Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) II/75 et seq.

11 Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956, s 6 (3). In other respects the council's powers in relation to the management, administration or disposition of the property are not affected by this enactment (s. 6 (3)), but the consents required by s 6 (3) are additional to any other consents required by law, either from the Charity Commissioners or the Secretary of State: Secretary of State for Education and Science Order 1964, S.I. 1964 No. 490, arts. 2 (1), 3 (2) (a).

584. Educational schemes.

A parochial church council¹ has power, in connection with any educational scheme², to constitute or participate in the constitution of a body of managers or trustees or a managing committee consisting either wholly or partly of persons appointed by the council, and may confer upon any such body or committee such functions in regard to the implementation of the scheme, and such functions relating to property held for the purposes of the scheme, as it thinks expedient³. These powers must be exercised subject to and in accordance with the terms of any undertaking which may have been given by the council to the Secretary of State for Education and Science or to any local authority in connection with any financial or other assistance given by the Secretary of State or the authority in relation to the scheme⁴. The council must not exercise its powers without the consent of the diocesan education committee⁵ of the diocese, and any such consent may be given upon such terms and conditions as the committee considers appropriate in all the circumstances of the case⁶.

(C) FINANCE

585. Conduct of financial affairs by parochial church council.

The parochial church council is the body to which have been transferred the powers, duties and liabilities of churchwardens with respect to the financial affairs of the church, including the collection and administration of all money raised for church purposes and the keeping of accounts in relation to such affairs and money¹. It has power to frame an annual budget of money required for the maintenance of the work of the Church in the parish and otherwise, and to take such steps as it thinks necessary for the raising, collecting and allocating of such money². There is thus an implied power to borrow³. The council has power jointly with the minister to determine the objects to which all money to be given or collected in church shall be allocated, subject to the directions contained in the Book of Common Prayer as to the disposal of money given at the offertory at Holy Communion⁴. Unless raised for church purposes money collected by the incumbent at services held elsewhere than in church is within his disposal⁵.

The council must furnish to the annual parochial church meeting⁶ the council's audited accounts for the year ending on 31st December immediately preceding the meeting and an audited statement of the funds and property, if any, remaining in the council's hands at that date⁷. The council must also present to the annual meeting an annual report on the financial affairs of the parish⁸.

The accounts of all trusts administered by the council must be laid before the diocesan authority annually⁹.

1 Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956, s 4 (1) (ii) (a): see PARA 576 ante. See also Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) II/69, 70.

2 Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956, s 7 (i). A diocesan synod may by scheme provide for the payment by parochial church councils of annual contributions towards the estimated expenditure of the diocesan parsonages board (Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972, s 19 (2) (a)), or for the direct payment by councils of the whole or part of the cost of repairs to the parsonage houses of their own parishes (s. 19 (2) (b)), or for a combination of such contributions and direct payments (s. 19 (2) (c)). See further PARA 1178 post. As to the board, see PARA 520 ante.

3 This implied power was recognised in Re St Peter, Roydon [1969] 2 All ER 1233, [1969] 1 WLR 1849; but the view was expressed that the council has no power to give security for a loan (see Re St Peter, Roydon supra, at 1237, 1238, and at 1855, 1856).

4 Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956, s 7 (iv); and see Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) II/84. In default of agreement, the matter is to be dealt with or determined in such manner as the bishop may direct: Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956, s 9 (3). The provisions of ss 7 (iv), 9 (3), do not apply where the functions of the council have been transferred to the administrative body of a parish church cathedral: Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 12 (4) (b). As to the offertory, see PARA 981 post.

5 Marson v Unmack [1923] P 163. Alms collected at the offertory in a chapel in the parish have been held to be in the disposal of the incumbent and churchwardens of the parish church: see Moysey v Hillcoat (1828) 2 Hag Ecc 30 at 56; Dowdall v Hewitt (1864) 10 LT 823.

7 Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956, s 8 (1). As to the appointment of auditors, see PARA 564 ante. Copies of the audited accounts and statement must be affixed at or near the principal door of the parish church at least seven days before the annual meeting: s 8 (2); Church Representation Rules, r 8 (1) (d), (e), (2), contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3, which replaced the Rules for the Representation of the Laity. If they are approved by the meeting, they must be signed by the chairman of the meeting and delivered to the council for publication in the prescribed manner: Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956, s 8 (3); Church Representation Rules, r 8 (3); see PARA 564 ante. The provisions of s 8 of the Measure of 1956 do not apply where the functions of the council have been transferred to the administrative body of a parish church cathedral: Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 12 (4), (6).

Cathedrals Measure 1963 s 12 repealed with effect from the relevant date (see PARA 610A.1): Cathedrals Measure 1999 s 39(2), Sch 3.

Each council must furnish to the annual parochial church meeting for discussion the financial statements of the council for the financial year immediately preceding the meeting: 1956 Measure s 8(1) (s 8 substituted by Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 s 4). The financial year is such period as may be prescribed and the financial statements must be prepared in the prescribed form, audited or independently examined as prescribed and published and displayed in the prescribed manner: 1956 Measure s 8(2). 'Prescribed' means prescribed by the Church Representation Rules or by regulations made under the Church Representation Rules: 1956 Measure s 8(3).

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(9) PARISHES/(vii) Parochial Church Councils/B. DUTIES AND POWERS/(C) Finance/586. Church rates.

586. Church rates.

The parochial church council¹ may make, levy and collect a voluntary church rate for any purpose connected with the affairs of the church, including the council's administrative expenses and the costs of any legal proceedings². A church rate cannot be recovered by legal process³ except (1) where in pursuance of an Act of Parliament a rate may be made and levied which is applicable partly to ecclesiastical purposes⁴ and partly to other purposes, in which event the rate may be made, levied and applied for such other purposes as a separate rate, and not a church rate⁵; (2) where under the provisions of an Act a sum of money was on 31st July 1868 and is due on the security of church rates or rates in the nature of church rates⁶, or any money in the name of church rates was ordered to be raised and has not been raised, in which event a church rate may be enforced pursuant to those provisions for the purpose of paying the money so due or ordered to be paid, and the costs incidental thereto⁷; or (3) where under the authority of any private or local Act a church rate⁸ may be made or levied in lieu of or in consideration of the extinguishment or appropriation to other purposes of any tithes, customary payments or other property or charge upon property appropriated by law⁹ to ecclesiastical purposes, or where under such Act a church rate may be made or levied in consideration of the abolition of tithes, or other good consideration, or upon any contract¹⁰, in which event such Act remains in force¹¹.

A church rate is apparently to be assessed on the inhabitants of the parish¹² or district who are members of the Church of England in proportion to the rateable value of their property¹³. Any person who fails to pay a church rate is precluded from exercising any right in respect of the expenditure of the rate, and when an occupier fails to pay the owner may pay and become entitled to stand in the occupier's place¹⁴. All bodies corporate, trustees, guardians and committees¹⁵ who, or whose beneficiaries, are occupiers of property may pay any church rate made in respect of that property, and this payment is allowed to them in accounts rendered by them¹⁶. Where in pursuance of any Act a mixed fund arising partly from church rates and partly from other sources is directed to be applied to purposes of which some are ecclesiastical purposes, the portion of the fund which is derived from those sources is primarily applicable to the purposes which are ecclesiastical¹⁷.

1 The power to levy voluntary church rates belonged to vestries from 1868 (when compulsory church rates were abolished by the Compulsory Church Rate Abolition Act 1868) until the coming into operation of the Parochial Church Council (Powers) Measure 1921 (repealed), by which it was transferred to parochial church councils (see now the Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956, and PARA 575 ante). By a separate provision of that Measure the councils were authorised to exercise the power for the purposes there specified: see s 7 (ii), and the text to note 2 infra.

2 Ibid s 7 (ii). The Measure does not affect any enactment in any private or local Act under the authority of which church rates may be made or levied in lieu of or in consideration of the extinguishment, or of the appropriation to any other purpose, of any tithes, customary payments or other property or charge upon property, which tithes, payments, property or charge previously to the passing of such Act had been appropriated by law to ecclesiastical purposes (as to which see note 4 infra), or in consideration of the abolition of tithes in any place or upon any contract made or for good or valuable consideration given, and every such enactment continues in force as if the Measure had not been passed: s 4 (4).

3 Compulsory Church Rate Abolition Act 1868, s 1.

4 'Ecclesiastical purposes' means the building, rebuilding, enlargement and repair of any church or chapel, and any purpose to which by common or ecclesiastical law a church rate is applicable, or any of such purposes:

ibid s 10. See also the Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956, s 4 (4), where 'ecclesiastical purposes' is defined, for the purposes of that Measure, in the same way but with the omission of the words 'or chapel'.

5 Compulsory Church Rate Abolition Act 1868, s 2. If it is made in part for ecclesiastical and in part for other purposes it may be good as to the latter part and bad as to the rest: Watson v All Saints, Poplar, Vestry (1882) 46 LT 201.

6 'Church rate' means a rate for ecclesiastical purposes as defined in note 4 supra: Compulsory Church Rate Abolition Act 1868, s 10.

7 Ibid s 3.

8 The words 'church rate' here must be read in the sense in which the expression is used in the private or local Act, and the definition contained in note 4 supra, does not apply: LCC v Churchwardens of St Botolph, Bishopsgate [1914] 2 KB 660, CA.

587. General.

The meetings and proceedings of parochial church councils are governed by provisions¹ which apply to all councils except insofar as they may be varied by any council with the consent of the diocesan synod². Any question arising on the interpretation of these provisions must be referred to the bishop, and any decision given by him or by any person appointed by him on his behalf is final³.

No proceedings are invalidated by any vacancy in the membership of the council or by any defect in the qualification or election of any member⁴.

588. Meetings of the parochial church council.

A parochial church council must hold at least four meetings a year¹. Meetings² must be convened by the chairman³ and if not more than four meetings are held they must be at quarterly intervals as far as possible⁴. The chairman may convene a meeting at any time, and if he refuses or neglects to do so within seven days after a requisition signed by at least one-third of the members of the council has been presented to him those members may forthwith convene a meeting⁵.

On a written representation made to the archdeacon by not less than one-third of the lay⁶ members of the council, or by one-tenth of the persons whose names are on the church electoral roll⁷ of the parish, and deemed by the archdeacon to have been made with sufficient cause, the archdeacon must convene an extraordinary meeting of the council⁸.

Notice of any meeting (other than an emergency meeting⁹) must be posted at or near the principal door of every church or building licensed for public worship in the parish at least ten clear days before the meeting¹⁰. Not less than seven days before the meeting a notice containing the agenda of the meeting, including any motion or other business proposed by any member of the council of which notice has been received by the secretary, must be sent to every member of the council¹¹. In the case of sudden emergency or other special circumstances requiring immediate action by the council, a meeting may be convened by the chairman of the council at not less than three clear days notice in writing to the members of the council¹².

589. Conduct of proceedings.

The chair at a meeting of the parochial church council must normally be taken by the chairman of the council or, if he is not present or his office is vacant, by the vice-chairman¹, but if the chairman or vice-chairman thinks it expedient or the meeting so resolves, he is to vacate the chair either generally or for the purposes of any business in which he has personal interest or for any other particular business². If neither of those persons is available to take the chair for any meeting or for any particular item on the agenda, a chairman must be chosen by those members present from among their number and the person so chosen is to preside for that meeting or for that particular item³. The quorum for the transaction of business at any meeting is one-third of the members and no business which is not specified on the agenda may be transacted except by consent of three-quarters of the members present⁴. In the case, however, of an emergency meeting⁵ the quorum is a majority of the then existing members of the council and no business may be transacted except that specified in the notice convening the meeting⁶. The business of the council must be decided by a majority of the members present and voting⁷.

The minutes of the meeting must record the names of the members present⁸ and, if one-fifth of those present and voting on any resolution so require, the names of the members voting for and against that resolution⁹. Any member is entitled to require that the manner in which his vote was cast be recorded¹⁰.

A meeting may adjourn its proceedings to such time and place as may be determined at that meeting¹¹.

Any act of the council may be signified by an instrument executed pursuant to a resolution of the council and under the hands or (if an instrument under seal is required) under the hands and seals of the chairman presiding and two other members of the council present at the meeting at which such resolution is passed¹².

NOTE 1--Cathedrals Measure 1963 s 12 repealed with effect from the relevant date (see PARA 610A.1): Cathedrals Measure 1999 s 39(2), Sch 3.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(10) THE CHURCH ELECTORAL ROLL/591. Formation of church electoral roll.

(10) THE CHURCH ELECTORAL ROLL

591. Formation of church electoral roll.

There must be a church electoral roll¹ in every parish². The roll is the basis of the system for the representation of the laity in the parochial church councils and the synods of the Church of England³. The persons entitled to have their names⁴ entered on the roll of a parish are lay persons⁵ of either sex, of seventeen years or upwards⁶, who are baptised⁷ and are members of the Church of England or of a church in communion with it⁸, who are resident⁹ in the parish or, if not so resident, have habitually attended¹⁰ public worship¹¹ in the parish during a period of six months prior to enrolment¹², and who have signed the prescribed form of application for enrolment¹³. A person is entitled to have his name on the roll of each of any number of parishes if he is qualified as above to have his name entered on each roll¹⁴.

Until a parochial church council has been constituted in a parish the roll must be formed and revised by the minister and churchwardens, if any, and thereafter it must be kept and revised by or under the direction of the council¹⁵, which must appoint a church electoral roll officer to act under its direction for the purpose of carrying out its functions with regard to the roll¹⁶, and he is to have charge of the roll¹⁷.

1 The provisions governing the church electoral roll are contained in the Church Representation Rules (see PARA 389 ante), contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3.

2 Church Representation Rules, r 1 (1). The roll is available for inspection by bona fide inquirers: r 1 (1). Where a new parish is created by a pastoral scheme the incumbent must as soon as possible take all necessary steps to form a church electoral roll: Pastoral Measure 1968, Sch. 3 para 12 (1) (a). In the case of an omission in any parish to prepare or maintain a roll, the rural dean, upon the omission being brought to his notice, must ascertain the cause and report it to the bishop: Church Representation Rules, r 43 (5). As to the bishop's powers, see PARA 389 ante. For the meaning of 'parish', see PARA 534 ante.

3 Entry on the electoral roll of a parish is a necessary qualification for the participation of a lay person in parochial church meetings (see PARA 563 ante) and for election, as a representative of the laity, to the parochial church council (see PARA 569 ante), the deanery synod (see PARA 528 ante), the diocesan synod (see PARA 510 ante) and the House of Laity of the General Synod (see PARA 420 ante). If a person ceases to have that qualification his seat on the deanery synod, diocesan synod or General Synod (as the case may be) will normally be vacated forthwith (see PARAS 531, 507, 423 ante, respectively).

4 Addresses must also be recorded where practicable, although the omission of a person's address does not prejudice the validity of any entry on the roll: Church Representation Rules, r 1 (9).

5 Ibid r 1 (1). References in the Church Representation Rules to the laity must be construed as references to persons other than clerks in holy orders, and 'lay' must be constructed accordingly: r 44 (2).

6 Ibid r 1 (2) (c).

7 Ibid r 1 (2) (a).

8 Ibid r 1 (2) (b) (substituted by S.I. 1973 No. 1865). As to membership of the Church of England see PARA 346 ante. According to a note annexed to the form of application for enrolment (see note 13 infra), the only churches at present in communion with the Church of England are other Anglican Churches (see PARA 313 ante) and certain foreign churches. As to the determination of questions whether a church is in communion with the Church of England, see r 44 (4) (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865), and PARA 432 ante.

9 The residence must be of a regular, not casual, nature: ibid r 44 (5). For discussion of some borderline cases, see Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) l/53, 54.

10 'Habitual attendance' is not defined, but it would not appear to exclude the possibility of frequent attendance elsewhere. Relaxation of the requirement is allowed in the case of the re-enrolment of a person who was on the previous roll as a habitual worshipper but has been prevented by sickness or absence or other essential reason from worshipping for the past six months: Church Representation Rules, r 2 (6), App. I, s 1 note 2 (substituted by S.I. 1973 No. 1865); see PARA 594 post.

11 For the meaning of 'public worship', see PARA 545 note 8 ante.

12 Church Representation Rules, r 1 (2) (d).

13 Ibid r 1 (2) (e). For the prescribed form, see App. I, s 1 (substituted by S.I. 1973 No. 1865).

14 Ibid r 1 (3) (substituted by S.I. 1973 No. 1865). A person name is entered on the roll of each of two or more parishes must, however, choose one of these parishes for the purpose of rules prescribing the qualifications for election to a deanery synod (see PARA 528 ante), a diocesan synod (see PARA 510 ante) or the General Synod (see PARA 420 ante) or for membership of a deanery synod under r 19 (3) (b) (see PARA 528 ante): r 1 (3) (substituted by S.I. 1973 No. 1865).

15 Ibid r 1 (4). As to the constitution of parochial church councils, see PARA 569 ante.

16 Ibid r 1 (5) (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865). If a council has not been constituted the necessary action must be taken by the minister and churchwardens, if any: r 1 (4). Further as to the electoral roll officer, see PARA 571 ante.

17 Ibid App. II para 1 (f).

591 Formation of church electoral roll

NOTE 2--Pastoral Measure 1983 does not make this provision. See now Church Representation Rules r 1(6); SI 1981/959, SI 1994/3118, as follows: where a new parish is created by a pastoral scheme, the roll of that parish in the first instance consists (a) in the case of a parish created by the union of two or more former parishes, of the rolls of those parishes combined to form one roll; (b) in any other case, of the names of the persons whose names are at the date of the coming into existence of the new parish entered on the roll of a parish the whole or any part of which forms part of the new parish and who are either resident in the new parish or have habitually attended public worship therein.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(10) THE CHURCH ELECTORAL ROLL/592. Addition and removal of names.

592. Addition and removal of names.

The names of persons entitled to have their names entered on the church electoral roll must, subject to the relevant provisions, be from time to time added to the roll¹. No name may be added to or removed from the roll except by the authority of the parochial church council, and it is the council's duty to keep the roll constantly up to date and to cause names to be added and removed as from time to time required by the Church Representation Rules¹.

Subject to the foregoing, a person's name must, as the occasion arises, be removed from the roll if he has died², or has become a clerk in holy orders³, or has signified in writing his desire that his name should be removed⁴, or has ceased to reside in the parish (unless he continues habitually to attend public worship in the parish)⁵, or is not resident and has not attended public worship in the parish during the preceding six months (not having been prevented from doing so by illness or other sufficient cause)⁶, or was not entitled to have his name entered on the roll at the time when it was entered⁷. The removal of a person's name from the roll is without prejudice to his right to have it entered again if he has or acquires that right⁸.

Provision is made whereby, upon the alteration of the boundaries of parishes, name may be transferred from the roll of one parish to that of the other parish⁹.

1 Church Representation Rules, r 1 (6), contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3. If a council has not been constituted these functions are to be performed by the minister and churchwardens: see the Church Representation Rules, r 1 (4), and PARA 591 ante. As to periods when names may not be entered on the roll, see PARAS 593, 594 post. When a person applying for enrolment in any parish signifies his desire that his name should be removed from the roll of any other parish, notice of the fact must be sent by the enrolling council to the council of the other parish: r 3 (1).

2 Ibid r 1 (7) (a).

3 Ibid r 1 (7) (b).

4 Ibid r 1 (7) (c).

5 Ibid r 1 (7) (d) (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865). When a person's name is removed because he has become resident in another parish notice of the fact should, whenever possible, be sent by the removing council to the council of the other parish: r 3 (2).

6 Ibid r 1 (7) (e) (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865).

8 Ibid r 1 (8) (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865).

9 See ibid r 2 (8). The council of the parish from which the area is transferred must first ask the persons concerned whether they wish to have their names transferred, and if they answer affirmatively it must remove the names and inform the council of the parish in which those persons now reside, which must enroll their names without fresh application: r 2 (8).

NOTES 1-8--Rule 1(6)-(8) now r 1(8)-(10); SI 1994/3118.

TEXT AND NOTE 1--Second sentence of TEXT is now as follows: It is the duty of the electoral roll officer to keep the roll constantly up to date by the addition and removal of names as from time to time required by the Church Representation Rules and to report such additions and removals at the next meeting of the parochial church council: r 1(8); SI 1994/3118.

593. Revision of the roll.

Except in a year in which a new roll is prepared¹, the church electoral roll of a parish must be revised annually, after due notice has been given², by or under the direction of the parochial church council³. The revision must be completed not less than fifteen days or more than twenty-eight days before the annual parochial church meeting⁴. Upon every revision all enrolments or removals from the roll which have been effected since the date of the last revision (or since the formation of the roll, if there has been no previous revision) must be reviewed, and such further enrolments or removals as may be required must be effected⁵. After the completion of the revision a copy of the roll as revised, together with a list of the names removed since the last revision (or since the formation of the roll, if there has been no previous revision), must be published in the prescribed manner⁶. No name may be entered upon or removed from the roll during the period in any year between the completion of the revision and the close of the annual parochial church meeting⁷.

1 See PARA 594 post.

2 Notice of the intended revision in the prescribed form must be affixed by the minister or under his direction on or near the principal door of every church in the parish and every building there licensed for public worship, and remain so affixed for a period of not less than fourteen days before the commencement of the revision: Church Representation Rules, r 2 (1), contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3. For the prescribed form, see the Church Representation Rules, App. I, s 2 (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865).

TEXT AND NOTE 7--Now during the period while the copy is exhibited any errors and omissions in the roll may be corrected, but subject to this and the provisions of r 1(2) (see PARA 591), no names must be added to or removed from the roll during the period in any year between the completion of the revision and the close of the annual parochial church meeting: r 2(3); SI 1994/3118.

594. Preparation of new roll.

In the year 1978 and every succeeding sixth year a new church electoral roll must be prepared¹. Public notice must be given in the prescribed manner², and the parochial church council must take reasonable steps to inform every person whose name is on the previous roll that if he wishes to have his name entered on the new roll he must apply for enrolment³. The preparation of the new roll must be completed not less than fifteen days or more than twenty-eight days before the annual parochial church meeting⁴; and a copy must be published in the prescribed manner⁵. No names may be entered on or removed from the roll during the period in any year between the completion of the new roll and the close of the annual parochial church meeting⁶. On the publication of the new roll, the previous roll ceases to have effect⁶.

1 Church Representation Rules, r 2 (4), contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3.

2 Not less than two months before the annual parochial church meeting (see PARA 563 ante) notice in the form set out in ibid App. I, s 3 (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865), must be affixed as described in PARA 593 note 2 ante: r 2 (4). In addition, at every service on the two Sundays during the fourteen days the notice is so affixed (or, in the case of a church at which no service is held on either of those Sundays, at every service on the first Sunday after the affixing of the notice) the congregation must be informed of the preparation of the new roll: r 2 (4) (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865).

3 Ibid r 2 (5) (substituted by S.I. 1973 No. 1865). No such steps need be taken, however, in the case of a person whose name could be removed from the previous roll under r 1 (7) (see PARA 592 ante): r 2 (5) (substituted by S.I. 1973 No. 1865). The new roll must be prepared by entering on it the names of persons entitled to entry under r 1 (2) (see PARA 591 ante), a fresh application being required from each person who was on the previous roll, but no such person is disqualified for entry on the new roll by reason only of his not having attended public worship in the parish during the preceding six months if he was prevented from so doing by illness or other sufficient cause, in which case the circumstances must be stated on the application form: r 2 (6).

4 Ibid r 2 (6).

An appeal lies by any person aggrieved against any enrolment or refusal of enrolment on the roll of a parish¹, or against the removal of any name or the refusal to remove any name from the roll². An error in the electoral roll is not a ground of appeal against the result of any election unless (1) either it has been determined that there has been such an error or the question is awaiting determination³; and (2) the error would or might be material to the result of the election⁴.

Notice of the appeal must be given in writing to the rural dean or, if there is no rural dean, to the archdeacon⁵. Unless the parties agree to a settlement of their dispute the appeal must be referred to the electoral commission constituted by the diocesan synod⁶; and the commission must appoint three or a greater odd number of its members to consider and decide the appeal⁷. (11) GUILD CHURCHES

597. Origin of guild churches.

The City of London has many old parish churches and a vast number of persons who work in the City and live elsewhere, but there are very few resident parishioners and very few for whom Sunday services are required. When, therefore, the destruction wrought by the 1939-45 war once again brought to the fore the problem of City churches, the situation was met by the passing of the City of London (Guild Churches) Act 1952¹. This private Act named sixteen churches² in the City which could be designated guild churches³. Any church so designated ceases to be a parish church with a territorial parish⁴.

² The sixteen churches named by the Act are All Hallows London Wall, St Andrew Holborn, St Benet Paul's Wharf, St Botolph without Aldersgate, St Dunstan in the West, St Ethelburga Bishopsgate, St Katherine Cree, St Lawrence Jewry, St Margaret Pattens, St Martin Ludgate, St Mary Abchurch, St Mary Aldermanbury, St Mary Aldermay, St Mary Woolnoth, St Michael Paternoster Royal, and St Nicholas Cole Abbey: City of London (Guild Churches) Act 1952, s 3 (1), Sch. 1. As to the power to designate additional churches, see PARA 599 post.

598. Purposes and status of guild churches.

The primary purpose of a guild church and of its minister is to serve and minister to the non-resident daytime population of the City¹, but a subsidiary purpose is to provide a reserve of clerks in holy orders with special qualifications in scholarship, preaching, pastoral work or administration or with other particular qualifications rendering them suitable for specialised work elsewhere². The territory which formerly formed the parish of the guild church becomes part of another parish³, but the minister, the guild church and its churchyard are free from the jurisdiction and control of the incumbent, churchwardens and parochial church council of the parish within which they become situated, although they remain within the deanery, archdeaconry and diocese⁴. In fact a new entity, a parish church without a territorial parish, comes into being. The freehold of the guild church and its churchyard are vested in the Bishop of London⁵, except in the case of St Lawrence Jewry which is the official church of the City Corporation and the freehold of which is vested in the corporation⁶.

599. Creation and constitution of guild churches.

The Bishop of London is empowered to designate and establish any of the sixteen scheduled churches¹ as a guild church², by a certificate which is to be registered in the registry of the diocese of London and of which notice must be given in the London Gazette³. He may also designate and establish, in like manner and with like effect, any other church in the City⁴ which is not a parish church⁵. Once designated in each guild church there is a patron or patrons⁵, a minister (who is styled a vicar), one or more stipendiary curates (if required), churchwardens, sidesmen (if required), a guild church council, a church electoral roll and a guild church clerk⁶.

The designation of a church as a guild church does not affect the continuance, status or boundaries of any parish or extra-parochial place as existing for civil purposes, or any civil rights, privileges or obligations⁷.

1 For the names of the sixteen churches, see PARA 597 note 2 ante.

2 City of London (Guild Churches) Act 1952, s 4 (1). In the case of a church which at the date of the passing of the Act (1st August 1952) was a parish church, no certificate may be given unless and until that church has, under a reorganisation scheme (see s 3 (1)), ceased to be a parish church: s 4 (1) proviso. The reference here is to schemes made under the Reorganisation Areas Measure 1944 and 1949 (repealed), the relevant provisions of which have been superseded by the provisions of the Pastoral Measure 1968 relating to pastoral schemes (see PARA 856 et seq post). 600. Patronage and licensing of vicars.

The patrons of guild churches¹ are declared to have a right of patronage similar in all respects to the right of patronage enjoyed by the patron of a perpetual curacy². The right is capable of transfer in like manner as that of a benefice; it is, however, incapable of sale³. The vicar of a guild church must be licensed by the bishop⁴; and before being licensed he must make the declarations of assent⁵ and against simony⁶ and must take the oaths of canonical obedience and of allegiance and supremacy⁷.

If the Bishop of London refuses to license a person nominated to him by a patron, both patron and nominee have a right of appeal to the Archbishop of Canterbury and a judge of the Supreme Court⁸, and where the refusal is on grounds of doctrine or ritual they have the same remedies at common law as if the bishop had refused on those grounds to institute or admit a person nominated to a benefice⁹.

1 The patrons of the scheduled churches (see PARA 597 note 2 ante) are named in the City of London (Guild Churches) Act 1952, Sch. 1 (see s 7 (1)). In the case of additional guild churches (see PARA 599 ante) they are to be nominated in the bishop's certificate and treated as if included in Sch. 1: City of London (Guild Churches) Act 1960, s 3 (2), (3).

2 City of London (Guild Churches) Act 1952, s 8 (1). The interpretation of this provision, in the light of the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 87 (whereby all perpetual curacies were, with effect from 1st April 1969, converted into vicarages: see PARA 771 post), is left, it seems in some uncertainty.

Under a procedure akin to that provided for by the Benefices (Exercise of Rights of Presentation) Measure 1931¹, when a vacancy or impending vacancy in a guild church is notified², either the guild church council³ or the incumbent or both of them may make written representations to the patron as to the conditions, needs and traditions of the guild church, but without mentioning the name of a particular clerk⁴. In exercising his right of patronage the patron must have regard to the primary purpose of the guild church⁵, to any representations so made and to the special qualifications of the person chosen which render him suitable to offer specialised ministrations or services elsewhere⁶. With the written consent of the patron and after consultation with the guild church council the bishop has power to postpone the exercise of the right of patronage⁷.

The right of patronage of a guild church is liable to lapse in the same way as the right of patronage to a benefice, but subject to special provisions in respect of the calculation of time⁸.

1 See PARA 835 post; that Measure does not apply to guild churches: City of London (Guild Churches) Act 1952, s 9 (6).

2 A vacancy is deemed to occur on the day on which the church becomes a guild church: ibid s 9 (2). The bishop notifies a vacancy to the patron (unless the bishop is patron), the guild church council and the incumbent, if any, of the parish in which the guild church is situate: s 9 (1); City of London (Guild Churches) Act 1960, s 4. The minister appointed to officiate in a guild church is for the purpose of style and designation only called the vicar¹. He must be in priest's orders² and has a cure of souls of the persons on the guild church electoral roll³. In relation to the guild church and its churchyard he has all the rights and duties which an incumbent has in relation to the parish church and churchyard⁴, and is subject to ecclesiastical discipline in the same manner as an incumbent⁵. He is not subject to the jurisdiction of the incumbent of the parish in which the guild church is situate, but only to that of the Bishop and Archdeacon of London⁶.

Vicars of guild churches are, in the first instance, entitled to hold office for five years, but the appointment may be extended for further periods of three years⁷ and, with the bishop's consent, a vicar may resign at any time⁸. Their stipends are paid from the London diocesan stipends fund⁹ and they may not undertake additional duties elsewhere, except with the Bishop of London's approval and subject to certain limitations¹⁰.

One or more stipendiary curates may be licensed to assist the vicar of a guild church by permission of the bishop and at such stipend as he shall approve¹¹. Such a curate is in the same position in law as a curate licensed to assist an incumbent¹².

603. Guild church electoral rolls.

The persons entitled to have their names entered on a guild church electoral roll¹ are lay members of the Church of England of either sex, of seventeen years of age or upwards who are baptised and declare that they are members of the Church of England and that they do not belong to any religious body which is not in communion with the Church of England and who make written application for enrolment to the vicar or, if there is a vacancy, to the Archdeacon of London². The consent of the vicar (or archdeacon) is required for each enrolment³, but a person aggrieved by a refusal of consent may appeal to the electoral commission for the diocese of London⁴.

No person is entitled to be on the roll of more than one guild church or on a guild church electoral roll so long as he is on the roll of a parish in the City of London⁵.

1 See the City of London (Guild Churches) Act 1952, s 6 (1) (g). As to the effect of entry on a church electoral roll, as to qualification for attendance and voting at church meetings and as to membership of councils and synods under the system established by the Synodical Government Measure 1969 for representation of the laity, see PARA 591 ante; and see the City of London (Guild Churches) Act 1952, s 6 (2). For the purposes of qualification for election to a deanery or diocesan synod or to the House of Laity of the General Synod, or for ex officio membership of a deanery synod, a person whose name is on a guild church roll is deemed to be on the roll of the parish in which the guild church is: Church Representation Rules, r 4A, contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3 (added by S.I. 1973 No. 1865).

2 City of London (Guild Churches) Act 1952, s 15 (2). These provisions are similar to those which apply to church electoral rolls in parishes (see PARA 591 et seq ante), except that they contain no requirement of residence or habitual attendance at public worship and that the provisions respecting church membership have not been amended to correspond with the Church Representation Rules, r 1 (2) (b) (substituted by S.I. 1973 No. 1865).

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/2. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(11) GUILD CHURCHES/604. Guild church councils.

604. Guild church councils.

The guild church council¹ consists of the vicar, the stipendiary curate², the churchwardens (being lay communicants), lay members of the General Synod or the diocesan or deanery synods who are on the guild church roll, lay representatives elected by the annual church meeting³, and co-opted members, if any⁴. The guild church council corresponds to the parochial church council of a parish⁵, and its primary duty is to co-operate with the vicar in the initiation, conduct and development of church work in or in connection with the guild churches⁶.

Under a scheme prepared by the London diocesan conference⁷, guild church councils have similar powers to those of parochial church councils⁸ and elect representatives to the deanery synod⁹.

1 See the City of London (Guild Churches) Act 1952, s 6 (1) (f). The council is a body corporate by the name of the guild church council of the particular guild church, and has perpetual succession: s 17 (3).

2 If more than one curate has been appointed, the vicar nominates one to sit on the guild church council: ibid s 17 (1) (b) (i).

3 The guild church meeting, of all persons on the roll of the guild church, must be held annually not later in the year than in Easter week or in the following week: ibid s 16. As to the qualifications and election of lay representatives, see also s 6 (2)-(4).

4 Ibid s 17 (1); Synodical Government Measure 1969, ss 2 (2), 4 (7), 5 (2). Where a guild church is a ward church there are additional ex officio members: see PARA 609 post.

605. Churchwardens, sidesmen and clerks.

Two¹ churchwardens are to be chosen at the annual guild church meeting² in accordance with a procedure similar to that which applies to the choosing of churchwardens for a parish³. Those eligible for the office are persons eligible to be churchwardens of some parish in the City of London or who are on the guild church electoral roll⁴. Churchwardens of guild churches are admitted in the same manner as churchwardens of a parish and have similar powers, duties and liabilities⁵. Sidesmen may be appointed by the guild church meeting from among those on the electoral roll⁶. Subject to certain rights of former parish clerks⁷ the guild church council may, jointly with the vicar, appoint a guild church clerk and determine his salary and the conditions of the tenure of his office⁸.

1 More than two may be chosen if on 1st August 1952 the guild church was the church of a parish having more than two churchwardens: City of London (Guild Churches) Act 1952, s 19 (2) proviso.

Subject to the jurisdiction of the bishop and the archdeacon, the vicar has the control of all services held in a guild church and is under no obligation to hold any public service on a Sunday¹.

The Bishop of London may license guild churches for the solemnisation of marriages between persons of whom at least one is on the church electoral roll². Baptism may be solemnised in the case of a person under eighteen, one of whose parents is on the electoral roll, and of persons of eighteen and upwards who intend to apply for enrolment on the electoral roll and of any other person with the written consent of the incumbent of the parish in which that person resides³.

On the representation of the alderman and common councilmen (or a majority of them) of any ward in the City of London, the bishop may designate and establish as the official church of the ward any parish church or guild church situate in the ward or in a ward adjacent to it¹. The bishop has power, upon representations from the aldermen and common councilmen, to revoke this designation and establishment and substitute another church as the official ward church².

Where a parish church or a guild church becomes the official church of a ward, the alderman and comon coucilmn, to revoke this designation and establishment and communicants, appointed annually by the alderman and common councilmen of the ward, become additional ex officio members of the parochial church council or guild church council as the case may be³.

1 City of London (Guild Churches) Act, 1952, s 32 (1), (2). 3. CATHEDRALS

(1) CONSTITUTION OF CATHEDRALS

(i) Introduction

610. Status and classification.

In every diocese except Sodor and Man there is a cathedral (more precisely, a cathedral church), so named, it is said, because it contains the seat or throne of the bishop, and often described as the mother church of the diocese¹. Notwithstanding this relationship with the bishop and the diocese, the constitutional status of the cathedral is, apart from the bishop's powers as visitor², one of substantial independence; in particular, it is exempt not only from diocesan administrative control but also from the jurisdiction of the consistory court, including the necessity of obtaining faculties³.

Each cathedral has its own constitution and statutes⁴ by which provision is made for a governing body, for the appointment and functions of a dean or provost and of other clergy and officers, and for other matters relating to the organisation and business of the cathedral church. In many cases the constitution and statutes have a long history, during which they have been revised from time to time. The latest general revision was carried out under the provisions of the Cathedrals Measure 1963⁵.

Cathedrals are classified in that Measure as either dean and chapter cathedrals or parish church cathedrals, with capitular bodies headed by deans and provosts respectively⁶. An older classification, dating back to the time of the Reformation and now mainly of historical interest, was based on the distinction between cathedrals of the old foundation and those of the new foundation⁷.

2 See PARA 617 post.

3 See PARA 1309 post.

4 So far as they concern the internal regulation of the cathedral and its services, these statutes are part of the ecclesiastical law enforced by the ecclesiastical courts alone: A-G v Dean and Chapter of Ripon Cathedral [1945] Ch 239, [1945] 1 All ER 479.

5 See PARA 611 post.

6 See PARAS 618, 619, 640 post. There are in England 28 dean and chapter cathedrals and 14 parish church cathedrals: see PARA 615 note 15 post. 'Capitular body' means in the case of a dean and chapter cathedral, the dean and chapter, and in the case of a parish church cathedral, the cathedral chapter: Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 52 (1); see PARA 636 post.

7 Cathedrals of the old foundation were those which before the Reformation had been in the charge of secular priests (ie York, St Paul's (London), Referred, Lincoln, Lichfield, Chichester, Exeter, Salisbury and Wells). Cathedrals of the new foundation were those which had been monastic and in which, upon the dissolution of the monasteries, the monks had been replaced by secular canons (ie Canterbury, Winchester, Worcester, Ely, Carlisle, Durham, Rochester and Norwich). In addition the five cathedrals created de novo by Henry VIII (ie Chester, Peterborough, Oxford, Gloucester and Bristol) have sometimes been described as of the new foundation, but the description is not, in the strict sense, applicable to the cathedrals of sees founded in more recent times, as to which see PARAS 455, 456 ante.

The repeals do not apply in relation to a cathedral existing on 30 June 1999 until the relevant date: see PARA 610A.1. The provisions of the Measure, other than s 12 (see PARA 610A.8) do not apply to any charity, or to the property of any charity, except to the extent to which the Charity Commissioners for England and Wales so determine: s 34.

610A. Governing bodies and financial provisions.

1. The Transitional Council

For each cathedral in existence on 30 June 1999 there is to be a body called the Transitional Council whose duty it is to frame, with the consent of the bishop¹, as soon as is practicable, an instrument providing for a constitution for the cathedral, and an instrument providing for statutes for the cathedral, in accordance with the Cathedrals Measure 1999².

The membership of the Transitional Council must consist of: (1) the bishop³; (2) the dean or provost, as the case may be, who must be chairman⁴; (3) two residentiary canons⁵ appointed by the residentiary canons⁶; (4) one non-residentiary canon⁷ appointed by the non-residentiary canons from amongst themselves⁸; and (5) five lay persons appointed by the bishop after consultation with the dean or provost and the bishop's council, being persons having experience in connection with the work of the cathedral or the ability to reflect local, diocesan, ecumenical or wider interests in that connection⁹. The chairman has a second or casting vote in proceedings of the Transitional Council¹⁰.

If the Archbishops of Canterbury and York are satisfied that a constitution and statutes complying with the provisions of the Cathedrals Measure 1999 Pt I¹¹ have been framed in relation to a particular cathedral, they may jointly appoint the date on which certain provisions¹² of the Measure are to apply in relation to that cathedral ('the relevant date'), and the constitution and statutes come into operation on that date¹³. The Transitional Council ceases to exist on the relevant date¹⁴.

If, in relation to any cathedral, the instruments required to be made¹⁵ have not been made by such date as may be determined by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York acting jointly it is the duty of the dean or provost to send to the bishop of the diocese concerned and to the Secretary-General of the General Synod a report indicating the stage reached in the production of those documents, the reason for the delay and the date on which the Transitional Council expects that the instruments will be made¹⁶. Further reports must be made when so requested by the Archbishops¹⁷.

1 'Bishop' means the bishop of the diocese in which the cathedral is situated: Cathedrals Measure 1999 s 35(1).

2. The Council

For each cathedral there is to be, as from the relevant date¹, a body called the Council, a body called the Chapter² and a body called the College of Canons³.

The constitution of each cathedral must provide for the establishment of the Council⁴. The membership must consist of: (1) the chairman⁵; (2) the dean⁶; (3) a prescribed⁷ number (not less than two nor more than five) of other members of the Chapter chosen by it⁸; (4) two members of the College of Canons appointed by it⁹; (5) a prescribed number (not less than two nor more than four) of lay persons, not being members of the Chapter, representing the interests of the cathedral community¹⁰ elected in the prescribed manner¹¹; and (6) a prescribed number (not less than five nor more than ten) of persons appointed in the prescribed manner, being persons having experience in connection with the work of the cathedral or the ability to reflect local, diocesan, ecumenical or national interests in that connection¹². The members of the Council other than the dean will office for a term of years to be prescribed but are eligible for membership for further terms of office¹³.

The Council is under a duty to further and support the work of the cathedral, spiritual, pastoral, evangelistic, social and ecumenical, reviewing and advising on the direction and oversight of that work by the Chapter and, in particular, to: (a) consider proposals submitted by the Chapter in connection with the general direction and mission of the cathedral and to give advice on them to the Chapter¹⁴; (b) receive and consider the annual budget of the cathedral¹⁵; (c) receive and consider the annual report¹⁶; (d) consider proposals submitted by the Chapter in connection with the constitution and statutes of the cathedral with a view to their revision¹⁷; and (e) perform such other functions¹⁸ as may be prescribed¹⁹.

The Council may: (i) request reports from the Chapter on any matter concerning the cathedral²⁰; (ii) discuss and declare its opinion on any such matter²¹; and (iii) draw any matter to the attention of the Visitor²² or the Church Commissioners²³.

The Council must meet on at least two occasions in each calendar year²⁴. The bishop²⁵ is entitled to be present and speak, but not to vote, at meetings²⁶.

25 For the meaning of 'bishop' see PARA 610A.1 NOTE 1.

26 Cathedrals Measure 1999 s 3(2).

3. The Chapter

The constitution of each cathedral must provide for the establishment of the Chapter¹. The membership must consist of the dean and all the residentiary canons² of the cathedral, and a prescribed³ number (not less than two nor more than seven) of other persons⁴, at least two-thirds of whom must be lay, chosen in the prescribed manner⁵. The constitution may provide for the administrator of the cathedral to be an additional member of the Chapter⁶.

A person is disqualified from being a member of the Chapter if he is disqualified from being a charity trustee⁷ and the disqualification is not for the time being subject to a waiver by the archbishop of the province concerned⁸ in respect of that Chapter, and a member who becomes disqualified must cease to be a member⁹. The dean must be the chairman, and has a second or casting vote; he must be a member of every committee of the Chapter¹⁰.

The Chapter is to be under a duty to direct and oversee the administration of the affairs of the cathedral and, in particular, to: (1) order the worship and promote the mission of the cathedral¹¹; (2) formulate, after consultation with the bishop¹², proposals in connection with the general direction and mission of the cathedral and submit them to the Council¹³ for its advice¹⁴; (3) prepare an annual budget for the cathedral¹⁵; (4) submit to the Council the annual report and audited accounts prepared by the Chapter¹⁶ and such other reports as may be requested by the Council on any matter concerning the cathedral¹⁷; (5) submit to the College of Canons¹⁸ the annual report and audited reports¹⁹; (6) keep under review the constitution and statutes of the cathedral and submit any proposals for their revision to the Council²⁰; (7) manage all property²¹ vested in the cathedral and the income accruing from it and, in particular, ensure that the necessary repairs and maintenance in respect of the cathedral and its contents and other buildings and monuments are carried out²²; and (8) perform such other functions²³ as may be prescribed²⁴.

The Chapter has the power to acquire and dispose of property on behalf of the body corporate²⁵ subject to any necessary consent²⁶, although money which forms part of the endowment of the cathedral must not be invested or used except as may be provided²⁷.

The Chapter holds the common seal of the cathedral and must affix it when required²⁸. The Chapter must meet on at least nine occasions in each calendar year²⁹.

1 Cathedrals Measure 1999 s 4(1). As from the relevant date (see PARA 610A.1), any reference in an enactment, instrument or other document to any of the following bodies is, unless the context otherwise requires, to be construed as a reference to the Chapter of the cathedral: (1) the dean and chapter; (2) the administrative chapter; (3) the administrative body; (4) the cathedral chapter; (5) the capitular body; and (6) the cathedral council: ss 36(1), s 38(2), (3).

4. The College of Canons

The constitution of the cathedral must provide for the establishment of the College of Canons¹. The membership must consist of: (1) the dean²; (2) every suffragan bishop of the diocese³; (3) every full-time stipendiary assistant bishop of the diocese⁴; (4) every canon⁵ of the cathedral⁶; (5) every archdeacon of the diocese in question⁷.

The College of Canons must perform the functions conferred by the Appointment of Bishops Act 1533 on the dean and chapter⁸. The College must also: (1) receive and consider the annual report and audited accounts⁹; (2) discuss such matters concerning the cathedral as may be raised by any of its members¹⁰; and (3) perform such other functions as may be prescribed¹¹.

11 Ibid s 5(4)(c). For the meaning of 'functions' see PARA 610A.2 NOTE 18. For the meaning of 'prescribed' see PARA 610A.2 NOTE 7.

5. Provisions concerning bishops

The bishop¹ must have the principal seat and dignity in the cathedral². After consultation with the Chapter³ and subject to any provision in the statutes, he may officiate in the cathedral and use it in his work of teaching and mission, for ordinations and synods and for other diocesan occasions and purposes⁴. The Chapter must from time to time consult the bishop in respect of the general direction and mission of the cathedral, and the bishop may at any time seek the advice of the Chapter on any matter⁵.

The constitution of the cathedral must provide that the bishop is the Visitor thereof⁶. The bishop must as Visitor hear and determine any question as to the construction of the constitution and statutes⁷. The bishop may hold a visitation of the cathedral when he considers it desirable or necessary to do so or when requested by the Council⁸ or the Chapter⁹. In the course of a visitation, the bishop may give such directions to the Chapter, to the holder of any office in the cathedral or to any person employed by the cathedral as will, in the opinion of the bishop, better serve the due observance of the constitution of the statutes¹⁰.

The bishop may at any time propose for consideration by the Council amendments to the constitution and statutes¹¹.

11 Ibid s 6(9).

6. Provisions concerning deans

The principal dignitary of the cathedral, next after the bishop¹, is to be known as the dean². It is the duty of the dean as chairman of the Chapter³ to govern and direct on its behalf the life and work of the cathedral and, in particular, to: (1) ensure that Divine Service⁴ is duly performed in the cathedral⁵; (2) ensure that the constitution and statutes are faithfully observed⁶; (3) maintain good order and proper reverence in the cathedral⁷; (4) secure the pastoral care of all members of the cathedral community⁸; and (5) take all decisions necessary to deal with any emergency affecting the cathedral, pending consideration of the matter by the Chapter⁹.

The following steps must not be taken without the consent of the dean: (a) any alteration of the ordering of services in the cathedral¹⁰; (b) the settlement of the cathedral's budget¹¹; or (c) the implementation of any decision taken by the Chapter in the dean's absence¹².

If the office of dean is vacant, or the bishop considers that the dean will be unable to discharge any or all of his functions¹³ by reason of illness or absence or any other cause, the bishop must, after consultation with the Chapter, appoint a residentiary canon¹⁴ to carry out such functions as the dean is unable to discharge during the period in question¹⁵.

15 Cathedrals Measure 1999 s 7(4). If any question arises whether such an appointment is justified, such question must be determined by the archbishop of the province: s 7(5).

7. Provisions concerning residentiary canons

The constitution of each cathedral must provide that the holders of at least two residentiary canonries¹ in the cathedral must be engaged exclusively on cathedral duties². If any question arises whether a person is engaged exclusively on cathedral duties that question must, after consultation with the Visitor³ and the Chapter⁴, be determined by the Church Commissioners, and if any person is dissatisfied with the decision of the commissioners he may appeal to the archbishop of the province, whose decision is final⁵.

1 For the meaning of 'residentiary canon' see PARA 610A.1 NOTE 5. As to canons generally see PARA 643 et seq. 'Cathedral duties' means duties, whether in the cathedral or in the diocese, which should, in the opinion of the Chapter after consultation with the bishop (see PARA 610A.1 NOTE 1), be discharged in or from the cathedral: Cathedrals Measure 1999 s 8(2). However, the archbishop of the province and the Church Commissioners acting jointly may in special circumstances direct that the holder of a residentiary canonry who is normally engaged exclusively on cathedral duties must, for such period as they may specify, be treated as so engaged notwithstanding that he is performing duties other than cathedral duties: s 8(2) proviso.

3 As to the Visitor see PARA 610A.5.

4 As to the Chapter see PARA 610A.3.

5 Cathedrals Measure 1999 s 8(3). During a vacancy of the see of the bishop who is the Visitor of the cathedral the provisions requiring consultation with the Visitor do not apply: s 8(3) proviso.

8. Further provisions of the constitution

The constitution of the cathedral must: (1) provide that the members of the Council¹, the Chapter² and the College of Canons³ are a body corporate with perpetual succession and a common seal⁴; (2) provide for the appointment of canons in Holy Orders⁵, the manner of their appointment and their tenure of office, whether freehold or for a term of years⁶; (3) contain provision enabling lay canons to be appointed⁷; (4) specify the maximum number of residentiary canons⁸ and non-residentiary canons⁹ of the cathedral¹⁰; (5) provide for the appointment of an administrator of the cathedral, having such functions as may be prescribed¹¹; (6) provide for the appointment of an architect¹² or surveyor of the fabric and an auditor for the cathedral¹³; (7) provide for the appointment of a person having the function of supervising music in the cathedral¹⁴; and (8) provide for the establishment of a finance committee of the Chapter having the function of advising the Chapter in connection with its responsibilities in the field of financial and investment management, and for the membership to include persons who have expertise and experience in that field¹⁵.

Where, immediately before the relevant date¹⁶, the constitution of a cathedral provided for the appointment of the dean to be by Her Majesty the constitution must continue to so provide¹⁷. In any other case, the constitution must provide that the incumbent of the benefice which comprises the parish of which the cathedral is the parish church is to be the dean¹⁸.

The constitution of each cathedral which is not a parish church must provide for the formation and maintenance of a roll containing the names of persons who are members of the cathedral community¹⁹ and apply to be enrolled as such²⁰.

The constitution may contain provision: (a) enabling or requiring a committee ('the Cathedral Community Committee') to be established, the membership consisting of persons whose names are on the roll²¹; (b) enabling or requiring committees to be established by the Chapter²²; and (c) for the delegation of functions to any committee²³.

Further provisions apply in the case of cathedrals in respect of which, immediately before the relevant date, there was no corporate body known as the dean and chapter²⁴.

13 Cathedrals Measure 1999 s 9(1)(f) (amended by Care of Cathedrals (Amendment) Measure 2005 Sch 3 para 7(1)(a)). The constitution of each cathedral must provide that the architect or surveyor of the fabric appointed by virtue of the 1999 Measure s 9(1)(f) must be an architect or surveyor having such qualifications and expertise in matters relating to the conservation of historic buildings and other matters as the Chapter, after consultation with the Cathedrals Fabric Commission and such other persons or bodies as it thinks fit, considers appropriate to enable the role and duties of the architect or surveyor of the fabric to be discharged: s 9(1A) (added by the Care of Cathedrals (Amendment) Measure 2005 Sch 3 para 7(1)(b)). Until the constitution of any cathedral has made provision as required by Sch 3 para 7(1), the Chapter must proceed as if the constitution of the cathedral had made such provision: 2005 Measure Sch 3 para 7(2).

24 See ibid s 12.

9. Statutes

The statutes of each cathedral must make provision for the good government of the cathedral and may, in particular¹: (1) provide for the creation, continuance, abolition, suspension or termination of suspension of any dignity, office or body in the cathedral and for the title by which any dignity or office is to be known²; (2) provide that any presentations or nominations to benefices³ in the patronage of the cathedral must be exercised by the Chapter or by a patronage committee of the Chapter⁴; (3) provide, where a cathedral is a parish church⁵, that part of that cathedral is to be the parish church or, where part of a cathedral is a parish church, that the cathedral or any other part thereof is to be the parish church⁶; and (4) provide for any incidental and supplementary matters⁷.

6 Cathedrals Measure 1999 s 11(c).

7 Ibid s 11(d).

10. Revision of constitution and statutes

The Council¹ of any cathedral may, with the consent of the bishop², by instrument under the common seal of the cathedral³ revise the constitution or statutes of the cathedral⁴. Any instrument may either provide a new constitution or new statutes or may amend the constitution or statutes in force immediately before the instrument comes into force⁵.

Before taking any steps under the following provisions, the Council must afford the Chapter⁶ an opportunity to express views as to the Council's proposals for revision and must have regard to those views⁷.

In the case of a revision of the constitution, the Council must prepare a draft of the instrument and a notice⁸ of the preparation of the draft instrument setting out its objects and specifying the place in the diocese where copies may be inspected and stating that the Council will consider any written representations with respect to the instrument made before such date as may be specified⁹. The Council must also send a copy of the draft instrument to the Secretary-General of the General Synod¹⁰. After expiration of the period during which representations may be made, the Council, having considered any representations made, may, whether as a result of such representations or otherwise, amend the draft instrument as it thinks expedient¹¹.

In the case of a revision of the statutes, the Council must prepare a draft of the instrument and display in a prominent position in or in the vicinity of the cathedral a notice of its preparation setting out its objects and specifying the place in the diocese where copies may be inspected and stating that the Council will consider any written representations with respect to the draft instrument made before such date as may be so specified¹². After the expiration of the period during which representations may be made, the Council, having considered any representations made, may, whether as a result of such representations or otherwise, amend the draft instrument as it thinks expedient¹³.

After compliance with the above requirements, a copy of the draft instrument in question must be signed by the chairman of the Council on its behalf or, in the case of the absence or incapacity of its chairman, by two other members of the Council nominated by it for that purpose¹⁴. The signing of the copy of the draft instrument and the affixing of the common seal of the cathedral is conclusive evidence that the provisions¹⁵ relating to the preparation of the instrument have been complied with¹⁶. A copy of the instrument must be sent to the Secretary-General of the General Synod¹⁷.

An instrument¹⁸ which affects any right or interest of Her Majesty must not be made without the consent of Her Majesty¹⁹.

11. General duty

Any person or body on whom functions¹ are conferred by or under the Cathedrals Measure 1999 must, in exercising those functions, have due regard to the fact that the cathedral is the seat of the bishop² and a centre of worship and mission³.

UPDATE

610-625 Constitution of Cathedrals

The Cathedrals Measure 1999, which requires all cathedrals to change to a single pattern of governance, repeals the Cathedrals Measure 1963 ss 6-38, 45-51 and the Cathedrals Measure 1976 ss 1-6: 1999 Measure s 39(2), Sch 3. The repeals do not apply in relation to a cathedral existing on 30 June 1999 until the relevant date: see PARA 610A.1. The provisions of the Measure, other than s 12 (see PARA 610A.8) do not apply to any charity, or to the property of any charity, except to the extent to which the Charity Commissioners for England and Wales so determine: s 34.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/3. CATHEDRALS/(1) CONSTITUTION OF CATHEDRALS/(i) Introduction/611. The Cathedrals Measure 1963.

611. The Cathedrals Measure 1963.

The principal enactment dealing with cathedrals is the Cathedrals Measure 1963. This Measure, which replaced earlier legislation¹, does not (except for a few specified provisions) apply to Christ Church, Oxford²; but it applies to all other cathedral churches in England which existed on 31st July 1963³. In addition to re-establishing in amended form the machinery and procedure for revision of constitutions and statutes (including detailed specification of provisions whose inclusion in schemes is required or permitted⁴), the Measure contains provisions of general application relating to the property and financial affairs⁵ of cathedrals, together with a number of provisions concerning named cathedrals⁶.

1 In particular, it repealed and with new provisions the Cathedrals Measure 1931 (except ss 23, 29, 30) and the Cathedrals (Amendment) Measure 1934; it also repealed certain obsolete provisions relating to cathedral churches or to churches which were or had been collegiate churches: Cathedrals Measure 1963, long title; see also ss 46, 53, 54 (1), Schs. 1, 2

Transitional provisions were included in respect of existing schemes made under any previous enactment, and in respect of functions which at the passing of the Measure on 31st July 1963 were exercisable in relation to property by the capitular body of a cathedral: see s 54 (1), (2). It was declared that no provision of the Measure or of any scheme made under it should adversely affect the tenure of office or any right or pension of any person who, at the passing of the Measure on 31st July 1963, held or had a freehold or other office conferring fixity of tenure in any cathedral unless, by an instrument in writing under his hand, he agreed to be bound by that provision: s 50.

2 Ibid s 55. The provisions which apply to Christ Church, Oxford, are ss 42, 43 (see note 6 infra); s 52 (interpretation); s 54 (repeals and transitional provisions): s 55 proviso (a). In the event of an additional canon being appointed under s 42, certain other provisions of the Measure will apply in relation to that canon: ss 42 (4), 55 proviso (b).

3 Ibid s 55. Thus 'cathedral church' means any cathedral church in England existing on 31st July 1963 except Christ Church, Oxford: s 52 (1). For the meaning of 'England', see the Interpretation Measure 1925, s 2, and PARA 345 ante.

4 See PARA 610 ante, 612 et seq post.

5 See PARA 626 et seq post.

6 See the Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 39 (capitular revenues of Birmingham Cathedral); s 40 (provisions as to Newcastle Cathedral Endowment Fund); s 41 (provisions as to the canonry annexed to the archdeaconry of Norfolk); s 42 (provision for the appointment of an additional canon at Christ Church, Oxford); s 43 (Bishop of Oxford's power to appoint non-residentiary canons); s 44 (provisions as to Southwark Cathedral); s 54 (4) (saving the Bishop of Manchester's power to assign additional duties to a canon of Manchester Cathedral).

610-625 Constitution of Cathedrals

The Cathedrals Measure 1999, which requires all cathedrals to change to a single pattern of governance, repeals the Cathedrals Measure 1963 ss 6-38, 45-51 and the Cathedrals Measure 1976 ss 1-6: 1999 Measure s 39(2), Sch 3. The repeals do not apply in relation to a cathedral existing on 30 June 1999 until the relevant date: see PARA 610A.1. The provisions of the Measure, other than s 12 (see PARA 610A.8) do not apply to any charity, or to the property of any charity, except to the extent to which the Charity Commissioners for England and Wales so determine: s 34.

(ii) Cathedral Schemes

A. THE MAKING OF CATHEDRAL SCHEMES

612. The Cathedrals Commission.

For the purpose of securing the revision of the constitutions and statutes of cathedral churches¹, the Standing Committee of the Church Assembly² was required to appoint a commission to be known as the Cathedrals Commission³. The functions which the commission was required to exercise were to prepare forthwith a scheme for each of the cathedrals concerned⁴, bringing its constitution and statutes into conformity with the provisions of the Cathedrals Measure 1963⁵; to prepare, upon application, a scheme for including in the constitution and statutes any of the optional provisions specified by that Measure⁶; and such other functions as the Measure conferred on the commission⁷. The commission's functions were to cease on 31st July 1966⁸, but in the event of a subsequent application on behalf of any cathedral for a scheme revising its constitution and statutes, the Standing Committee of the Church Assembly or General Synod⁹ was empowered to authorise the appointment of a special commission, charged with the preparation of a scheme in accordance with the Measure and with the exercise of other functions conferred on it by the Measure¹⁰.

1 For the meaning of 'cathedral church', see PARA 611 note 3 ante.

2 As from 4th November 1970 the reference to the Church Assembly is to be construed as a reference to the General Synod of the Church of England: see PARA 385 ante.

3 Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 1 (1). The commission was in effect the successor to the Cathedral Commissioners established under the Cathedrals Measures 1931, who between 1935 and 1942 submitted schemes (confirmed in due course by Order in Council) in respect of all the cathedrals except Christ Church, Oxford. The task assigned to the new commission by the Cathedrals Measure 1963 was thus one of further revision of constitutions and statutes; but it could take the form either of providing new constitutions and statutes or of amending those already existing: s 5 (2).

4 See PARA 611 ante.

5 Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 1 (1) (a). Inclusion in the constitution and statutes of certain specified provisions was made obligatory: see PARA 616 et seq post.

6 Ibid s 1 (1) (b). As to these optional provisions, see PARA 622 et seq post.

7 Ibid s 1 (1) (c).

8 Ie on the expiration of the period of three years from the passing of the Measure: ibid s 1 (2). This provision does not, however, affect the functions of the commission in relation to pending schemes and applications: s 1 (2).

9 See note 2 supra. As to the Standing Committee of the General Synod, see PARA 392 ante.

10 Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 1 (3). The Cathedrals Commission or a special commission must in due course report to the Standing Committee as to the completion of its functions or, where agreement cannot be reached or it does not desire to proceed, apply for discharge: s 1 (4), (5). In the Measure (apart from s 1) 'the commission' includes the Cathedrals Commission and a special commission: ss 1 (6), 52 (1). Thus the expenses of a special commission may be paid, in whole or part, by the Church Commissioners at their discretion: s 36.

UPDATE610-625 Constitution of Cathedrals

The Cathedrals Measure 1999, which requires all cathedrals to change to a single pattern of governance, repeals the Cathedrals Measure 1963 ss 6-38, 45-51 and the Cathedrals Measure 1976 ss 1-6: 1999 Measure s 39(2), Sch 3. The repeals do not apply in relation to a cathedral existing on 30 June 1999 until the relevant date: see PARA 610A.1. The provisions of the Measure, other than s 12 (see PARA 610A.8) do not apply to any charity, or to the property of any charity, except to the extent to which the Charity Commissioners for England and Wales so determine: s 34.

612 The Cathedrals Commission

TEXT AND NOTE 3--The Cathedrals Commission is replaced by the Cathedrals Statutes Commission: Cathedrals Measure 1976 s 1(1). 1931 Measure repealed: Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1992 Sch 4 Pt I.

TEXT AND NOTES 4-10--Replaced. The commission's function is to prepare, where an application in that behalf is made to it by the consenting body of any cathedral church, a scheme for revising the cathedral's constitution and statutes: Cathedrals Measure 1976 s 1(2). The Church Commissioners may at their discretion defray out of their general fund all or part of the commission's expenses: s 6.

613. Consenting bodies.

Before preparing a draft scheme the Cathedrals Commission¹ had to consult with the consenting body of the cathedral church². For this purpose the consenting body will normally be, in the case of a dean and chapter cathedral, its administrative chapter, or, if it has no administrative chapter, its general chapter; and, in the case of a parish church cathedral, its cathedral council³. Any application for the inclusion in the constitution and statutes of any of the specified optional provisions⁴ had to be made in pursuance of a resolution of the consenting body⁵. So far as practicable the consenting body had to give notice of the proposals contained in the draft scheme to every person connected with the cathedral who appeared to be affected by it, with an intimation that any representations made within two months after he received the notice would be considered by the commission⁶.

1 For the meaning of 'Cathedrals Commission', see PARA 612 note 10 ante.

2 Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 2 (1).

3 Ibid s 2 (4). A scheme under the Measure might, however, provide that a body other than one here specified is to be the consenting body (s. 2 (4) proviso), but such an alternative consenting body could presumably operate only in the case of a second or subsequent scheme under the Measure in relation to the cathedral concerned (see s 5 (3), and PARA 615 post). In the absence of an administrative chapter, general chapter or cathedral council constituted by virtue of a scheme under the Measure (see PARAS 618, 619 post), it seems that recourse must be had to the corresponding bodies which were constituted under the repealed provisions of the Cathedrals Measure 1931. As to transitional provisions, see the Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 54 (2), and PARA 611 note 1 ante.

The Cathedrals Commission¹ must submit any draft scheme prepared by it to the bishop², the Church Commissioners and, so far as is practicable, any other person to whom the commission considers it should be submitted in order to ensure that all persons affected are informed of the proposals³. A copy of all representations duly made must be sent to all persons to whom the draft scheme has been so submitted or to whom notice of the proposals was previously given⁴, and such persons are allowed one month within which to make representations with respect to them to the commission⁵. After considering any representations duly made and making any such amendments as it may think expedient, the commission must submit the draft scheme to the bishop and the consenting body for their consents⁶, upon obtaining which the commission must lay the draft scheme before the General Synod⁷, and, unless before the end of the same session the synod passes a resolution to the contrary, the commission must seal the scheme⁸.

1 For the meaning of 'Cathedrals Commission', see PARA 612 note 10 ante.

615. Approval of schemes.

After a scheme is sealed¹ the Cathedrals Commission² must submit it for the approval of the Queen in Council³. A person who has made representations to the commission⁴ may appeal against the scheme or any part of it to the Queen in Council⁵, who may order that the appeal be heard by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council⁶. Upon receipt of the Judicial Committee's report, the Queen in Council may allow the appeal, in which case, without prejudice to the preparation of a new scheme, no further proceedings may be taken in relation to the scheme⁷, or may dismiss it⁸, or may refer the scheme back to the commission for further consideration⁹. On a reference back the commission may, after introducing (with the consent of the bishop and the consenting body) such amendments as it considers expedient, reseal the scheme, and the foregoing provisions relating to schemes sealed by the commission thereupon become applicable to the amended scheme¹⁰; or the commission may withdraw the scheme¹¹.

A scheme prepared under the foregoing provisions must be laid before each House of Parliament¹² as if it were a draft statutory instrument under an Act¹³, and, if no resolution is passed that the scheme should not be made, the Queen may confirm it by Order in Council¹⁴.

In the years following the passing of the Cathedrals Measure 1963 schemes relating to all cathedrals in England were confirmed by Orders in Council¹⁵.

Any scheme prepared and confirmed under the foregoing provisions may be varied or revoked by a subsequent scheme prepared and confirmed in like manner¹⁶.

1 As to the sealing of schemes, see PARA 614 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'Cathedrals Commission', see PARA 612 note 10 ante.

3 Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 3 (7). The commission must notify the consenting body (see PARA 613 ante), the bishop as defined in PARA 614 note 2 ante (unless the see is vacant (s. 3 (7) proviso)), the Church Commissioners and any person who has made representations to the commission (see PARA 614 ante) that the scheme has been so submitted (s. 3 (7) (a)), and must publish a notice to the same effect in the London Gazette, stating where a copy of the scheme may be obtained (s. 3 (7) (b), (12)). A scheme which affects any right of patronage or other right or interest of the Queen may not be so submitted except with her consent: s 48.

4 See PARA 614 ante.

5 Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 3 (8). The appeal must be lodged within one month from the publication of the notice in the London Gazette (see note 3 supra) or within any extended period granted by the Privy Council (s. 3 (8) proviso). The costs and expenses of the appellant may be paid, in part or whole, by the Church Commissioners out of their general fund at their discretion: s 37. As to this fund, see PARA 376 ante.

The stage at which this should be done is (1) where no representations have been made, on the publication of the notice under s 3 (7) (b) (see note 3 supra) (s. 3 (10) (a)); (2) where an appeal is not brought within the period specified in s 3 (8) by any person who has made representations, on the expiration of that period (s. 3 (10) (b)); or (3) where such an appeal is dismissed, on the dismissal of the appeal (s. 3 (10) (c)).

13 If the procedure followed is that under the Statutory Instruments Act 1946, ss 6, 7 (see STATUTES vol 44(1) (Reissue) PARA 1517); Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 3 (10).

14 Ibid s 3 (11). Notice of every scheme so confirmed must be published in the London Gazette, stating where a copy of the scheme may be obtained: s 3 (11), (12). The Order in Council confirming a scheme may vary or revoke any Order in Council made under any Act or Measure insofar as it affects the organisation, property or revenues of a cathedral church (s. 5 (4)), although any payments required to be made by the Church Commissioners may not be so varied without their consent (s. 5 (4) proviso).

15 See Orders in Council dated 10th March 1966 (Canterbury (amending a scheme confirmed by Order in Council dated 9th February 1942 under the Cathedrals Measure 1931 (repealed)), Durham), 22nd June 1966 (Peterborough), 28th July 1966 (Norwich, Worcester), 22nd November 1966 (Portsmouth), 21st December 1966 (Hereford, Newcastle, Wakefield), 10th February 1967 (Southwell, Truro), 24th May 1967 (Bradford, Bury St Edmunds, Leicester, Lichfield), 28th July 1967 (Birmingham, Blackburn, Bristol, Chester, Derby, Exeter, Wells, Winchester), 20th December 1967 (Rochester, Sheffield), 28th December 1967 (Coventry), 14th February 1968 (Carlisle, Guildford, Lincoln), 8th May 1968 (Gloucester), 7th June 1968 (Manchester, St Albans, York), 1st July 1968 (St Paul's), 12th July 1968 (Chelmsford, Ripon, Southwark), and 26th July 1968 (Chichester, Ely, Liverpool, Salisbury).

The following are parish church cathedrals: Birmingham, Blackburn, Bradford, Bury St Edmunds, Chelmsford, Coventry, Derby, Leicester, Newcastle, Portsmouth, Sheffield, Southwark, Southwell and Wakefield. The rest are dean and chapter cathedrals.

The repeals do not apply in relation to a cathedral existing on 30 June 1999 until the relevant date: see PARA 610A.1. The provisions of the Measure, other than s 12 (see PARA 610A.8) do not apply to any charity, or to the property of any charity, except to the extent to which the Charity Commissioners for England and Wales so determine: s 34.

615 Approval of schemes

TEXT AND NOTES 1-4--Replaced. As soon as possible after a scheme is made (see PARA 614) the Cathedral Statutes Commission (see PARA 612) must submit it for the approval of the Queen in Council: Cathedrals Measure 1976 s 3(1). The commission must notify the consenting body, the bishop (unless the see is vacant), the Church Commissioners and any other person who has made representations to the commission that the scheme has been so submitted and that there is, on obtaining the leave of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, a right of appeal to the Queen in Council, specifying a date determined by the commission, being a date not less than 28 days after the service of the notice, on or before which an application for leave must be made: s 3(1); Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1992 s 9(2)(a). When submitting a scheme for confirmation by the Queen in Council the commission must inform the Clerk of the Privy Council of the date to be specified in notices relating to the scheme: 1976 Measure s 3(1); 1992 Measure s 9(2)(a). A scheme which affects any right of patronage or other right or interest of the Queen may not be so submitted except with her consent: Cathedrals Measure 1963 s 48.

A person who has made representations to the commission (see PARA 614) may appeal against the scheme or any part of it to the Queen in Council: 1976 Measure s 3(2). An appeal may only be made with leave of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council: s 3(2); 1992 Measure s 9(2)(b). The costs and expenses of the appellant may be paid, in whole or in part, by the Church Commissioners out of their general fund (see PARA 376) at their discretion: 1963 Measure s 37. As to the commission's expenses, see PARA 612. If leave to appeal is granted and a petition of appeal is lodged in time, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council must hear the appeal and make a report on it: 1976 Measure s 3(4); 1992 Measure s 9(2)(d). On receipt of the report the Queen in Council may (1) allow the appeal, in which case, without prejudice to the preparation of a new scheme, the scheme is to be of no effect; (2) dismiss the appeal and confirm the scheme; or (3) return the scheme to the commission for reconsideration: s 3(4). In the latter event the commission may either withdraw the scheme or amend it with the agreement of the bishop and the consenting body and sign the scheme, whereupon the foregoing provisions relating to schemes signed by the commission become applicable to the amended scheme: 1976 Measure s 3(5).

If (a) no application for leave to appeal is made on or before a specified date (ie the date specified in the notices under s 3(1)); or (b) the Judicial Committee refuses to grant leave; or (c) an appellant, having been granted leave to appeal, fails to lodge his petition of appeal within three months from the date leave was granted or such extended period as the Registrar of the Privy Council may allow, the Queen may confirm the scheme by Order in Council: s 3(3); 1992 Measure s 9(2)(c). Any Order in Council confirming a scheme may revoke any Order in Council confirming a scheme under the 1963 Measure s 3, or the 1976 Measure s 5(3), and may vary or revoke any Order in Council made under any Act or Measure in so far as it affects the organisation, property or revenues of a cathedral church, although any payments required to be made by the Church Commissioners may not be so varied without their consent: s 5(4). These Orders in Council are not statutory instruments: s 4(3).

The commission must send a copy of every Order in Council to the diocesan registrar for filing in the diocesan registry: s 4(2); 1992 Measure s 9(3). Except in so far as a scheme or any provision in it is expressed to come into operation on a specified date, event or contingency it comes into operation on the date on which the Order in Council is made: 1976 Measure s 5(1); 1992 Measure s 9(4).

616. Revision of constitutions and statutes.

The expressed purpose of the foregoing provisions concerning the making of schemes is to secure the revision of the constitutions and statutes of cathedral churches¹. Any scheme prepared under those provisions may either provide a new constitution and new statutes or may amend those already existing². The Cathedrals Measure 1963 specified certain obligatory provisions (namely provisions which are required to be included in the constitution and statutes)³ and certain optional provisions (namely provisions which may be so included if application is made for that to be done)⁴. A scheme may contain both such provisions as are necessary to bring the cathedral's constitution and statutes into conformity with the provisions of the Measure and any of the optional provisions for which application has been made⁵. A scheme may be varied or revoked by a subsequent scheme⁶.

618. Governing bodies of dean and chapter cathedrals.

The constitution and statutes of each dean and chapter cathedral¹ must provide for the continuance or establishment of a general chapter consisting of the dean and all the canons, whether residentiary or not², and for the performance of administrative functions³ in relation to the cathedral church either (1) by an administrative chapter⁴, or (2) by the general chapter with provision for delegation to an administrative committee⁵. The constitution and statutes must also provide for the appointment, if the dean and chapter think it desirable, of a committee to perform delegated functions in relation to the administration of the finances and property⁶ of the cathedral church⁷.

1 'Dean and chapter cathedral' means a cathedral church (defined in PARA 611 note 3 ante) in respect of which there is a corporate body known as the dean and chapter: Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 52 (1); see also PARA 638 et seq post.

619. Governing bodies of parish church cathedrals.

The constitution and statutes of each parish church cathedral¹ must provide for the continuance of a cathedral chapter of which the provost, the canons of the cathedral church and the archdeacons of the diocese must be members, and of which the bishop may be a member for such purposes as may be specified in the constitution and statutes².

The constitution and statutes must provide for the performance of administrative functions³ in relation to the cathedral church by a cathedral council⁴, by an administrative chapter⁵ or by the cathedral chapter which must delegate such of its functions as it determines to an administrative committee⁶.

1 'Parish church cathedral' means any cathedral church (as defined in PARA 611 note 3 ante) other than a dean and chapter cathedral: Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 52 (1); cf. para 618 note 1 ante.

2 Ibid s 8 (a). As to provosts, see PARA 640 et seq post; as to canons, see PARA 643 et seq post; as to archdeacons, see PARA 496 et seq ante; and for the meaning of 'bishop', see PARA 614 note 2 ante.

3 For the meaning of 'functions', see PARA 617 note 3 ante. The body performing administrative functions is called the 'administrative body': ibid s 52 (1). The constitution and statutes may authorise the administrative body to appoint a committee to exercise delegated functions: see PARAS 622, 623 post.

4 Ibid s 8 (b) (i). A cathedral council must consist of the provost (who acts as chairman), the residentiary canons, and other persons specified in the constitution and statutes, being nonresidentiary canons, archdeacons or other persons holding office in connection with the cathedral, representatives of the parochial church council (see PARA 568 et seq ante) or the parochial church meeting (see PARA 563 et seq ante) of the parish in which the cathedral is situated, persons resident in the diocese or persons whose names are on the church electoral roll (see PARA 591 et seq ante) of a parish in the diocese: s 8 (b) (i). The constitution and statutes may provide that any functions of the cathedral council relating to the duties of the provost and canons and to the ordering of services are to be exercised by such members of the council as are clerks in holy orders: s 11 (2) (m).

5 Ibid s 8 (b) (ii). An administrative chapter must consist of the provost (who acts as chairman), the residentiary canons and such non-residentiary canons or archdeacons as may be specified in the constitution and statutes: s 8 (b) (ii). Provision must be made for the appointment of lay persons as additional members for the purpose of considering any question relating to the cathedral's finances and property (s. 8 (c) (i)), or for the appointment of a committee, consisting of members of the administrative chapter and specified lay persons, to perform delegated functions relating to the cathedral's finances and property (s. 8 (c) (ii)). For the meaning of 'property', see PARA 618 note 6 ante.

6 Ibid s 8 (b) (iii). The composition of the administrative committee to which functions of the cathedral chapter are delegated is to be the same as that prescribed (see note 5 supra) for the administrative chapter: s 8 (b) (iii). 620. Canons engaged exclusively upon cathedral duties.

The constitution and statutes of each cathedral church¹ must provide that the holders of two residentiary canonries² shall be engaged exclusively on cathedral duties³. 'Cathedral duties' means⁴ duties in connection with the cathedral church or pastoral duties in the diocese which should, in the opinion of the administrative body⁵ of the cathedral, be discharged from the cathedral as the mother church of the diocese, but excluding, subject to certain exceptions⁶, duties performed by any person as a suffragan bishop⁷, as an assistant bishop⁸, as an archdeacon⁹, as a director or officer of a diocesan board of education¹⁰ or as an officer of a diocesan board of finance¹¹ or diocesan parsonages board¹², or as the holder of any office to which he was appointed by a person or body other than the administrative body of the cathedral and for which a salary or stipend is normally paid¹³. The foregoing provisions are not to be regarded as limiting the number of residentiary canons engaged exclusively on cathedral duties¹⁴.

Any question which arises whether a person is engaged exclusively on cathedral duties or as to the amount of time spent on other duties, must be determined by the Church Commissioners, after consultation with the visitor (unless the see is vacant¹⁵) and the administrative body, and any person who is dissatisfied with the commissioners' decision, may appeal to the archbishop whose decision is final¹⁶.

1 For the meaning of 'cathedral church', see PARA 611 note 3 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'residentiary canon', see PARA 618 note 2 ante.

3 Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 9 (1). A provision may, however, be included whereby, during an initial period to be determined by the bishop after consultation with the administrative body of the cathedral, only one residentiary canon need be engaged exclusively on cathedral duties: s 9 (1) proviso. For the meaning of 'bishop', see PARA 614 note 2 ante.

4 The definition here set out is applied by the Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 52 (1).

5 For the meaning of 'administrative body', see PARA 618 note 3 ante, 619 note 3 ante.

6 Thus the administrative body, the visitor and the Church Commissioners acting jointly may direct that a residentiary canon be treated for this purpose as engaged exclusively on cathedral duties notwithstanding that he is also an assistant bishop or the holder of one of the offices specified in the text to note 13 infra (Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 9 (2) proviso (i)); and the archbishop of the province and the Church Commissioners may jointly in special circumstances direct that a residentiary canon who is normally engaged exclusively on cathedral duties is, for a specified period, to be treated as so engaged for this purpose notwithstanding that he is performing other duties (s. 9 (2) proviso (ii)).

622. Optional provisions.

In addition to the matters for which provisions must be made by the constitution and statutes of each cathedral church¹ the Cathedrals Measure 1963 specifies other matters in respect of which provision may be so made. In general, the constitution and statutes may make provision for the good government of the cathedral². In particular, they may (1) constitute any body or create any office for the purpose of the performance of functions³ in relation to the cathedral⁴, and provide for the appointment and terms of service of persons holding office in the cathedral or employed in connection with it⁵; (2) provide for the regulation and superintendence of the services, fabric, fittings, ornaments, furniture and monuments of the cathedral⁶; (3) provide for the administration of all property⁷ and revenues of, or held in connection with, the cathedral, including any trust fund applicable to a special purpose⁸; (4) provide for the abolition, suspension or termination of suspension of any dignity, office or body in the cathedral⁹; and (5) provide for any incidental and supplementary matters for which the Cathedrals Commission thinks it expedient to provide¹⁰.

The Measure specified a number of other matters for which provision may be made in the constitution and statutes¹¹. These include the appointment by the administrative body¹², from among its own members, of a committee to exercise delegated functions¹³; various matters relating to canons and their tenure of office¹⁴; the establishment of a college of lay canons with specified functions¹⁵; the payment of pensions to retired laymen who were employed in connection with the cathedral, and to their widows and dependants¹⁶; matters relating to the constitution of a cathedral or part of it as a parish church¹⁷; conferment by the bishop¹⁸ of the designation of dean emeritus, provost emeritus or prebendary emeritus upon any person who retires immediately after holding the appropriate office¹⁹; and the assignment of part of the capitular revenues or property of the cathedral for the promotion of the study of theology or any other branch of sacred learning, sacred music or ecclesiastical art²⁰.

TEXT AND NOTE 6--The Care of Cathedrals Measure 1990 makes further provision for the care and conservation of cathedrals, and in specified cases in connection with fabric and property the Chapel will require approval under this Measure before it can implement or consent to the implementation of any proposal: s 2 (amended by the Care of Cathedrals (Amendment) Measure 2005 s 1). Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/3. CATHEDRALS/(1) CONSTITUTION OF CATHEDRALS/(ii) Cathedral Schemes/B. THE CONTENT OF CATHEDRAL SCHEMES/623. Parishes of parish church cathedrals.

623. Parishes of parish church cathedrals.

The constitution and statutes of a parish church cathedral¹ may provide for the transfer to the administrative body² of the cathedral of all functions³ previously exercisable, in relation to the parish of that cathedral, by the parochial church council⁴. In that case the constitution and statutes must also provide that at least one-third of the lay persons appointed to the council, chapter or committee which is responsible for the performance of those functions⁵ shall be elected at the annual parochial church meeting⁶.

Upon such transfer of functions, the Church Representation Rules have effect, subject to certain modifications, in relation to the parish concerned⁷. The Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956 has effect likewise, with certain modifications⁸. As a further consequence of this transfer of functions property held by the parochial church council, or by the diocesan authority⁹ on its behalf¹⁰, becomes (subject to certain conditions and exceptions) vested in the capitular body¹¹ of the cathedral¹².

Where provision is made for such a transfer of functions the constitution and statutes may confer on the administrative body of the cathedral power to appoint a parochial committee to which that body may delegate such of the transferred functions as it thinks fit¹³.

1 For the meaning of 'parish church cathedral', see PARA 619 note 1 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'administrative body', see PARA 619 note 3 ante.

3 For the meaning of 'functions', see PARA 617 note 3 ante.

4 Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 12 (1). For the purposes of s 12 the functions of a parochial church council include any powers to act in the administration of a charity established for ecclesiastical purposes: s 12 (7). As to parochial church councils, see PARA 568 et seq ante.

5 See PARA 619 ante.

6 See the Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 12 (2). Thus, where the functions are transferred to a cathedral council at least one-third of the lay members of the council are to be elected at the annual parochial church meeting (as to which see PARA 563 et seq ante: s 12 (2) (a)); where the functions are transferred to an administrative chapter at least one-third of either the lay persons appointed as additional members of that chapter for the purpose of considering cathedral finances and property or the lay members of the committee appointed under s 8 (c) (ii) are to be so elected (s. 12 (2) (b)); and where the functions are to be transferred to the cathedral chapter at least one-third of the lay persons appointed as additional members of the administrative committee for the purpose of considering cathedral finances and property or the lay members of the committee appointed under s 8 (d) (ii) are to be so elected (s. 12 (2) (c)). As to these bodies, see PARA 619 ante.

7 Ibid s 12 (3). The rules cited in s 12 (3) are the Rules for the Representation of the Laity, which have been superseded by the Church Representation Rules contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3 (see PARA 389 ante), and the Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 12 (3), must be construed as referring to the compounding provisions of those rules. With the substitution of appropriate new references, the principal modifications appear to be as follows: (1) for any reference to the parochial church council there must be substituted a reference to the administrative body (Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 12 (3) (a)); (2) the Church Representation Rules, rr 8 (3), (5) (submission of accounts to annual meeting; appointment of auditors), 12 (membership of council), 13 (referring to App. II), 14 (terms of office), 16 (parishes with several churches), 18 (2) (extraordinary meetings) and App. II (officers and meetings) (see PARA 564 et seq ante) do not apply (Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 12 (3) (b)); (3) for the purposes of the Church Representation Rules, r 18 (1), the written representation calling for a special church meeting must be by not less than one-half of the lay members of the administrative body (Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 12 (3) (d)). The application of the Church

Representation Rules is subject, moreover, to certain restrictions on the right of the annual parochial church meeting to receive information and accounts under r 8 (1): Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 12 (3) proviso.

8 Ibid s 12 (4). The modifications are (1) that for any reference to the parochial church council there must be substituted a reference to the administrative body (s. 12 (4) (a)), and (2) that the Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956, ss 3 (council as corporate body), 5 (1) (power to hold property), 6 (other provisions as to property), 7 (iii), (iv) (parish clerk and sexton; disposal of alms), 8 (accounts), and 9 (bishop's powers) (see PARA 574 et seq ante) shall not apply (Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 12 (4) (b)).

9 'Diocesan authority' means the diocesan board of finance (as to which see PARAS 517, 518 ante) or any existing or future body appointed by the diocesan synod to act as trustees of diocesan trust property: ibid s 52 (1).

10 Ie vested in the diocesan authority under the Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956, s 6 (2), or vested in it as a custodian trustee on behalf of the council.

11 For the meaning of 'capitular body', see PARA 610 note 6 ante.

12 Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 12 (5). However, any stock which is only transferable in books kept by a company does not so vest, but any person in whom the stock is vested must at the request of the capitular body, forthwith apply to the company to transfer the stock into that body's name: s 12 (5) proviso (a). 'Stock' includes any share, annuity or other security, and 'company' includes the Bank of England and any company or person keeping books in which any stock is registered or inscribed: s 52 (1). The vesting or transfer or property by virtue of s 12 (5) does not affect any previously existing trust or contract of any mortgage or other charge affecting the property: s 12 (5) proviso (b). For provisions as to the holding of property by or on behalf of a parochial church council, see PARA 583 ante, 1067 post.

625. Conversion of parish church cathedral into dean and chapter cathedral.

A scheme prepared by the Cathedrals Commission¹ may provide that a parish church cathedral² shall become a dean and chapter cathedral³. However, no draft scheme for this purpose may be submitted⁴ without the Queen's consent⁵, and where the patron of the benefice is a person other than the bishop⁶ his consent is required before any such draft scheme is laid⁷ before the General Synod⁸.

Any such scheme must provide a new constitution and statutes for the cathedral or amend the existing ones so as to secure that they comply with the requirements applicable to dean and chapter cathedrals⁹, and must provide for any consequential transfer of functions and property¹⁰. The scheme cannot come into effect until the office of provost is vacant¹¹, provision has been made for the pastoral care of such part of the parish as is not to be attached to the cathedral¹², and the bishop has certified that these conditions have been complied with¹³.

For this purpose a pastoral scheme must be made under the Pastoral Measure 1968 (see PARA 856 et seq post) specifying the area of the cathedral and its precincts which will cease to be part of the parish, and this scheme must come into effect either before or at the same time as the cathedral scheme: Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 14 (3) (b), (4).

13 Ibid s 14 (3). A plan of the area referred to in note 12 supra, must be attached to the certificate (s. 14 (4)), and the certificate must be deposited in the diocesan registry and must remain there unless and until the bishop, with the administrative body's consent, makes other provision for its safe custody (s. 14 (5)).

(2) PROPERTY AND FINANCE

626. Property transferred by operation of law.

At the passing of the Cathedrals Measure 1963 certain property was, by virtue of its provisions, transferred to the capitular bodies¹ of cathedrals². The provisions in question had effect in relation to any land³ which was vested for an estate in fee simple in a dean or canon as a corporation sole (being a dean or canon of a dean and chapter cathedral)⁴; and in relation to a church, churchyard⁵, house of residence⁶ or any glebe land which was vested for an estate in fee simple in the provost of a parish church cathedral⁷ as the incumbent of a benefice, together with any easements, rights or privileges annexed to it⁸. All such property vested in the capitular body of the cathedral concerned without any conveyance, assignment, transfer or other assurance⁹.

In the case of a benefice the parish church of which was a parish church cathedral, the income which at the passing of the Measure was the endowment income¹⁰ of that benefice was declared to form part of the capitular revenues of that cathedral¹¹, and it was provided that any capital money held by the Church Commissioners to the account of such a benefice should be held by them to the account of the cathedral chapter¹².

1 For the meaning of 'capitular body', see PARA 610 note 6 ante.

2 Cathedrals Measure 1963, ss 15, 16. The date of the passing of the Measure was 31st July 1963.

3 'Land' includes any corporeal or incorporeal hereditaments of any tenure: ibid s 52 (1).

4 Ibid s 15 (1). For the meaning of 'dean and chapter cathedral', see PARA 618 note 1 ante. Where at the passing of the Measure the Church Commissioners held any moneys which were the proceeds of the sale of any land previously so vested, they were required to hold those moneys on behalf of the dean and chapter: s 15 (2). 'Moneys' includes any stock, share or other security: s 52 (1).

5 'Churchyard' includes a closed churchyard: ibid s 52 (1).

6 'House of residence' includes all buildings, gardens and other land held with it: ibid s 52 (1).

7 For the meaning of 'parish church cathedral', see PARA 619 note 1 ante.

8 Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 16 (1). As to the application of this provision to property vested in the Dean of Truro, see s 16 (2).

9 Ibid ss 15 (1), 16 (1). However, this vesting of property by virtue of these sections did not affect any previously existing trust or contract or any mortgage or other charge affecting the property: ss 15 (1) proviso, 16 (1) proviso.

10 Any question as to the endowment income was to be determined by the Church Commissioners: ibid s 17 (5).

11 Ibid s 17 (1). However, this did not affect any charge to which that income was subject at the passing of the Measure: s 17 (1) proviso. Any sum which had been appropriated to such a benefice under the Benefices (Stabilization of Incomes) Measure 1951, s 3 (b) or s 4 (2) (b), should be treated as appropriated to the cathedral chapter: Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 17 (2). As to the application of s 17 to St Mary in Truro, see s 17 (6).

12 Ibid s 17 (3). Where at the passing of the Measure any sums of money were standing to the credit of any repair account established under the Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Measures 1923 to 1951 (largely repealed) for such a benefice, the Church Commissioners should have power to hold those sums on behalf of the cathedral chapter to be used for the repair of property vested in the chapter, or to transfer those sums to the fund established under the Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 27 (2) (b), in relation to the cathedral concerned: s 18. As to this fund, see PARA 633 note 6 post.

626 Property transferred by operation of law

NOTE 11--Section 17(2) amended: Endowments and Glebe Measure 1976 Sch 5.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/3. CATHEDRALS/(2) PROPERTY AND FINANCE/626A. Property.

626A. Property.

1. Vesting of property in cathedral and schemes for transfer of property to cathedral

Where immediately before the relevant date¹ any property² is vested in the dean and chapter of a cathedral or the cathedral chapter of a cathedral, that property, without any conveyance, assignment, transfer or other assurance, vests in the cathedral together with, in the case of land³, any easements, rights or other privileges annexed to⁴.

The Church Commissioners with the consent of the Chapter⁵ may prepare a scheme providing for the transfer of property by the commissioners to the cathedral⁶. Such a scheme may: (1) amend or repeal the provisions of any other scheme made under any Act or Measure relating to the property of the cathedral concerned, other than provisions forming part of the constitution and statutes of the cathedral⁷; and (2) contain such incidental, consequential or supplementary provisions as may be necessary or expedient for giving full effect to the scheme⁸.

1 As to the relevant date see PARA 610A.1.

2 'Property' includes a thing in action and any interest in real or personal property: Cathedrals Measure 1999 s 35(1).

3 'Land' includes any corporeal or incorporeal hereditaments of any tenure: ibid s 35(1).

4 Ibid s 13. Any such vesting of property does not affect any previously existing trust or contract or any mortgage or other charge affecting the property: s 13 proviso.

5 As to the Chapter see PARA 610A.3.

6 1999 Measure s 14(1).

7 Ibid s 14(2)(a).

8 Ibid s 14(2)(b).

2. Acquisition and disposal of land

The Chapter¹, before exercising any power to acquire or dispose of land², must obtain the consent of the Church Commissioners and also, in the case of the disposal of a house of residence³: (1) the consent of the dean or residentiary canon⁴ who normally occupies the house except during a vacancy in the office of the dean or residentiary canon, as the case may be; and (2) where the house is allocated for the use of the holder of a dignity the right of presentation to which is vested in Her Majesty, the consent of Her Majesty⁵. However, no consent is required for: (a) the grant of a lease⁶ to a clerk in Holy Orders holding office in the cathedral or to any person employed in connection with the cathedral⁷; or (b) the acquisition of land by a gift inter vivos or by will⁸; or (c) any transaction for which the sanction of an order is required under the Charities Act 1993⁹; or (d) any transaction relating to land which immediately before the relevant date¹⁰ is held by the dean and chapter of the cathedral of St Paul in London as part of the Tillingham estate¹¹.

The Church Commissioners may by order except from the above provisions transactions relating to land forming part of an estate specified in the order or transactions of a class so specified or relating to property¹² of a class so specified¹³. A statement in a document sealed by the Chapter that the consent of the Church Commissioners is not required is sufficient evidence of that fact¹⁴.

1 As to the Chapter see PARA 610A.3.

2 For the meaning of 'land' see PARA 626A.1 NOTE 3. Any reference in the Cathedrals Measure 1999 to a power to dispose of land is to be construed as comprising a power to sell, grant a lease or licence of, exchange, mortgage or charge land and to dedicate land for the purposes of a highway: s 35(3).

3 Ibid s 15(1). 'House of residence' includes all buildings, gardens and other land held therewith: s 35(1).

4 'Residentiary canon' includes a stipendiary canon: ibid s 35(1). For provisions concerning residentiary canons see PARA 610A.7; as to canons generally see PARA 643 et seq.

11 1999 Measure s 15 proviso (iv).

12 For the meaning of 'property' see PARA 626A.1 NOTE 2.

14 Ibid s 15(5).

3. Cathedral moneys

The Chapter¹ of any cathedral may exercise the following powers in respect of moneys² which form part of the endowment of the cathedral or are otherwise vested in the cathedral or which are vested in the Church Commissioners on its behalf³: (1) power to invest such moneys in the acquisition of land⁴, including participation in any collective investment scheme operated for these purposes by the Church Commissioners⁵; (2) power to invest such moneys in any investment fund or deposit fund constituted under the Church Funds Investment Measure 1958⁶; (3) the power to invest in any investments in which trustees may invest under the general power of investment in the Trustee Act 2000⁷; and (4) power to use such moneys for the improvement or development of any property⁸ vested in the cathedral⁹. Before investing any moneys in the acquisition of land, the Chapter must obtain certain consents¹⁰.

Moneys which form part of the endowment of the cathedral may not be used for the improvement or development of the cathedral or certain other buildings¹¹, and, before using them for the improvement or development of any other property, the Chapter must obtain the consent of the Church Commissioners¹². Moneys which form part of the endowment of the cathedral may not be used for the repair of any property¹³.

Where any property which forms part of the endowment of a cathedral is disposed of, the proceeds of the disposal, including any moneys received by way of loan on a mortgage or charge on land or premium on the grant of a lease¹⁴, must be treated as part of the endowment of the cathedral¹⁵.

Where the Church Commissioners hold on behalf of any cathedral any moneys which form part of the endowment of that cathedral, the Church Commissioners may, if the Chapter requests them to do so, make payments out of those moneys for the purpose of enabling the Chapter to exercise any of the powers specified in heads (1)-(4) above¹⁶.

The Chapter of the cathedral may allocate for the use of any person holding an office in connection with the cathedral any house vested in the cathedral, as a residence from which to perform the duties of that office¹⁷.

4. Inspection of cathedral property

It is the duty of the Chapter¹ of each cathedral to arrange, during the period of five years beginning with the relevant date² and during every subsequent period of five years, for an architect³ or surveyor⁴ to carry out an inspection of all property⁵ other than the cathedral and any ancillary building⁶ which the Chapter is liable to repair and maintain, and to make a report in writing to the Chapter on any works which the architect or surveyor considers will need to be carried out in relation to that property and of the urgency with which the architect or surveyor considers that they should be carried out⁷. In the case of property within the precinct⁸ of the cathedral the report must be compiled in consultation with the cathedral archaeologist, if any⁹ and the Chapter must send a copy of the report to the fabric advisory committee of the cathedral and to the Cathedrals Fabric Commission for England¹⁰.

- 8 'Precinct' means the precinct for the time being indicated on the plan required for that cathedral by the Care of Cathedrals Measure 1990 s 13(3), (4) (see PARA 633A.1 NOTE 19): 1999 Measure s 35(1).
- 9 Ie a cathedral archaeologist appointed under the Care of Cathedrals Measure 1990 s 12(2) (see PARA 633A.1).
- 10 Ibid s 20(2) (amended by the Care of Cathedrals (Amendment) Measure 2005 Sch 3 para 9). As to the Fabric Commission see PARA 633A.

5. Financial provisions

The Church Commissioners must pay out of their general fund to the dean of each cathedral and to two residentiary canons of each cathedral who are engaged exclusively on cathedral duties¹ such sums by way of stipend or other emoluments as the commissioners may determine². The Chapter³ of a cathedral may, with the consent of the Church Commissioners, pay to the dean or to any residentiary canon to whom the commissioners are required to make a payment such additional stipend or other emoluments as they may think fit⁴. Where any person is appointed dean of a cathedral or is appointed a residentiary canon whose stipend is to be paid by the commissioners, the commissioners have power to make out of their general fund to that person a grant towards removal expenses incurred by him⁵.

The commissioners have power to make out of their general fund: (1) such grants as they may determine for the payment of⁶ (a) the stipend or other emoluments of any clerk in Holy Orders holding office in the cathedral, other than a dean or residentiary canons⁷; and (b) the salary or other emoluments of any lay person employed in connection with the cathedral⁸; (2) such grants as they may think fit to any cathedral for the purpose of securing the better provision of houses for clerks in Holy Orders who hold office in the cathedral⁹; and (3) such grants as they may think fit to any cathedral for the repair of any chancel, other than the chancel of the cathedral, which that body is wholly or partly liable to repair¹⁰.

The Chapter of any cathedral has power to borrow money for any purpose connected with the cathedral¹¹. The Chapter must maintain proper records of income and expenditure, assets and liabilities, and must prepare an annual report and accounts which show a true and fair view of the transactions throughout the year and of the position at the end of the year in accordance with best professional practice and standards¹². The Commissioners have the power to specify what constitutes best professional practice and standards relating to the report and accounts, and to inquire into any departure from those practices and standards¹³. A copy of the annual report and audited accounts must be sent to the Church Commissioners and to any other person who requests it, and displayed in a prominent position in or in the vicinity of the cathedral¹⁴.

11 Ibid s 26. If the purpose for which money is to be borrowed is such that the use of moneys forming part of the endowment of the cathedral for that purpose would require the consent of the commissioners, then the consent of the commissioners must be required for the borrowing of the money under s 26: s 26 proviso.

12 Ibid s 27(1). The accounts must be audited by a person who may, under the Charities Act 1993 s 43 (see CHARITIES VOL 8 (2010) PARA 350) audit the accounts of a charity: 1999 Measure s 27(1).

The Church Commissioners, with the consent of the administrative body¹ of the cathedral concerned and also, if the scheme transfers property² vested in a dean, provost or canon, with the consent of that dean, provost or canon, may prepare and submit to the Queen in Council for confirmation a scheme providing for the transfer of property in certain cases³. Any such scheme may provide for the transfer to the commissioners of the whole or part of the property of any capitular body⁴ (other than the cathedral church and the buildings belonging to it)⁵; it may provide for the transfer of property by the commissioners to any capitular body⁶; and it may provide for the transfer to the capitular body of any property acquired after 31st July 1963 as a corporation sole by a dean or provost or canon of the cathedral concerned⁷.

The scheme may provide for the vesting without any conveyance or other assurance of the property to be transferred⁸. It may amend or repeal the provisions of any other scheme made under any Act or Measure relating to the property of the cathedral concerned, other than provisions forming part of the constitution and statutes of the cathedral⁹, and it may contain such incidental, consequential or supplementary provisions as may be necessary for giving full effect to the scheme¹⁰.

628. Acquisition and disposal of land.

Subject to what follows a capitular body¹, dean, provost or canon² has power to sell, grant a lease³ of, exchange, mortgage or charge land⁴, and to dedicate land for the purposes of a highway⁵; power to acquire land by gift inter vivos or by will⁶; and power to acquire land required for providing access to land owned by it or him or for improving the amenities of any such land⁷. Subject to what follows a capitular body also has power to acquire land for improving the amenities of the cathedral church⁸, for any ecclesiastical, educational or other charitable purpose connected with the cathedral or any parish of which the cathedral or any part of it is the parish church⁹, and for the provision of houses to be occupied by persons engaged or to be engaged in duties connected with the cathedral¹⁰. The foregoing powers may be exercised notwithstanding that the consideration for any transaction may not be the full consideration¹¹.

Before exercising any of these powers the capitular body, dean, provost or canon must, except in certain specified cases¹², obtain the consent of the Church Commissioners¹³. If the transaction concerns the disposal, leasing, mortgaging or charging of a house of residence¹⁴, it or he must obtain, in addition, the consent of the bishop¹⁵ or, during a vacancy of the see, the guardian of the spiritualities¹⁶; the consent of the dean, provost or residentiary canon¹⁷ who normally occupies the house except during a vacancy in the office concerned¹⁸; and, where the house is allocated for the use of the holder of a dignity the right of presentation to which is vested in the Queen, her consent¹⁹.

629. Investment powers of capitular bodies.

The capitular body¹ of any cathedral church² has power to invest, in specified ways and subject to specified conditions, moneys³ which form part of the endowment of the cathedral⁴. The capitular body may also from time to time pay to the Church Commissioners any moneys in its hands which are part of the cathedral's endowment, and the commissioners must hold any moneys so paid to them free from any trust subject to which the capitular body held the moneys⁵, and must pay interest thereon to the capitular body at such rate as the commissioners may from time to time determine⁶, and must appropriate to the endowment of the cathedral a sum equal to the moneys held by them under this provision⁷.

The capitular body may with the commissioners' agreement place any moneys on deposit with them; the commissioners must hold any such moneys free from any trust subject to which the capitular body held the moneys⁸, must pay interest thereon to the capitular body at such rate as they may from time to time determine⁹, and must on request repay those moneys or part thereof to the capitular body¹⁰.

4 Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 21 (1). The moneys which may be invested under this provision do not include moneys to which s 24 applies (see PARA 630 post: s 21 (1)). The powers here conferred on capitular bodies are (1) power to invest in the acquisition of land; (2) power to invest in any investment fund or deposit fund constituted under the Church Funds Investment Measure 1958 (see PARA 1249 post); and (3) the same powers of investing as a trustee has under the Trustee Investments Act 1961, s 1 (Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 21 (1) (a)-(c); these powers being exercisable in the like manner and subject to the like conditions as the powers of a trustee are exercisable under the Trustee Investments Act 1961 (see TRUSTS) (Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 21 (1)). Before investing any moneys in exercise of powers (2) and (3) or selling any investment other than land, the capitular body must obtain the advice of the Church Commissioners (either given or subsequently confirmed in writing (s. 21 (4))), and before investing any moneys in the acquisition of land, it must obtain the like consents as are required under s 20 (see PARA 628 ante) for the sale of any land by a capitular body: s 21 (3). The commissioners' advice or consent given under the foregoing provisions is deemed to be proper advice for the purposes of the Trustee Investments Act 1961, s 6 (2), (3): Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 21 (5). As to tenancies of property belonging to a capitular body, see the Leasehold Reform Act 1967, s 31, and LANDLORD AND TENANT.

TEXT AND NOTES--Where an administrative body of a cathedral applies under the Care of Cathedrals Measure 1990 for approval of works affecting the immediate setting of the cathedral or any archaeological remains within its precincts, and those works also affect clergy housing, the administrative body must give notice to the Church Commissioners, who are entitled to make representations accordingly: Care of Cathedrals Rules 1990, SI 1990/2335, r 15. As to applications for approval under the 1990 Measure generally, see PARA 633A.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/3. CATHEDRALS/(2) PROPERTY AND FINANCE/633. Inspection and repair of buildings.

633. Inspection and repair of buildings.

The Cathedrals Measure 1963 required the administrative body¹ of every cathedral church², within two years from the passing of the Measure³, to prepare and submit to the Church Commissioners for their approval a plan to provide for the periodic inspection and repair of all buildings, other than the cathedral church and buildings ancillary to it⁴ which the capitular body⁵ was liable to repair, being buildings situated in the cathedral close or allocated as residences to persons holding office in the cathedral⁶. Any such plan could be varied by a subsequent plan similarly approved⁷.

Certain moneys⁸ comprised in the endowment capital of a cathedral may sometimes be made available for the repair of the cathedral church or buildings ancillary to it. If the commissioners and the administrative body of the cathedral are satisfied that an emergency has arisen which justifies the expenditure of the money for that purpose, the commissioners may, at that body's request, consent to the expenditure or themselves make payments accordingly⁹; but any sum so expended must be replaced by that body within five years in such manner as may be agreed between it and the commissioners¹⁰.

The commissioners have power to make out of their general fund¹¹ to the capitular body of any cathedral such grants as they think fit for the repair of any chancel, other than the chancel of the cathedral church, which that body is wholly or partly liable to repair¹².

The plan was to include provision for inspection by an experienced architect (defined in PARA 621 note 13 ante) or, where appropriate, by a surveyor, and for the making of a report by him on each building, containing estimates of the cost of necessary works (s. 27 (2) (a), (3)). It was also to include arrangements for the repair and maintenance of the buildings, and provision for a fund (see PARA 626 ante) into which payments would be made from the cathedral's capitular revenues (s. 27 (2) (b)), and necessary or expedient incidental, consequential or supplementary provisions (s. 27 (2) (c)).

633A. Care and conservation of Cathedrals.

The Care of Cathedrals Measure 1990 and the Care of Cathedrals (Supplementary Provisions) Measure 1994 make further provision for the care and conservation of cathedrals.

1. Applications for approval

The Care of Cathedrals Measure 1990 establishes the general principle that all functions under the Measure are to be undertaken with due regard to the fact that a cathedral is the seat of the bishop and a centre of worship and mission¹.

The carrying out of works, including works of repair or maintenance, materially affecting the character of a cathedral, its immediate setting and any archaeological remains within its precinct without approval is prohibited², as is the addition of objects materially affecting its character³, the disposal of non-exempt objects of interest⁴ and the carrying out of any work to any such objects which would materially affect the architectural, archaeological, artistic or historic character of the object⁵. The Cathedrals Fabric Commission is established to determine applications for approval made to it, to carry out advisory and educational functions and also to promote standards of good practice⁶. Fabric advisory committees for each cathedral are also established, with power to determine applications and to advise⁷. The committees also have power to determine whether an application for approval is necessary⁸.

Approval of a proposal must be sought from the Commission where that proposal is to make permanent alterations to the fabric of the cathedral, where it involves demolition of any part of the cathedral, where it will lead to the disturbance or destruction of any archaeological remains, or where it is to dispose of or carry out any work to any object designated under the Measure as being of outstanding architectural, archaeological, artistic or historic interest⁹. The Commission may also determine a proposal if it considers that it gives rise to special architectural, archaeological, artistic or historic considerations¹⁰. Otherwise, approval must be sought from the relevant committee¹¹. If a committee considers that a proposal gives rise to special architectural, archaeological, artistic or historic considerations it may refer it to the Commission¹².

There is a right of appeal to the Commission against a decision of a committee or its failure to determine an application within three months¹³. A Commission of Review is established to hear appeals against decisions of the Commission, and a decision of the Commission of Review is final¹⁴. Any approval given to an application under the Care of Cathedrals Measure 1990 will lapse at the expiry of the period of ten years from the date on which notice of the decision is given to the Chapter¹⁵.

The Commission has additional advisory and fiscal functions, and it may acquire relevant materials and arrange conferences in performing them¹⁶. The Chapter of a cathedral is now under a duty to consult the Commission before appointing a cathedral architect or surveyor of the fabric¹⁷. The Chapter of a cathedral is also required (except where the Commission decides otherwise), after consulting the Commission to appoint a cathedral archaeologist¹⁸, and to compile an inventory of all objects of interest¹⁹. The fabric advisory committee of each cathedral must designate, after consultation with the Commission, any objects it considers to be of outstanding architectural, archaeological, artistic or historical interest²⁰. By 1 October 1992 the Chapter of a cathedral must prepare a plan showing the extent of land surrounding its cathedral, on which the Commission must indicate the precincts of the Cathedral²¹. It must also arrange for the cathedral architect or surveyor of the fabric to make five-yearly reports on necessary works and make a report in writing to the Chapter containing a summary of any works to the cathedral church²².

Where an application is made for listed building or scheduled monument consent, notice must be sent to the Commission²³. The Rule Committee has power to make rules giving effect to the Measure²⁴. Nothing in the Measure dispenses with any existing consent that needs to be obtained by a Chapter under the constitution and statutes of a cathedral²⁵.

Where the administrator of the cathedral becomes aware that an object has been discovered which appears to be an object to which the following provisions²⁶ apply, the administrator must within fourteen days notify the Commission in writing of the discovery and arrange for the object to be recorded in the inventory required to be compiled and maintained²⁷ and designated as treasure in that inventory in accordance with directions issued by the Commission²⁸. On receipt of such a notification, the secretary of the Commission must report the discovery, in writing, to the Secretary of State or to such person or body as may be designated by the Secretary of State²⁹. The Chapter of the cathedral must (1) before implementing any proposal for the sale, loan or other disposal of such an object, apply to the Commission for approval, unless the Commission's approval is required³⁰; and (2) before implementing any proposal for the sale or other disposal, other than a loan, of such an object, afford the British Museum or another registered museum nominated by the British Museum an opportunity of purchasing the object³¹.

1 Care of Cathedrals Measure 1990 s 1. The Cathedrals Fabric Commission, any fabric advisory committee and any Commission of Review must, without prejudice to the duty conferred on them by s 1, in exercising any function conferred on them by the Care of Cathedrals Measure 1990 ss 1-11, have due regard to the desirability of preserving (1) the fabric of the cathedral church and any features of architectural, artistic or historic interest which it possesses; (2) the immediate setting of the cathedral church; (3) any building within the precinct of the cathedral church of architectural, archaeological, artistic or historic interest; (4) any archaeological remains within the precinct of the cathedral church; and (5) any objects referred to in s 2(1)(b): s 11A (added by the Care of Cathedrals (Amendment) Measure 2005 s 11). 'Cathedral church' means any cathedral church in the provinces of Canterbury and York, except the cathedral Church of Christ in Oxford or any cathedral church in the diocese of Sodor and Man or in the diocese in Europe; 'building' includes any monument or other structure or erection and any part of a building as so defined and 'fabric' is to be construed accordingly; 'precinct' in relation to a cathedral church means the precinct for the time being indicated on the plan required for that cathedral church by the Care of Cathedrals Measure 1990 s 13: s 20(1) (amended by the Care of Cathedrals (Amendment) Measure 2005 Sch 3 para 4).

9 Care of Cathedrals Measure 1990 s 6(1)(a) (amended by the Care of Cathedrals (Amendment) Measure 2005 s 5(1)). If the Commission considers that a proposal falls within the Care of Cathedrals Measure 1990 s 6(1)(a), but that the proposal does not give rise to considerations of sufficient importance to require an application to be considered by it, it may make a declaration in writing to that effect and any application for approval of the proposal is to be made instead to the fabric advisory committee: s 6(2A) (s 6(2A)-(2D) added by the Care of Cathedrals (Amendment) Measure 2005 s 5(3)). The Commission has power to determine that the Care of Cathedrals Measure 1990 s 6(1)(a) is not to apply to proposals specified by the Commission (see s 6(2B)) and to make a declaration that no approval is required under the Care of Cathedrals Measure 1990 for a certain proposal (see s 6(2C), (2D)).

2. Preliminary interviews, special visitations, injunctions and restoration orders

Where it appears to the bishop of a diocese that the Chapter of the cathedral church of the diocese may have committed or be intending to commit a prohibited act¹ in relation to a cathedral, he must, as soon as practicable and before taking any further action, afford to the members of the Chapter an opportunity of being interviewed in private by him with respect to the matter in question (a preliminary interview)².

Where it appears to a bishop, after holding a preliminary interview, that the Chapter has committed or is intending to commit a prohibited act, he must within a prescribed period order a special visitation in respect of the cathedral concerned to inquire into the matter in question³. If he does so, he must send a written statement of his reasons for ordering the visitation to the Chapter⁴. It is not necessary for a bishop to order a special visitation in respect of any act if he is satisfied that the Chapter concerned intends to make an application for approval of that act, or that it has made such an application and the application has not been refused, or he considers that there are exceptional reasons for not doing so⁵. Without prejudice to any rule of law as to the effect of episcopal visitations, where a special visitation is ordered by a bishop, the Chapter has no power to act as such with regard to the matter under inquiry without the prior approval in writing of the bishop⁶. A special visitation must not be treated as an episcopal visitation for the purposes of any provision in the constitution and statutes of the cathedral concerned restricting the ordering of such visitations⁷.

Where it appears to a bishop that a Chapter may have committed or be intending to commit a prohibited act and he is satisfied, having regard to the urgency of the matter, that there is insufficient time to hold a preliminary interview, he may give interim directions to the Chapter before holding the preliminary interview⁸. Where a bishop has ordered a special visitation he may also give directions to the Chapter⁹. Directions given by a bishop must be in writing unless he is satisfied, having regard to the urgency of the matter, that there is insufficient time for them to be committed to writing¹⁰. The Chapter is under a duty to comply with any directions given to it¹¹.

Where a bishop has ordered a special visitation and he considers it necessary or expedient to take further steps in respect of any actual or intended prohibited act, he may authorise a person designated by him to institute proceedings on his behalf against the Chapter to obtain an injunction or a restoration order or both¹². Where a bishop proposes to authorise the institution of proceedings, he must inform the Church Commissioners of the course he proposes to take and the commissioners must, as soon as practicable, decide whether or not they would be prepared to pay¹³ any costs or expenses incurred in respect of the proceedings and, if so, to what extent, and notify the bishop of their decision¹⁴. The Vicar-General's court has jurisdiction to hear and determine such proceedings¹⁵. Where the Vicar-General is for any reason unable to act, or the cathedral concerned is in a diocese of which the Vicar-General is the chancellor, the court must be presided over by a chancellor appointed by the Archbishop of Canterbury or the Archbishop of York to act as deputy Vicar-General¹⁶. Any proceedings must be instituted and conducted in such manner as the Vicars-General of Canterbury and York, acting jointly, may direct¹⁷.

In any proceedings instituted against a Chapter the court may by way of special citation add as a further party any person who appears to be or to have been concerned in furthering the alleged prohibited act¹⁸. Where it appears to the court that the Chapter intends to commit or continue any prohibited act, the court may issue an injunction restraining (1) the Chapter from committing or continuing to commit the act, or (2) any other party to the proceedings from committing or continuing to commit any act in furtherance of the prohibited act¹⁹. Where it appears to the court that the Chapter has committed any prohibited act, the court may make a restoration order requiring the Chapter or any other party to the proceedings to take steps, within a specified time, to restore the position so far as possible to that which existed before the act was committed²⁰.

Failure to comply without reasonable excuse with any requirement of an injunction or restoration order is a contempt of the court²¹. In any proceedings, the court may order that the special visitation from which the proceedings ensued continues on such terms as it considers just or ceases, and may make such further order in relation to the proceedings as it considers just²².

A. IN GENERAL

636. Composition of capitular bodies.

The principal governing body of a cathedral church is called the capitular body. In respect of its membership and its relationship to the body performing administrative functions, there is a clear distinction between dean and chapter cathedrals and parish church cathedrals. In a dean and chapter cathedral¹ the capitular body² is the general chapter, which consists of the dean and all the canons³ (whether residentiary or not), and the body charged with the performance of administrative functions (called the 'administrative body'⁴) is composed exclusively of persons who are members of the capitular body⁵. In a parish church cathedral⁶ the capitular body is the cathedral chapter, which consists of the provost, the canons of the cathedral and the archdeacons of the diocese, with the possible inclusion, for specified purposes, of the bishop; and membership of the administrative body⁷ is not necessarily confined to persons who are members of the capitular body⁸.

637. Functions of capitular bodies.

The endowments and other property of a cathedral are, generally speaking, held by the capitular body or by the Church Commissioners on its behalf¹. The capitular body is empowered to enter into transactions with regard to the acquisition, disposal and use of property², to invest³ and borrow money⁴, and to exercise rights of patronage⁵. Grants and loans may be made to it by the commissioners for various purposes⁶. In the performance of many of its functions the capitular body is required to obtain the consent of the commissioners, and all its functions in relation to property must be delegated to the administrative body⁷. The capitular body has a common seal, kept in the custody of the administrative body, which is empowered to affix it to any document⁸.

B. CHAPTERS

638. Meaning of 'chapter'.

According to the traditional definition, a chapter is a congregation of canons of a cathedral or collegiate church¹, usually (but not necessarily) including a deacon, who is chief and head of the chapter². In the case of a dean and chapter cathedral this definition still holds good, subject to the provisions of the Cathedrals Measure 1963 and any other relevant enactment; but in the case of a parish church cathedral the constitution of the cathedral chapter and of its administrative body is such as to render inapplicable most of the earlier law relating to chapters³.

A dean and chapter is in general a corporation aggregate⁴; and it seems that, in the case of a parish church cathedral, the cathedral chapter has a similar legal status⁵.

1 See Co Litt 95a. The chapter in a collegiate church is more properly called college (Co Litt 95a, notes 102, 103). There are two collegiate churches in England, namely, the collegiate church of St Peter in Westminster (usually called Westminster Abbey) and St George's Chapel, Windsor. Both are royal peculiars and, as such, exempt from episcopal and archiepiscopal jurisdiction, coming under the personal jurisdiction of the Sovereign as visitor: see PARAS 355, 492 ante. As to Westminster Abbey, see further Cole v Police Constable 443A [1937] 1 KB 316, [1936] 3 All ER 107, DC. The Palace of Westminster is no longer a peculiar but is in the diocese of London: see Combe v De La Bere [1881] 22 ChD 316, CA.

2 Godolphin's Repertorium Canonicum 51. A chapter of a cathedral church formerly consisted of persons ecclesiastical, canons and prebendaries (of which the dean was chief), all subordinate to the bishop, to whom they acted as assistants in matters relating to the church, for its better ordering and disposing, and for confirmation of such leases of the temporalities and offices relating to the bishopric as the bishop from time to time might happen to make: Godolphin's Repertorium Canonicum 58. They were termed by the canonists 'capitulum', being anciently a kind of head, instituted not only to assist the bishop but also to rule and govern the diocese in the time of vacancy: Godolphin's Repertorium Canonicum 56. For the present law as to the guardianship of the spiritualities during a vacancy in a see, see PARAS 441, 489 ante.

3 See PARA 636 ante.

4 1 Bl Com (14th Edn) 469. However, the chapter cannot act without the dean, or during a vacancy in the deanery: see Eire's Case (1563) Moore KB 51; Lyn v Wyn (1665) O Bridg 122 at 148. As to corporations aggregate, see generally CORPORATIONS vol 9(2) (2006 Reissue) PARAS 1109-1110.

5 In each case the capitular body has a common seal: see PARA 621 ante.

638 Meaning of 'chapter'

TEXT--A dean not a deacon is usually (but not necessarily) included.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/3. CATHEDRALS/(3) CAPITULAR BODIES, CLERGY AND OFFICERS/(i) Capitular Bodies and their Members/B. CHAPTERS/639. Authority and functions of chapters.

639. Authority and functions of chapters.

The dean and chapter or the cathedral chapter (as the case may be) has, as capitular body¹, the general control of the cathedral in accordance with the constitution and statutes². In performing its functions it must, in respect of many matters, act through the agency of the administrative body³. It is, moreover, subject to the jurisdiction of the visitor⁴.

1 See PARA 636 ante.

2 The constitution and statutes may provide, inter alia, for the regulation and superintendence of the services, fabric, fittings, ornaments, furniture and monuments of the cathedral, and the appointment of persons employed in connection with it (see PARA 622 ante); and such functions would no doubt be assigned to the capitular body, in addition to its primary functions (see PARA 637 ante) as governing body. It has been held that, if a chapter has the power of appointment, it may remove a chorister or schoolmaster appointed by itself, subject to an appeal to the visitor: R v Dean and Chapter of Chester (1850) 15 QB 513; R v Dean and Chapter of Rochester (1851) 17 QB 1.

3 See PARAS 636, 637 ante.

4 The constitution and statutes must provide that the diocesan bishop is to be the visitor of the cathedral and must provide for the exercise of his functions as such: see PARA 617 ante. All chapters are subject to the visitation of the bishop jure ordinario (see PARA 491 ante; see also 1 BI Com (14th Edn) 479) and also of the archbishop, jure metropolitico (see PARA 431 ante), except in the case of a peculiar, which is visitable by its own peculiar Ordinary (see PARA 355 ante); but every see or cathedral as such is exempt from archidiaconal visitation (Gib Cod 171). At a visitation the bishop may order the removal of illegal ornaments erected in the cathedral by the dean and chapter, in spite of their opposition, but he cannot, at his discretion, order any alteration in the fabric of the cathedral: Phillpotts v Boyd (1875) LR PC 435.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/3. CATHEDRALS/(3) CAPITULAR BODIES, CLERGY AND OFFICERS/(i) Capitular Bodies and their Members/C. DEANS AND PROVOSTS/640. Cathedral deans and provosts.

C. DEANS AND PROVOSTS

640. Cathedral deans and provosts.

A cathedral dean (as he is sometimes called to distinguish his office from that of other kinds of dean¹) is the head of the general chapter of a dean and chapter cathedral². A cathedral provost is the head of the cathedral chapter of a parish church cathedral, being the incumbent of the benefice of which the cathedral is the parish church³. The dean or provost, as the case may be, is styled the 'Very Reverend' and is said to be next in dignity to the bishop of the diocese⁴, although this position has also been ascribed to the chancellor of the diocese⁵ and to the archdeacon⁶. The dean or provost is an ex officio member of the diocesan synod⁷.

1 These include (1) deans of peculiars (without chapters), having sometimes both jurisdiction and cure of souls (eg the Dean of Battle) and sometimes jurisdiction only (eg the Dean of Bocking and the original Dean of the Arches); (2) rural deans (see PARA 524 et seq ante); (3) honorary deans (eg the deans and sub-deans of the chapels royal (see Co Litt 95a, note 192), and provincial deans (eg the Bishop of London as dean of the province of Canterbury: see PARA 443 note 1 ante)).

2 See PARA 618 ante.

3 See PARAS 619, 621 ante.

4 The dean of a cathedral is sometimes called the archpresbyter of the diocese: Godolphin's Repertorium Canonum 56. It has been doubted whether a dean or canon has a cure of souls (see Watson, Clergyman's Law (4th Edn) 11), but it seems probable that a dean has still the cure of souls of his chapter (see 3 Co Inst 155; Godolphin's Repertorium Canonum 55; see also Ecclesiastical Comrs v Dean and Chapter of Kildare (1858) 8 I Ch R 93 at 96, CA, per Napier LC).

640-642 Deans and Provosts

As from the relevant date (see PARA 610-625), any reference in an enactment, instrument or other document to the provost of a cathedral must, unless the context otherwise requires, be construed as a reference to the dean of the cathedral: Cathedrals Measure 1999 ss 36(4), 38(2), (3).

641. Conditions and mode of appointment of deans and provosts.

No person is capable of receiving the appointment of a cathedral dean until he has been six years in priest's orders¹.

No person may hold a cathedral preferment² with a benefice³, or with two or more benefices authorised to be held in plurality by a pastoral scheme or order⁴ unless the cathedral statutes⁵ so provide or allow⁶, and no person may hold cathedral preferments in more than one cathedral⁷.

The constitution and statutes of a cathedral must provide for the appointment of a dean by the Queen⁸ or, in the case of a parish church cathedral⁹, for the appointment as provost¹⁰ of the incumbent of the benefice of which the cathedral is the parish church¹⁰.

The constitution and statutes must confer power to pay stipends or other emoluments to the dean or provost¹¹ out of the capitular revenues of the cathedral, the amounts being subject to the consent of the Church Commissioners¹². The commissioners must pay to the dean or provost such sums by way of stipend or other emoluments as they may from time to time determine, and with the commissioners' consent additional payments may be made to them by the capitular body¹³.

Deans and provosts are entitled on retirement to receive a pension at the appropriate rate in accordance with the provisions governing clergy pensions in general¹⁴.

The dean or provost of a cathedral or collegiate church must take care that the statutes and laudable customs of his church (not being contrary to the Word of God or prerogative royal), the statutes of the realm concerning ecclesiastical order, and all other constitutions set forth and confirmed by the Queen's authority, and such as are enjoined by the bishop of the diocese in his visitation¹, according to the statutes and customs of the same church, and the ecclesiastical laws of the realm, are diligently observed².

The dean or provost must be resident in his cathedral or collegiate church for the time prescribed by law and by the statutes of that church, and must there preach the Word of God and perform all the duties of his office, unless he is hindered by weighty and urgent causes³.

The dean or provost and other ministers⁴ of a cathedral or collegiate church must provide, as far as in them lies, that during the time of divine service all things be done with such reverence, care and solemnity as shall set forth the honour and glory of Almighty God⁵.

D. CANONS

643. Meaning of 'canon'.

The description 'canon' was originally confined to persons, other than the dean, who were residentiary members of the chapter of a cathedral or collegiate church, but in more recent times the term has acquired a more extended meaning, being applied also to non-residentiary canons¹. In the Cathedrals Measure 1963 the term is defined as including a non-residentiary² canon or prebendary, but not a minor canon or any person not in holy orders³. Much of the older law is applicable only to the limited class of residentiary canons⁴, and certain provisions of the Cathedrals Measure 1963 have a similarly restricted application⁵. Non-residentiary canons are commonly identified with honorary canons⁶; in strictness, however, it seems that the terms should not be regarded as interchangeable, since the law allows for the possibility of a stipendiary canon who is a person other than a residentiary canon, whereas an honorary canon has, as such, no emoluments⁷.

1 In some chapters canons were formerly known as 'prebendaries', a description which was superseded by the term 'canons' (Ecclesiastical Commissioners Act 1840, s 1 (repealed)), although in certain cathedrals the term 'prebendary' may still be used of the non-residentiary canons. A prebend was formerly described as an endowment in land, or pension in money given to a cathedral or conventual church 'in praebendam', namely for the maintenance of a secular priest or regular canon who was a prebendary, as supported by the prebend: Stephens, Laws Relating to the Clergy 409; and see Walrond v Pollard (1570) 3 Dyer 293 b. A canonry was also formerly a name of office, and a canon was the officer in the same manner as a prebendary, and a prebend was the maintenance or stipend both of the one and of the other: Gib Cod 172; Dean and Chapter of Norwich's Case (1598) 3 Co Rep 73a at 75b; Master and Fellows of Magdalen College, Cambridge, Case (1615) 11 Co Rep 66b at 74a; Bishop of Chichester v Harward and Webber (1787) 1 Term Rep 650.

2 A non-residentiary canon would usually be expected to reside in the diocese. The constitution and statutes of the cathedral may provide that he is to vacate office upon ceasing so to reside, unless requested in writing to continue in office by the bishop so, however, that one who has been appointed in connection with a specific office or function will, even though no longer residing in the diocese, continue as a canon so long as he holds that office or performs that function: Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 11 (2) (e). Provision may also be made for the appointment of non-residentiary canons who are not resident in the diocese and for the exclusion of these canons from any provision made under s 11 (2) (e): s 11 (2) (e), (f).

3 Ibid s 52 (1). As to minor canons, see PARA 647 post. The constitution and statutes of a cathedral may provide for the establishment of a college of lay canons and specify their functions: s 11 (2) (j).

4 For the meaning of 'residentiary canon', see PARA 618 note 2 ante.

5 See eg paras 620, 621, 631 ante.

6 Honorary canonries, which were intended to be conferred as a distinction upon deserving clergymen, were founded in 1840 in every cathedral in which in that year there were not already founded any non-residentiary prebends, dignities or offices (Ecclesiastical Commissioners Act 1840, s 2 (repealed)); and similar provisions for creating honorary canonries were made thereafter on the founding of new bishoprics.

7 See the definition of 'cathedral preferment' in the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 88 (7) (see PARA 641 note 2 ante), from which it appears that the office of stipendiary canon is not necessarily comprised within the description 'residentiary canon', notwithstanding the definition of 'residentiary canon' in the Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 52 (1) (see PARA 618 note 2 ante).

644. The office of canon.

A canon is, by himself, a corporation sole, at any rate in the case of a dean and chapter cathedral¹; he is also a member of the capitular body of the cathedral², which is a corporation aggregate³. He has a stall in the choir and a voice in the chapter. A canonry is the office (with the emoluments) of a canon⁴. It is doubtful whether a canon has any cure of souls⁵.

The constitution and statutes of a cathedral must specify the maximum number of residentiary and non-residentiary canons⁶, and must provide that the holders of two residentiary canonries are to be engaged exclusively on cathedral duties⁷; they may also provide for the annexation of a canonry to a specified office and for the severance of a canonry from any office to which it is annexed⁸.

A residentiary canon is subject to obligations similar to those of a dean or provost in respect of the diligent observance of the statutes and customs of the cathedral, the duties of residence and preaching, and the maintenance of proper standards in divine service⁹.

644 The office of canon

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/3. CATHEDRALS/(3) CAPITULAR BODIES, CLERGY AND OFFICERS/(i) Capitular Bodies and their Members/D. CANONS/645. Conditions and mode of appointment of canons.

645. Conditions and mode of appointment of canons.

No person is capable of receiving the appointment of canon until he has been six years in priest's orders, except in the case of a canonry annexed to any professorship, headship or other office in any university¹. No person may hold cathedral preferments in more than one cathedral²; and restrictions are imposed on the holding of a cathedral preferment with a benefice³.

The constitution and statutes of a cathedral must provide for the appointment of canons, specifying the manner of appointment⁴. Subject to such limitations as may be imposed by or under the provisions of any enactment a canonry is a freehold office⁵.

The constitution and statutes must confer power to pay stipends or other emoluments to the residentiary canons⁶, out of the capitular revenues of the cathedral, the amounts being subject to the consent of the Church Commissioners, and regard being had to any emoluments payable to any such canon in respect of any other office or appointment and the extent to which his availability for cathedral duties is thereby materially affected⁷. The Church Commissioners must pay the two residentiary canons who are engaged exclusively on cathedral duties stipends or other emoluments and with the commissioners' consent additional payments may be made to them by the capitular body⁸.

On retirement canons are entitled to receive pensions at the appropriate rates in accordance with the provisions governing clergy pensions in general⁹.

1 Ecclesiastical Commissioners Act 1840, s 27; Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C21 para 1. For examples of canonries annexed to professorships, see the Ecclesiastical Commissioners Act 1840, ss 5-7 (canonries of Christ Church, Oxford). As to the minimum age for ordination as priest, see PARA 654 post.

3 See ibid s 88 (2), and PARA 641 ante. For the meaning of 'benefice', see s 89 (1), and PARA 768 note 1 post.

4 Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 10 (1) (c). The right of appointing canons was previously vested by statute either in the Crown (see eg Ecclesiastical Commissioners Act 1840, s 24, as to three canonries of St Paul's Cathedral, London) or in the bishop of the diocese, except in the case of a canonry attached to some ecclesiastical or spiritual office. It is thought that the constitutions and statutes made by schemes under the Cathedrals Measure 1963 have in most cases maintained the existing practice, and that they have effect subject to any specific provision contained in that Measure or any other enactment still in force (eg in s 41 (Norwich), ss 42, 43 (Oxford); and in the Ecclesiastical Commissioners Act 1840, s 24 (see supra)).

When a canon is invested in his canonry he is said to be installed. If nominated by the Queen, he is appointed by royal letters patent, and is thereupon entitled to installation: if by the bishop, he is collated and thereupon in like manner he is entitled to installation.

5 The constitution and statutes of the cathedral may provide for the vacation of office by residentiary canons at a specified age, unless the bishop, after the requisite consultation, otherwise determines: Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 11 (2) (b). Provision may likewise be made for the creation of residentiary canonries the holders of which are to continue in office for a specified term of years only, either with or without eligibility for reappointment: s 11 (2) (c). The constitution and statutes may also provide that where a clerk in holy orders who is appointed to an archdeaconry or any other diocesan office becomes (whether at the time of appointment or later) a canon on the understanding that he will hold the office of canon so long as he holds that archdeaconry or other diocesan office, he shall (unless the bishop otherwise determines) vacate office as a canon on ceasing to hold the archdeaconry or other diocesan office: s 11 (2) (d). For further provisions limiting the tenure of office of a non-residentiary canon, see PARA 647 post.

6 It seems possible that in some cases a stipend may be payable to a canon who is not a residentiary canon (see PARA 643 ante); but it is not clear whether it could be paid out of the capitular revenues.

7 Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 10 (1) (d), (e): see PARA 621 ante.

The constitution and statutes of a cathedral may constitute any body or create any office for the performance of functions in relation to the cathedral, and specify the functions of that body or the person holding that office in relation to the cathedral and, where applicable, the diocese¹, and may provide for the appointment and terms of service of persons holding office in the cathedral or employed in connection with it².

The Church Commissioners may make grants to the capitular body of a cathedral for the payment of the stipend or other emoluments of any clerk in holy orders holding office in the cathedral (other than a dean, provost or residentiary canon) and for the salary or other emoluments of any lay person employed in connection with the cathedral³.

647. Assistant clergy.

The clerks in holy orders who are assistants to the members of the chapter of a cathedral or collegiate church are commonly described as minor canons or vicars choral¹. The office is very ancient, and in the past it was generally endowed². Minor canons have no cure of souls; their office is not a benefice, and since 1931 (subject to a saving in respect of interests then existing) it has no longer been capable of conferring a freehold or fixity of tenure³.

The minor canons, vicars choral and other ministers share the obligations of the dean or provost and the canons residentiary with respect to the proper conduct of divine service⁴. In the case of a parish church cathedral⁵ which has a cathedral council⁶, the constitution and statutes may provide that any functions of that council relating to the duties of the provost and canons and to the ordering of services are to be exercised by such members of the council as are clerks in holy orders, and these may include minor canons⁷.

1 See eg the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C21 para 4 (see PARA 642 ante), where reference is made to 'minor canons, vicars choral and other ministers'. Other descriptions have also been used: cf. the Ecclesiastical Commissioners Act 1840, s 93, where 'minor canon' is defined as including every vicar, vicar choral, priest vicar and senior vicar, being a member of the choir in any cathedral or collegiate church, and Canons Ecclesiastical (1603) 42 (repealed), where reference was made to the 'petty canons, vicars choral and other ministers'. They usually include the persons serving as sacrist and precentor, although (especially in cathedrals of the old foundation (as to which see PARA 610 note 7 ante)) the office of precentor is often by custom held by a canon. This is the case at Bristol, Bury St Edmunds, Chester, Chichester, Coventry, Derby, Exeter, Guildford, Hereford, Lichfield, Lincoln, Liverpool, Salisbury, Sheffield, Southwark and York.

2 If endowed, it comes within the definition of 'cathedral preferment' in the Pluralities Act 1838, s 124. The Cathedrals Measure 1931, s 13 (repealed), made provision for the compulsory transfer of all the property of minor canons.

3 Ibid ss 24, 25. Whilst these provisions have been repealed by the Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 54 (1), Sch. 2, there is no reason to suppose that the possibility of freehold or fixity of tenure in respect of these offices has been revived.

649 Retirement of church dignitaries for incapacity

TEXT--There is now an age limit of 70 for holding the offices of dean or provost of a cathedral church, other than dean of Christ Church, Oxford, and residentiary canon in a cathedral church other than a canonry annexed to a professorship in a university: Ecclesiastical Offices (Age Limit) Measure 1975 s 1, Schedule.

650. Investigation of incapacity of dignitaries.

Where he is satisfied that such action is proper the bishop¹ may require by notice in writing that a special meeting of the cathedral chapter² of his diocese be summoned to consider and report to him whether in its opinion the dignitary³ holding office within the diocese is unable through disability arising through age or infirmity, whether bodily or mental, to discharge his duties adequately and, if so, whether it is desirable that he should retire from his office and (except where the office is an honorary one) whether on retirement any pension should be granted to him in addition to any pension to which he would have been entitled if he had retired voluntarily on account of age or infirmity⁴. The bishop must at the same time send a copy of the notice to the dignitary⁵. The bishop may, if he so desires, appoint in writing a clerk in holy orders as his representative to attend the meeting of the chapter when invited by it to do so⁶.

The chapter must consider the questions put to it and must invite the dignitary and the bishop's representative (if any) to confer with it⁷. After the conference, or after there has been a reasonable opportunity for such a conference, the chapter must submit a written report to the bishop answering the questions put to it, but it must not report that it is desirable that the dignitary should retire unless at least two-thirds of the members present and voting vote in favour of such a report⁸. The chapter may at any time before making its report request the bishop or his representative (if any) to make further inquiry into any matter and to communicate the result of the inquiry to the chapter⁹. The chapter must send a copy of its report to the dignitary¹⁰.

1 'Bishop' means the archbishop or bishop of the diocese in which the office of the dignitary concerned is held: Church Dignitaries (Retirement) Measure 1949, s 18.

2 The cathedral chapter to be summoned to consider matters referred to it by the bishop is, in the case of a cathedral not being a parish church cathedral, the dean and chapter as constituted when performing functions within the jurisdiction of the greater or general chapter, and in the case of a parish church cathedral it is the cathedral chapter as constituted by a cathedral scheme: ibid s 13 (1). As to these bodies, see PARAS 618, 619 ante; and as to cathedral schemes, see PARA 612 et seq ante. Where a dignitary in respect of whom proceedings are taken is a member of the cathedral chapter, he must not sit or vote at a special meeting of the chapter summoned to consider his case: s 13 (5). As to the method of summoning the chapter, see s 13 (2), (3), and as to the procedure, see s 13 (4), (6).

3 For the meaning of 'dignitary', see PARA 649 ante.

Notices or other documents authorised or required to be sent or given by or under the Church Dignitaries (Retirement) Measure 1949 are to be deemed to have been duly sent or given if sent through the post in a pre-paid registered letter or by the recorded delivery service addressed in the case of a dignitary having an official residence to that residence and in any other case to the dignitary at his last known place of residence: s 16; Recorded Delivery Service Act 1962, ss 1 (1), 2 (1) (b).

Should the cathedral chapter report that it is desirable that the dignitary¹ should retire, the bishop has power within six months of the receipt of the report (1) if the office held by the dignitary is one the right of appointment to which is vested in Her Majesty, to petition the Queen to declare the office vacant², or (2) in any other case himself to execute an instrument in the prescribed form³ declaring the office vacant as from a date specified in the declaration not being less than three nor more than six months after the date of the declaration⁴.

The vacancy may then be filled up in the same manner as if the dignitary were dead⁵.

1 For the meaning of 'dignitary', see PARA 649 ante.

2 Church Dignitaries (Retirement) Measure 1949, s.2 (1) (a). Thereupon it is lawful for Her Majesty by Order in Council to make such a declaration: s 2 (1) (a).

3 As prescribed by rules under the Church Dignitaries (Retirement) Measure 1949: see s 18. At the date (1st May 1975) at which this volume states the law no such rules had been made.

The bishop must not exercise these powers unless he is satisfied that the provisions respecting the pensioning of the dignitary (see PARA 652 post), will be fulfilled: s 2 (1) proviso. A record of the exercise of either of these powers and a copy of the declaration must be filed in the diocesan registry: s 2 (2).

If the dignitary is a dean, provost or archdeacon, proceedings must be taken against him as a dignitary and not as an incumbent, and a declaration of vacation of his office as dean, provost or archdeacon has the effect also of vacating his incumbency whether the office is annexed to the incumbency or the incumbency to the office⁴. If the dignitary is the holder of a canonry or prebend and in consequence of proceedings taken in respect of him as an incumbent the parochial benefice held by him has been declared vacant, the bishop may in his discretion⁵ execute an instrument declaring the canonry or prebend vacant or, if the case so requires, petition the Queen to make such a declaration, and from this exercise of his powers by the bishop there is no appeal⁶. A. ORDINATION

654. Orders of the ministry.

The three orders of ordained ministers¹ in the Church of England are bishops, priests and deacons². Before executing the functions of those orders they must, unless they have already received episcopal consecration or ordination, be called, tried, examined and admitted to them according to the form and Manner of Making, Ordaining and Consecrating of Bishops, Priests and Deacons³. The minimum age for a bishop is thirty years; for a priest, unless he is over twenty-three years of age and has a faculty from the Archbishop of Canterbury, it is twenty-four years; and for a deacon, unless he has a similar faculty, it is twenty-three years of age⁴.

1 The word 'minister' has different meanings according to the context. It may apply to a bishop, priest or deacon (Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C1 (amended by Amending Canon No. 3); Read v Bishop of Lincoln (1889) 14 PD 148), or to the officiant at the service (see eg Canon B8, and PARA 970 post), or it may be given a particular meaning (see eg the Church Representation Rules, r 44, contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3, and PARA 544 note 6 ante). The word 'sacerdotium' may include the diaconate, although it more properly refers to the priesthood: Re University College, Oxford, ex parte Moorsom (1848) 2 Ph 521 at 524, per Lord Cottenham LC. The title 'Reverend' is not confined to persons in holy orders: Keet v Smith (1876) 1 PD 73, PC. See also PARA 544 note 6 ante, 689 note 2 post.

2 It appears that the order of deaconesses is not one of the holy orders, as a deaconess may accept membership of any lay assembly of the Church of England: Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon D1 para 5 (substituted by Canon promulgated 20th February 1973).

3 Act of Uniformity 1662, s 1 (repealed); Book of Common Prayer, Preface to the Form and Manner of Making, Ordaining and Consecrating of Bishops, Priests and Deacons (commonly known as the Ordinal); Articles of Religion 36; Clergy (Ordination and Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1964, s 3 (repealed). The Ordinal is not repugnant to the Word of God, and those made, ordained or consecrated bishops, priests or deacons according to it are lawfully made, ordained or consecrated: Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon A4.

The term 'holy orders' implies episcopal ordination: A-G v Glasgow College (1846) 10 Jur 676; revsd. on another point sub nom. Glasgow College v A-G (1848) 1 HL Cas 800; Bishop of St Albans v Fillingham [1906] P 163.

TEXT--There is now an age limit of 70 for holding most ecclesiastical offices: Ecclesiastical Offices (Age Limit) Measure 1975 s 1. The relevant offices are archbishop, diocesan bishop, suffragan bishop, dean or provost of a cathedral church, residentiary canon in a cathedral church, archdeacon, incumbent of a benefice, vicar in a team ministry, vicar of a guild church: Schedule. The restriction does not apply to an office in a Royal Peculiar, a residentiary canonry which is annexed to a professorship in a university or the office of dean of Christ Church Oxford: s 1(2). A person who holds one of the relevant offices is required to vacate it on reaching the age of 70 (s 1(3)) with the exception of those listed in s 1(2), and of those already in office at the date of commencement of the measure: s 1(4).

A person who is the incumbent of a benefice under a pastoral scheme or order and who attains the age of 70 before that scheme or order comes into force may nevertheless be designated as holder of one of the listed offices under that scheme or order: Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1978 s 2(1). The General Synod may make provision by Canon to enable a woman to be ordained to the office of deacon provided she satisfies the relevant requirements¹ of Canon Law². In the case of a deaconess who is licensed or holds a bishop's permission to officiate the Canon may make provision enabling the deaconess to be ordained to the office of deacon even though her knowledge of holy scripture or of the doctrine, discipline and worship of the Church of England has not been further examined, or she has not exhibited any certificate or document³. However, a woman cannot be ordained to the office of priest⁴.

1. Functions of bishops

The General Synod may make provision by canon for enabling a woman to be ordained to the office of priest if she otherwise satisfies the requirements of canon law as to the persons who may be ordained as priests¹. However, a woman may not be consecrated to the office of bishop².

A bishop of a diocese in office at the relevant date³ may declare that (1) a woman is not to be ordained within the diocese to the office of priest⁴, or (2) a woman is not to be instituted or licensed to the office of incumbent or priest-in-charge of a benefice, or of a team vicar for a benefice, within the diocese⁵, or (3) a woman is not to be given a licence or permission to officiate as a priest within the diocese⁶. A declaration must be contained in a written notice signed by the bishop⁷. A bishop who has made a declaration may withdraw it by written notice signed by him⁸. A copy of any notice must be sent to (1) Her Majesty, (2) the Duke of Cornwall, (3) the Lord Chancellor, (4) the archbishop of the province concerned, (5) the secretary of the diocesan synod of the diocese concerned, (6) the registrar of the province concerned, (7) the registrar of the diocese concerned, and (8) the designated officer⁹ of the diocese concerned¹⁰. Where a bishop of a diocese who has made a declaration and not withdrawn it ceases to hold that office, the declaration continues in force until the expiry of the period of six months beginning with the date on which another person becomes the bishop of that diocese¹¹. Where a declaration by a bishop is in force, a bishop discharging any functions of the bishop of the diocese¹² must not act in contravention of the declaration¹³.

It is an offence¹⁴ for any bishop to act in contravention of a declaration¹⁵.

15 1993 Measure s 5(a). The 1993 Measure s 2 applies in relation to a Crown benefice and to a benefice the patronage or a share of the patronage of which is vested in the Lord Chancellor as it applies in relation to any other benefice: ibid s 7(1) (prospectively amended by Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 17 para 8(3), Sch 18 Pt 4). 'Crown benefice' has the same meaning as in the Patronage (Benefices) Act 1986 (see PARA 783A.9): 1993 Measure s 7(2). The 1993 Measure extends to the whole of the provinces of Canterbury and York except the Channel Islands: ibid s 12(3). The Measure may be applied to the Channel Islands: ibid s 12(4). As to the application of the Measure to the Isle of Man, see ibid s 12(5), Sch 4. As to the application of the Measure to the Channel Islands see the Women Priests (Channel Islands) Order 1999, SI 1999/1317.

2. Functions of parishes and cathedrals

The parochial church council of a parish¹ may pass either or both of the following resolutions² (1) that it will not accept a woman as the minister who presides at or celebrates the Holy Communion or pronounces the Absolution in the parish, and (2) that the administrative body will not accept a woman as the dean of its cathedral church³. A parochial church council which has passed a resolution may by resolution rescind it, and the original resolution continues in force until rescinded⁴. A motion for a resolution under head (1) above must not be considered by a parochial church council if the incumbent or priest-in-charge of the benefice concerned, or any team vicar or assistant curate for that benefice, is a woman ordained to the office of priest⁵.

A resolution must not be passed by a parochial church council unless (a) except where notice of a vacancy has been sent to the secretary of the council⁶, the secretary of the council has given to the members of the council at least four weeks' notice of the time and place of the meeting at which the motion proposing the resolution is to be considered, and (b) the meeting is attended by at least one half of the members of the council entitled to attend⁷. A copy of any resolution passed by a parochial church council must be sent to (1) the bishop of the diocese concerned, (2) the rural dean of the deanery concerned, (3) the lay chairman of the deanery synod concerned, (4) the registrar of the diocese concerned, (5) the designated officer for the diocese concerned⁸, and (6) the registered patron⁹ of the benefice concerned¹⁰.

Where a resolution is in force a person discharging any function in relation to the parish or benefice concerned must not act in contravention of the resolution¹¹. It is an offence¹² for any bishop, priest or deacon to act in contravention of a resolution or to permit any act in contravention of a resolution to be committed in any church or any building licensed for public worship according to the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England¹³.

The administrative body of a cathedral church other than a parish church cathedral may pass either or both of the following resolutions¹⁴ (1) that the administrative body will not accept a woman as the minister who presides at or celebrates the Holy Communion or pronounces the Absolution in the cathedral church at any service other than a service held on the direction of the bishop of the diocese, and (2) that the administrative body will not accept a woman as the dean of its cathedral church¹⁵. An administrative body which has passed a resolution may by resolution rescind it, and the original resolution continues in force until rescinded¹⁶. A motion for a resolution in respect of a cathedral church must not be considered by an administrative body if the dean or any of the residentiary canons of the cathedral church is a woman ordained to the office of priest¹⁷.

A copy of any resolution must be sent to (1) Her Majesty, (2) the bishop of the diocese concerned, (3) the secretary of the diocesan synod of the diocese concerned, and (4) the registrar of the diocese concerned¹⁸. Where a resolution is in force in respect of a cathedral church, a person discharging any function in relation to the conduct of services in the cathedral church or in relation to the appointment of the dean must not act in contravention of the resolution¹⁹.

It is an offence²⁰ for any bishop, priest or deacon to act in contravention of a resolution or to permit any act in contravention of such a resolution to be committed in any cathedral church²¹.

657C. Financial provision for persons resigning from ecclesiastical service because of opposition to ordination of women as priests.

1. Entitlement to residential and financial benefit

Every clerk in holy orders¹, deaconess or licensed lay worker² who (1) was in whole-time stipendiary ecclesiastical service³ (being service which is pensionable service⁴ for the purposes of the pensions regulations) within the Provinces of Canterbury (including the Diocese in Europe) or York at the relevant date⁵ or at any time during the period of six months immediately preceding that date, (2) at the relevant date has performed a period of such ecclesiastical service of not less than five years or a succession of periods of such ecclesiastical service (whether with or without intervals) amounting in aggregate to not less than five years, (3) within the period commencing six months immediately before the relevant date and ending ten years immediately after that date has ceased to be in such ecclesiastical service consequent on his resigning therefrom, (4) within the period of ten years immediately after the relevant date has made a declaration in the prescribed form⁶ stating that he would not have resigned but for his opposition to the promulgation of the relevant canon, (5) has not attained the retiring age⁷, and (6) is not in receipt of a pension under the pensions regulations, is entitled, on application⁸, to participate in any church housing scheme⁹ and receive from the Church of England Pensions Board (the board) financial benefit consisting of a resettlement grant¹⁰ and periodical payments¹¹.

1 I.e. any bishop, priest or deacon of the Church of England: Ordination of Women (Financial Provisions) Measure 1993 s 11(1).

2 I.e. a person who has been admitted by a bishop as a lay worker of the Church of England and who has been authorised by a bishop by licence to serve as such a worker: ibid s 11(1).

3 'Stipendiary ecclesiastical service' has the same meaning as in the pensions regulations: ibid s 11(2). 'Pensions regulations' means regulations for the time being in force under the Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Measure 1972 s 6 (see PARA 738): s 11(1).

4 'Pensionable service' has the same meaning as in the pensions regulations: 1993 Measure s 11(2).

5 'Relevant date' means the date on which the relevant canon is promulgated: ibid s 11(1). 'Relevant canon' means the canon of the Church of England enabling a woman to be ordained to the office of priest: s 11(1).

6 As to the prescribed form, see ibid Schedule. A declaration must be signed and dated by the person making it in the presence of another person, who must also sign it, and a copy of it must be sent to the bishop of the diocese concerned: ibid s 7(1).

7 'Retiring age' has the same meaning as in the pensions regulations: ibid s 11(2).

8 An application must be made in such manner as the board may determine, and where a person is incapacitated from making an application himself the board may authorise some other person to make it on his behalf: ibid s 7(2).

9 'Church housing scheme' means any scheme operated for the time being by the Church of England Pensions Board under the Clergy Pensions Measure 1961 s 26 (see PARA 752) for the purpose of providing residences to retired clergy and church workers: 1993 Measure s 11(1). The 1961 Measure s 26 and any church housing scheme apply to qualifying clerks in holy orders, deaconesses or licensed lay workers as they do to retired clerks in holy orders and retired church workers: 1993 Measure s 2.

10 A resettlement grant is a single payment of an amount equal to three-tenths of the national minimum stipend for the year in which application for the grant was made or such greater amount as the board may, with the concurrence of the Church Commissioners, determine: ibid s 3(1). 'National minimum stipend', in relation to any year, means the national minimum stipend recommended for the stipends of clergymen of incumbent status for that year in the Annual Report of the commissioners as the Central Stipends Authority: ibid s 11(1). Such a grant must not be paid unless the board is satisfied that the applicant was, immediately before the material time, residing in accommodation made available to him in order to enable him to undertake the service from which he has resigned: ibid s 3(2).

11 Ibid s 1(1), (2). Periodical payments must be paid monthly to the applicant during a period expiring at the end of (a) such number of months immediately following the material time as results from adding together (i) one month for each year or part of a year during which the applicant has served in whole-time stipendiary ecclesiastical service, and (ii) one month for each year or part of a year which has passed before the material time since the applicant attained the age of forty years, or (b) 36 months immediately following the material time, whichever is the greater, provided that where an applicant has at the material time attained the age of 50 years the payments must continue, if they would otherwise cease, until he attains an age within five years of the retiring age: ibid s 4(1). 'Material time' in relation to a person who resigns from stipendiary ecclesiastical service is the time when he ceases to be in such service: ibid s 11(1). Section 4(1) may be amended by regulations: ibid s 4(4).

The payments cease to be payable when a person attains the retiring age, or if he receives a pension under the pensions regulations before attaining that age, on the date on which the pension is first paid, or if he re-enters whole-time stipendiary ecclesiastical service on the date of the re-entry: ibid s 4(2). Subject to any reduction on account of other employment (see PARA 657C.2) each monthly payment must be of an amount equal to one-twelfth of (a) in the first period of twelve months, the national minimum stipend for the year in which the payment falls to be made, (b) in the second period of twelve months, three-quarters of the national minimum stipend for the year in which the payment falls to be made, and (c) thereafter, two-thirds of the national minimum stipend for the year in which the payment falls to be made: ibid s 4(3). Where a pension is payable under the pensions regulations to a person who has received periodical payments, the Church Commissioners must augment the pension so as to ensure that it is at the same rate as it would have been had the period during which the periodical payments were made been one of pensionable service for the purposes of the regulations: ibid s 9(1). The entitlement of any person to receive a pension under the pensions regulations where he retires before attaining the retiring age is not affected: ibid s 9(2).

The system of benefits established by the above provisions and those in PARA 657B.2 is to be administered by the board and financed by the Church Commissioners out of their general fund: see ibid s 8.

2. Discretionary payments and reduction of periodical payments

The Church of England Pensions Board (the board) may, on application¹ being made to it by any person, provide such financial benefit to him by way of periodical payments, grant or loan or otherwise as it thinks fit². In the case of an applicant not entitled to benefit under the foregoing provisions³, the board must not make any payment unless it is satisfied that (1) within the period of ten years immediately after the relevant date⁴, the applicant or any person on whom the applicant is (or was immediately before that person's death) dependent (a) has ceased to hold an office or employment or to be a member of a religious community consequent on his resigning therefrom, and (b) has made a declaration in the prescribed form⁵ stating that he would not have resigned but for his opposition to the promulgation of the relevant canon⁶, and (2) in consequence the applicant has suffered or will suffer financial hardship⁷. For the purpose of determining whether any financial benefit should be provided under these provisions and, if so, the amount and form of the benefit, the board must have regard to (1) the age and other personal circumstances of the applicant, (2) any special need of the applicant in respect of housing, (3) any special need of the applicant in respect of training for suitable employment, (4) the extent to which the applicant provides or might reasonably be expected to provide financial support for any person dependent on him, and (5) all other relevant circumstances of the applicant's case⁸.

If any person who is applying for or receiving periodical payments⁹ accepts any office or employment, the board may refuse the application or may suspend or reduce the periodical payments to take account of the emoluments of or other benefits which arise from the office or employment¹⁰. The board must not exercise these powers in a manner whereby the total annual amount of the emoluments in question and the periodical payments (if any) would be less than the national minimum stipend¹¹. It is the duty of every person who applies for or receives periodical payments to disclose to the board any office or employment which has been accepted by him and the terms thereof, and if he fails to do so and it appears to the board that in consequence it has made periodical payments which otherwise it would not have made or periodical payments in excess of those it would otherwise have made, it may direct the repayment of the amount of the payments or excess or such part thereof as it thinks just, and that amount is recoverable as a debt due to the board¹².

1 An application must be made in such manner as the board may determine, and where a person is incapacitated from making an application himself the board may authorise some other person to make it on his behalf: Ordination of Women (Financial Provisions) Measure 1993 s 7(2).

2 Ibid s 5(1).

3 Ie an applicant to whom ibid s 1 (see PARA 657B.1) does not apply.

4 For the meaning of 'relevant date', see PARA 657B.1 NOTE 5.

5 As to the prescribed form, see ibid Schedule. A declaration must be signed and dated by the person making it in the presence of another person, who must also sign it, and a copy of it must be sent to the bishop of the diocese concerned: ibid s 7(1).

11 Ibid s 6(2). For the meaning of 'national minimum stipend', see PARA 657B.1, NOTE 10.

3. Appeals

An applicant for any benefit under the foregoing provisions who is aggrieved by a determination of the Church of England Pensions Board (the board) in carrying out its functions may appeal against the determination to a tribunal¹. On any appeal the tribunal may affirm the board's determination or make any other determination which could have been made by the board². If the board's determination is not affirmed it must give effect to the tribunal's determination³. In respect of any determination made by the board as to discretionary payments, the tribunal must not vary the board's determination unless it is satisfied that the board has exercised its discretion on a basis on which no reasonable determination could have been made, or has failed to take into account some material matter, or has taken into account some irrelevant matter, where in either case in acting properly the determination of the board would or might have been significantly different⁴.

Rules have been made regulating the procedure and practice in proceedings on an appeal⁵.

1 Ordination of Women (Financial Provisions) Measure 1993 s 10(1). The tribunal must consist of five persons nominated by the chairman of the House of Bishops, the chairman of the House of Clergy and the chairman of the House of Laity acting jointly from a panel of twelve members of the general Synod selected by the Appointments Committee: s 10(4); Church of England (Transfer of Functions) Order 1998, SI 1998/1715. As to the Appointments Committee see PARA 383A.

2 1993 Measure s 10(2).

4 Ibid s 10(3). Section 10(3) does not apply where the tribunal considers that, in all the circumstances of the case, not to vary the board's determination would or might result in an injustice to the applicant and would or might cause significant financial hardship: s 10(3) proviso.

5 See the Ordination of Women (Financial Provisions) (Appeals) Rules 1993, SI 1993/2847, made by the Standing Committee of the General Synod under the 1993 Measure s 10(5). Functions of the standing committee under s 10(5), (7) are transferred to the Business Committee (as to which see PARA 383B): SI 1998/1715.

4. Supplementary provisions

A motion for the final approval of a Measure which amends or repeals any provision of the Ordination of Women (Financial Provisions) Measure 1993 is not deemed to be carried unless it receives the assent of a majority in each House of the General Synod of not less than two-thirds of those present and voting¹. The 1993 Measure extends to the whole of the provinces of Canterbury and York except the Channel Islands, but may be applied to the Channel Islands².

658. Disqualifications for ordination.

No person may be admitted into holy orders who is suffering or who has suffered from any physical or mental infirmity which in the bishop's opinion will prevent him from ministering the Word and sacraments or from performing the other duties of the minister's office¹. Nor may any person be admitted into holy orders who has remarried and, the wife of that marriage being alive, has a former wife still living², or who is married to a person who has been previously married and whose former husband is still living³. Bastardy is no longer a bar to ordination⁴. It appears that the ancient view that certain physical impediments, such as blindness, were a bar to ordination has fallen into disuse⁵.

660. Declaration and oaths.

The General Synod may provide by canon with respect to the obligations of the clergy, deaconesses¹ and lay officers² of the Church of England to assent or subscribe to the doctrine of that Church and the forms of assent or subscription, which may include an explanatory preface³. Every such canon must be such as, in the synod's opinion, is neither contrary to nor indicative of any departure from the doctrine of the Church of England in any essential matter⁴.

Every person about to be ordained priest or deacon must, before ordination⁵, in the presence of the bishop by whom he is to be ordained, make and subscribe in the prescribed form a declaration of assent, affirming his loyalty to the church's inheritance of faith as his inspiration and guidance under God in bringing the grace and truth of Christ to this generation and making Christ known to those in his care; and declaring his belief in the faith which is revealed in the holy scriptures and set forth in the catholic creeds and to which the historic formularies of the Church of England (namely the Thirty-Nine Articles⁶, the Book of Common Prayer⁷ and the Ordering of Bishops, Priests and Deacons) bear witness; and he promises to use in public prayer and the administration of the sacraments only the forms of service which are authorised or allowed by canon⁸.

He must also take and subscribe the oath of allegiance⁹ and, in the presence of the bishop of the diocese by whom he is to be ordained or his commissary, take the oath of canonical obedience¹⁰.

One of the archdeacons or his deputy or such other persons as by ancient custom have the right to do so must present to the bishop every person who is to be ordained¹¹, and the priests taking part, together with the bishop, lay their hands upon the head of every person who receives the order of priesthood¹².

1 As to deaconesses, see PARA 759 et seq post.

2 'Lay officers' means licensed lay workers (see PARA 766 post), readers (see PARA 762 et seq post), lay judges of consistory or provincial courts (see PARA 1275 et seq, 1286 post), and lay holders of other offices admission to which is for the time being regulated by canon: Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 2 (2).

3 Ibid s 2 (1).

4 Ibid s 4 (1). The synod's final approval of any such canon conclusively determines that the synod is of that opinion with respect to the matter approved: s 4 (2). As to the construction of 'the doctrine of the Church of England', see s 5 (1), and PARA 935 note 10 post.

5 No oath may be administered during the actual service: Clerical Subscription Act 1865, s 11. This provision does not apply to the oath of canonical obedience: s 12.

6 The Thirty-Nine Articles are agreeable to the Word of God and may be assented to with a good conscience by all members of the Church of England: Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon A2.

7 The doctrine contained in the Book of Common Prayer is agreeable to the Word of God: ibid Canon A3 para 1. The forms of worship contained in it, forasmuch as it is not repugnant to the Word of God, may be used by all members of the Church of England with a good conscience: Canon A3 para 2.

8 Ibid Canon C15 para 1 (1), (4) (substituted by Amending Canon No. 4). Although Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C14 para 3, clearly states that the oath is of obedience to the bishop of the diocese by whom the candidate is to be ordained, it is unlikely that it is intended that at an ordination under letters dimissory (see PARA 659 ante) the oath should be other than to the bishop who issued the letters. According to the ancient usage of the Church and realm of England the inferior clergy who have received authority to minister in any diocese owe canonical obedience on all things lawful and honest to the bishop: Canon C1 para 3.

If any person directly or indirectly receives or agrees to receive any money or profit for effecting or promising the ordination of any clerk, beyond the lawful fees¹, he is liable, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding £100². The clerk so corruptly ordained is similarly liable on summary conviction, and if within seven years after his corrupt ordination he takes any benefice or other ecclesiastical preferment, it will, immediately after his admission to it, become void as if he were dead². A bishop who takes money for admitting to holy orders is guilty of simony and is liable to deprivation³.

No person who has been admitted to the order of bishop, priest or deacon can ever be divested of the character of his order. However, by legal process¹, he may voluntarily relinquish the exercise of his orders² and use himself as a layman³ or, by legal and canonical process, he may be deprived⁴ of the exercise of his orders or finally deposed⁵ from them⁶.

664. Deacon's functions.

The functions of a deacon in the church where he is appointed to serve are to assist the priest in divine service, and specially when he administers the Holy Communion, to help him in its distribution, to read the holy scriptures and homilies in the church, to instruct the youth in the catechism, to baptise infants in the absence of the priest, to preach, if admitted to do so by the bishop; and, where provision is so made, to search for the sick, poor and impotent people of the parish and report details of them to the incumbent with a view to their being relieved by the alms of the parishioners and otherwise¹. A deacon may also perform the burial service and, in law, solemnise marriage²; but canonically, since a blessing is given, marriages should be solemnised by those in priest's orders.

Before a deacon can be admitted to priest's orders he must continue in office as a deacon for a whole year, unless the bishop for reasonable causes decides otherwise, in order that he may become perfect and expert in matters of ecclesiastical administration; and, if he is found faithful and diligent in the office, he may then be admitted to the priesthood³. However, without a faculty from the Archbishop of Canterbury, no person may be ordained both deacon and priest on the same day⁴; and no person may be ordained priest unless he is at least twenty-four years of age, unless he is over twenty-three and has a faculty from the Archbishop of Canterbury⁵.

666. Authority to officiate.

A minister duly ordained priest or deacon and, where required under the provisions relating to extraneous and overseas orders¹, holding a licence or permission from the relevant archbishop, may officiate in any place only after he has received authority to do so from the appropriate bishop or other Ordinary². The bishop confers such authority by instituting the minister to a benefice³, by admitting him to serve within his diocese by licence under his hand and seal⁴, or by giving him written permission to officiate⁵. With certain exceptions⁶ no minister who has such authority may exercise his ministry in any place in which he does not have the cure of souls without the permission of the minister who has such cure⁷.

1 See the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C8 para 5, and PARA 669 post.

2 Ibid Canon C8 paras 1, 2. However, the minister having the cure of souls of a church or chapel, or the sequestrator when the cure is vacant, or the dean or provost and canons residentiary of any cathedral or collegiate church may allow a minister as to whose character and qualifications they are satisfied to minister within their church or chapel for not more than ten days within three months without reference to the bishop or other Ordinary, and that minister must sign the services register when he officiates: Canon C8 para 2a. Further, no member of the chapter of a cathedral church is debarred from performing his duties and exercising his ministry within the diocese merely by lack of authority from the bishop (Canon C8 para 2b), and any minister who has a licence to preach throughout the province from the archbishop or throughout England from the University of Oxford or Cambridge may do so without any further authority from the bishop (Canon C8 para 2c). See also PARA 691 post. As to the bishop's right to officiate, see PARA 690 post.

3 See PARA 689 et seq post.

4 See PARA 706 et seq post. The bishop's licence takes the form either of a general licence to preach or otherwise to minister (subject to the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C8 para 4: see infra) in any parish or ecclesiastical district, or of a licence to perform some particular office: Canon C12 para 1.

667. Ordination for service overseas.

Any bishop of a diocese in the province of Canterbury or York, on receiving a request from the bishop of an overseas diocese that he should ordain as priest or deacon a person named in the request with a view to his exercising his ministry in that overseas diocese, may ordain that person in pursuance of the request¹. Where any person to be so ordained is not a citizen of the United Kingdom and Colonies² the bishop who is to ordain him may dispense with the taking of the oath of allegiance³. Where it is desired that a person so ordained should exercise his ministry for a limited period in the province of Canterbury or York before proceeding overseas, the archbishop may grant him a temporary permission to officiate⁴.

669. Restrictions on overseas clergy.

It is an offence¹ for an overseas clergyman² to officiate as priest or deacon in the province of Canterbury or York otherwise than in accordance with a permission granted by the relevant archbishop³. Any overseas clergyman desiring so to officiate may apply⁴ to the archbishop for written permission to do so⁵. The archbishop may grant the permission⁶, either without limitation of time or for a specified time⁷, and then, subject to any such limitation, the overseas clergyman possesses all such rights and advantages and is subject to all such duties and liabilities as he would have possessed and been subject to if he had been ordained by the bishop of a diocese in the province of Canterbury or York otherwise than at the request of the bishop of an overseas diocese⁸.

If such an overseas clergyman is not a citizen of the United Kingdom and Colonies⁹ and is to be admitted to a benefice, perpetual curacy, lectureship or preachership¹⁰ the bishop by whom he is to be admitted may dispense with the taking of the oath of allegiance¹¹.

4 Application must be made on a form approved by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York: ibid s 1 (5).

669 Restrictions on overseas clergy

TEXT AND NOTES--It is lawful for persons admitted to Holy Orders by a bishop of the Church of Ireland, whether or not they hold or have held any benefice or preferment in England, to officiate in England in a church or chapel belonging to the Church of England, if invited to do so by the minister having the cure of souls of the church or chapel, without notifying the bishop of the diocese in which the church or chapel is situate for the same period and subject to the same conditions as would be applicable to them if they had been admitted to Holy Orders by the bishop of a diocese in the Church of England: Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1995 s 1.

A clergyman who holds any cathedral preferment, benefice, curacy or lectureship, or who is licensed or otherwise allowed to perform the duties of any ecclesiastical office, must not take to farm for life, or for a term of years or at will, more than 80 acres of land for the purpose of his own occupation, user or cultivation without a special written permission from the bishop, specifying the number of years, not exceeding seven, for which the permission is given; and he will forfeit for every acre so taken to farm without permission, above 80 acres, the sum of £2 for every year in which it is so occupied, used or cultivated by him¹

If incurred by a beneficed clergyman, the forfeiture is recoverable² in the consistory court of the diocese by a person authorised by the bishop, and its payment may be enforced by monition and sequestration³. If it is incurred by an unbeneficed clergyman, it may be recovered by any person by action in the High Court⁴.

683. Restrictions on trading.

A clergyman who holds any cathedral preferment, benefice, curacy or lectureship, or who is licensed or otherwise allowed to perform the duties of any ecclesiastical office, must not, either by himself or by any other person for him, or to his use, engage in or carry on any trade or dealing for gain or profit, or deal in any goods or merchandise, unless such trading or dealing has been or is carried on by or on behalf of more than six partners¹, or such trade or dealing, or a share in it, has devolved upon him or upon some other person for him or for his use under a will, or by inheritance, intestacy, settlement, marriage or bankruptcy; but in no such case may he act as a director or managing partner, or carry on the trade or dealing in person². There are, however, exceptions to this prohibition, and a clergyman may:

- (1) Keep a school or seminary, and act as schoolmaster or tutor or instructor and be concerned or engaged in giving instruction or education for profit or reward; and may buy and sell and do any other thing in relation to the management of any such school, seminary or employment;
- (2) buy any goods or articles to be used for his family or in his household and after so buying them may, even at an advanced price, sell them or any parts of them which he does not want or choose to keep;
- (3) dispose of books or other works to or by means of a bookseller or publisher;
- (4) be a manager, director, partner or shareholder in any benefit society or fire or life assurance society;
- (5) buy and sell again, for gain or profit, cattle, corn and other articles necessary or convenient to be bought, sold or kept by or for him, or to his use for the occupation, manuring, improving, pasturage or profit of any glebe, demesne or other land which may be lawfully held, occupied, possessed or enjoyed by or for him or to his use; but he must not buy or sell any such cattle, corn or other articles in person in any market, fair or place of public sale; and
- (6) sell minerals which are the produce of mines situated on his own land³.

Unlawful trading or dealing, in contravention of the foregoing provisions, is an ecclesiastical offence for which proceedings may be taken in the consistory court⁴.

684. Dispensation from restrictions on occupations.

Notwithstanding the foregoing restrictions on farming and trading, a clergyman holding any preferment or benefice or any curacy or lectureship or who is licensed or otherwise allowed to perform the duties of any ecclesiastical office whatever may be allowed to engage in trades or occupations other than those authorised by the relevant provisions of the Pluralities Act 1838 and the Trading Partnerships Act 1841¹, and without the aforesaid restrictions, provided he holds a licence to do so from the bishop of the diocese².

The bishop may grant³ such a licence only after consultation with the parochial church council of the parish, if any, in which the clergyman holds or is about to hold office, or may refuse such a licence only after consultation with that council, if any, and with the ministerial committee of the diocese⁴. If the bishop refuses such a licence the clergyman may, within one month after the refusal, appeal to the archbishop of the province, who may confirm or overrule the refusal as appears to him good and proper; his decision is final⁵.

D. RELINQUISHMENT OF ORDERS

686. Deed of relinquishment.

After he has resigned every or any ecclesiastical preferment held by him, a priest or deacon may execute a deed¹ relinquishing all rights, privileges, advantages and exemptions by law belonging to his office, and may cause it to be enrolled in the Central Office of the Supreme Court of Judicature, and deliver an office copy of the enrolment, with a statement of his place of residence, to the bishop of the diocese in which he last held a preferment, or, if he has not held any preferment, to the bishop of the diocese in which he is resident; and he is to give notice of his having done so to the archbishop of the province in which the bishop's diocese is situated². At the expiration of six months after the office copy of the enrolment has been delivered to the bishop, he or his successor in office, on the application of the relinquishing clergyman, must cause the deed to be recorded in the diocesan registry³. If, however, within the six months the bishop or his successor has notice of proceedings against the relinquishing clergyman as a person who has been admitted to the office of minister in the Church of England, the deed, on the clergyman's application, must be so recorded upon the termination of the proceedings by a definitive sentence or an interlocutory decree having the effect of definitive sentence and execution of it, but no sooner⁴.

Upon the recording of a deed of relinquishment¹ the clergyman who executed it becomes incapable of officiating or acting as a minister of the Church of England and of holding any preferment in it, and ceases to enjoy the rights, privileges and exemptions attached to the office of such a minister², and every licence, office and place held by him, which must by law be held by a minister of the Church of England, becomes ipso facto void³. The clergyman also becomes discharged and free from all disabilities, disqualifications and restraints to which he would otherwise⁴ have been subject as a person admitted to the office of minister in the Church of England, and from all jurisdiction, penalties, censures and proceedings to which he would or might otherwise⁴ have been amenable or liable in consequence of his having been so admitted, or of anything done or omitted by him after such admission⁵. However, neither he nor his estate are relieved from any liability in respect of dilapidations or from any debt or other pecuniary liability incurred or accrued before or after his execution of the deed of relinquishment⁶.

688. Resumption after relinquishment.

A person who has relinquished his legal status as priest or deacon¹ still, in the eyes of the church, has the indelible character of his order² and, if he wishes to resume that status may, at any time after the deed executed by him has been recorded in the diocesan registry, present a petition to the archbishop of the province in which the diocese is situate that the enrolment of the deed may be vacated³. On receipt of the petition the archbishop, after such consultation as he deems necessary⁴, may forthwith or after an interval, by writing under his hand and archiepiscopal seal, request the vacation of the enrolment of the deed⁵. Upon production of this written request the enrolment is vacated as if ordered by the High Court and the vacation is recorded in the registry⁶.

No re-ordination is required or is possible, and the clergyman may resume clerical functions; but for two years after the recording of the vacation the petitioning clergyman is incapable of holding any benefice or other preferment, including the office of a curate licensed under seal⁷. Subject to that, he may officiate as a minister under such conditions and to such an extent as the bishop of the diocese in which he officiates determines⁸. After these two years such a clergyman is capable of holding any benefice or other preferment in any diocese with the bishop's prior consent, which may be general or given in respect of some particular benefice or preferment⁹. Apart from these limitations the clergyman is in the same position as if he had never relinquished his status¹⁰.

(iii) Beneficed Clergy

689. Nature of office.

A benefice is a freehold office¹. The holder of a benefice is called the incumbent or minister²; according to the nature of his benefice, he is also styled rector (or 'parson'³) or vicar⁴. The incumbent is a corporation sole⁵ and has a freehold interest in the emoluments of the benefice until his death or until the benefice is otherwise legally vacated by him⁶.

¹ Kirton v Dear (1869) LR 5 CP 217 at 220. See note 6 infra. As to benefices generally, see PARA 768 et seq post.

³ A rector is called 'parson' or persona ecclesiae because he is the local personification of the church. When in complete possession of the benefice, he is also called persona impersonata, parson impersonnee: Co Litt 300a, b. A rectory may be referred to as a 'church', and so also may a vicarage, where the rectory is inappropriate: Reynoldson v Bishop of London (1696) 3 Lev 435 at 436.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/4. MINISTRY/(1) CLERGY/(iii) Beneficed Clergy/690. Cure of souls.

690. Cure of souls.

The bishop has the general cure of souls throughout the whole of his diocese¹, and accordingly has the right personally to officiate at pleasure in any church within it. He cannot exercise this right by deputy, however², and, subject to it, an incumbent has the exclusive³ cure of souls within his parish, and no other clergyman has any right publicly to officiate or perform clerical ministrations within the parish without his consent⁴, except where the necessity for his consent has been abrogated by statutes or by arrangement, or has been forfeited by some default on his part⁵. All parochial duties are committed to and imposed upon the incumbent, and all fees and emoluments arising from the performance of these duties belong to him⁶. His consent is necessary to the erection of any chapel of ease or other public chapel or church within his parish⁷. He has the nomination of the minister to serve in any chapel of ease of in his parish⁸; and all money collected in any such chapel is at the disposal of himself and the churchwardens or the parochial church council as the case may be⁹ of the parish¹⁰. The rector or vicar of a new benefice created by a pastoral scheme has the exclusive¹¹ cure of souls in the area of the benefice, subject to the rights of the bishop and, if there is a team or group ministry established for the benefice, to the rights and duties of the other members of the team or group¹².

2 It is not clear whether a suffragan bishop is an exception to this rule: see the Suffragan Bishops Act 1534, ss 2, 4.

3 This is subject, however, to the right of the minister of a parish to perform offices and services at the home of any person whose name is on the electoral roll of that parish, as long as those present only include members of the family and household of that person: Extra-Parochial Ministry Measure 1967, s 1. Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/4. MINISTRY/(1) CLERGY/(iii) Beneficed Clergy/691. Right to officiate.

691. Right to officiate.

Without any licence from the bishop an incumbent has the right to perform divine service in any consecrated building within his benefice¹ save one which comes within the category of recognised exceptions, such as a public school chapel² or the chapel of any other college, school, hospital, asylum or public or charitable institution in which a clergyman is licensed by the bishop³. The rights of an incumbent with regard to a private or proprietary chapel are not so clear, but, having regard to the difficulty which an incumbent might often experience in gaining access to such a chapel without permission to enter upon private property, it may be that he has no absolute right to perform divine service there. The chapels of the colleges at the two ancient universities are by long custom extra-parochial, as also by statute⁴ are those on army and air force camps and the incumbent of the benefice where they are situated has no jurisdiction over them.

Strictly speaking, it would appear that an incumbent requires the bishop's licence to perform divine service in an unconsecrated building⁵, although it would seem that this requirement does not extend to services in the open air. No licence is required where the service is one directed by the Book of Common Prayer as, for instance, in the Order for the Visitation of the Sick⁶ although other celebrations of the Holy Communion in private houses, and preaching in them, are with certain exceptions forbidden⁷. Apart from these qualifications the incumbent's rights are unimpaired and presumably he may delegate them to anyone holding the bishop's licence to officiate⁸.

In a team ministry, however, a vicar in the team may be given a special cure of souls independent of the rector in respect of part of the area of the team ministry: Pastoral Measure 1968, ss 19 (6), (7), 20 (1), 22 (4). See PARA 690 ante, 870 post. 'Divine service' now includes any authorised form of religious service: see Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Section B (Canons B1-B42). Where an incumbent is non-resident without a licence or legal cause of exemption from residence¹, the bishop, either instead of or after proceeding for the penalties for non-residence, may issue a monition to him to proceed to and reside on his benefice and perform his duties there, and to make a return to the monition after a period of not less than thirty days, and, in case of no return or an unsatisfactory return being made, may issue an order requiring him to proceed and reside within thirty days². If the order is not complied with the bishop may, subject to an appeal to the archbishop, sequester the profits of the benefice until compliance or proof of sufficient reasons for non-compliance³. If an incumbent after a monition or order to reside on his benefice begins to reside and within twelve months thereafter wilfully absents himself from his benefice for one month together or at several times, the bishop, subject to an appeal to the archbishop, may issue sequestration without any other monition or order, and may repeat the process as occasion may require⁴.

- (6) diligently to visit his parishoners, particularly those who are sick and infirm, and to provide opportunities whereby any of his parishoners may resort to him for spiritual counsel and advice⁶;
- (7) to consult with the parochial church council on matters of general concern and importance to the parish⁷; and
- (8) if at any time he is unable to discharge his duties, to provide for his cure to be supplied by a priest licensed or otherwise approved by the bishop of the diocese⁸.

The unbeneficed clergy comprises those who are unattached and have no definite parochial or other ministerial charge; curates or ministers in charge of a parish; vicars in team ministries; assistant curates, lecturers and preachers; ministers of chapels of ease; ministers of proprietary chapels and chaplains. Whether they are unattached or have an appointed sphere of duty they require, as a rule, in order to enable them to officiate anywhere, the licence or permission of the bishop of the diocese¹ and the consent of the incumbent of the parish².

The licence may be revoked summarily by the bishop (or, during a vacancy, by the archbishop) for any cause which appears to him to be good and reasonable, after having given the clergyman sufficient opportunity to show cause to the contrary (Clergy (Ordination and Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1964, ss 10 (1), 12); but an appeal lies to the archbishop within one month after service of the notice of revocation (s. 10 (2)). However, in the case of a deacon to whom the Pastoral Measure 1983 s 20(3A) applies (see PARA 870) a licence may not be revoked by a bishop, unless the bishop is satisfied that there has been a serious breakdown of the pastoral relationship between that deacon and the parishioners concerned or he is unable by reason of age or infirmity to discharge his pastoral duties adequately: 1988 Measure s 7(1A)(a), added by Team and Group Ministries Measure 1995 s 15.

B. CURATES OR MINISTERS IN CHARGE

704. Meaning.

Curates or ministers in charge¹ include clergymen who are in charge of a parish either (1) during a vacancy in the benefice, including cases where the right of presentation is suspended²; or (2) where a sequestration under a judgment against the incumbent or under his bankruptcy has been in force for six months³; or (3) in certain cases where the incumbent is in breach of his duty of residence⁴; or (4) where the incumbent is under a disability upon which the ministerial committee has reported⁵; or (5) where a censure of suspension or inhibition has been pronounced against the incumbent⁶. In these cases the clergyman is appointed as a stipendiary assistant curate and acquires his position of curate in charge by the incumbent's permitted or enforced withdrawal. An assistant curate may be also temporarily in charge of a parish during a short absence of the incumbent, but in that case acts as the representative of the incumbent and under his directions⁷.

705. Ministers in charge of a parish.

A curate who by reason of a vacancy in the benefice or for some different reason¹ is the minister in charge of a parish has, while so in charge, the incumbent's rights and duties with reference to the services in the church and the cure of souls of the parish². He occupies the same position as the incumbent in the choice of churchwardens and sidesmen³. If the benefice is vacant, he has the right which the incumbent possesses of joining in the appointment of the parish clerk⁴, but not if the benefice is under sequestration owing to the incumbent's bankruptcy⁵.

1 The mere fact of a benefice being under sequestration does not render the curate who is appointed to serve the cure (see PARA 715 post) the minister in charge (Lawrence v Edwards [1891] 1 Ch 144).

2 Pinder v Barr (1854) 4 E & B 105. If there is an incumbent, however, who is not suspended or inhibited or restrained by statute from interfering with the discharge of the duties of the benefice, the curate represents the incumbent and is subject to any lawful directions which the incumbent may give as to the discharge of those duties: Pinder v Barr supra at 115, 116.

A clergyman is admitted to the office of assistant curate in a benefice by the bishop's licence on the nomination, except where there is a clear custom or a statutory enactment to the contrary, of the incumbent¹. The selling of a curacy is simony². Before a clergyman is licensed, the bishop must be satisfied by examination as to his personal fitness for the cure to which he is nominated, and if he comes from another diocese the bishop must be shown the clergyman's letters of orders, or other sufficient evidence that he is ordained, as well as testimony from the bishop of the diocese from which he comes of his honesty, ability and conformity to the doctrine of the Church of England, together with letters testimonial of his good life and conversation from three priests beneficed in that diocese, countersigned by the bishop of that diocese³. Before obtaining a licence to a stipendiary curacy the clergyman must present to the bishop a declaration, signed by himself and by the incumbent of the benefice to which he is to be licensed⁴, to the effect that the incumbent bona fide undertakes to pay to him a specified annual sum as a stipend for his services as curate, and that he bona fide intends to receive the whole of it without any deduction or abatement in respect of rent or consideration for the use of the glebe house, or on any other account except pension contributions⁵.

On being licensed he must take the oath of canonical obedience to the bishop⁶, and, unless he has been ordained the same day and has made the declaration of assent⁷, must make and subscribe in the presence of the bishop by whom he is licensed, or that bishop's commissary, the declaration of assent⁸; and must, on the first Lord's Day on which he officiates in the church or in one of the churches in which he is licensed to serve, make the same declaration at the time of divine service in the presence of the presence of the congregation⁹.

No stipendiary curate may be licensed to serve in more than one church or chapel unless they are churches of one united benefice or held in plurality or the chapel is dependent on the parish church¹⁰.

706 Admission to office of assistant curate

TEXT AND NOTES--The bishop of a diocese may by an instrument under his hand direct that any office of assistant curate in his diocese may be described in such terms as may be specified in the instrument and, where such an instrument is in force, any licence issued to a person to exercise the office must refer to the assistant curate by that description and any reference in any enactment, canon or other instrument to an assistant curate is to be construed accordingly: Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 s 61(1). For supplementary provision see s 61(2)-(5).

Every licence granted to a stipendiary curate, whether the incumbent is resident or non-resident, specifies the amount of the stipend to be paid to the curate¹. Any agreement made between him and the incumbent in fraud or derogation of the law as to curates' stipends, or by which a curate undertakes or binds himself to take a stipend less than that which is assigned to him by his licence, is void; and, notwithstanding his acceptance of a less sum and any discharge given by him for it, he and his personal representatives remain entitled to the full amount specified in the licence; and on application to the bishop within twelve months after the curate has quitted the curacy or died, payment of the unpaid portion, together with full costs of recovering it, is to be enforced by monition and sequestration of the profits of the benefice².

710. Appointment of curate where incumbent is resident.

Where the incumbent of a benefice is resident and duly performs the duties of the cure the bishop cannot compel the appointment of a curate or assign to a curate a larger stipend than the incumbent is willing to pay¹, except where the benefice exceeds £500 in annual value, and either the population amounts to 3,000 or there is a second church or chapel with a hamlet or district containing 400 persons². In this case the bishop may require the incumbent to nominate a person to be licensed as curate to assist in performing the duties of the benefice and to be paid by the incumbent and may, if the nomination is not made within three months, appoint and license a curate with a stipend not exceeding £150². An appeal from the requisition or appointment lies within one month to the archbishop³.

However, in the case of a benefice united or enlarged under the Union of Benefices Measure 1923 where the scheme constituting the benefice was pending on 1st April 1969 and provides for the appointment of a curate, the incumbent may similarly be required to nominate a curate⁴. If the nomination is not made within three months the bishop may appoint and license a curate with a stipend of the amount specified in the scheme⁴. There is a similar right of appeal to the archbishop⁴.

712. Stipend assigned to curate in incumbent's absence.

Every curate of a nonresident incumbent, or one who is appointed under the provisions of any enactment empowering the bishop to appoint a curate during any period of sequestration under a judgment recovered against, or the bankruptcy of, an incumbent¹, or during the vacancy of a benefice, is to receive such stipend² as is assigned to him by the bishop of the diocese³ in which he serves⁴. The stipend must not exceed a sum equal to three-quarters of the net annual value of the benefice, except where the curate is appointed during the vacancy of a benefice when it may be a sum not exceeding the net annual value of the benefice⁵. In any case where more than one curate is appointed to perform the duties of a single benefice, the stipends of the curates so appointed must be treated as if the aggregate were the stipend of a single curate⁶. The stipend assigned to a curate on the occasion of his appointment must be specified in the licence granted to him by the bishop⁷. During a vacancy of a see the bishop's powers are exercisable by the guardian of the spiritualities⁸.

For the purposes of the foregoing provisions, the net annual value of a benefice is ascertained by deducting from the gross amount of the annual value all taxes (other than income or property tax), rates, dues and permanent charges and outgoings, and, subject as stated below, all assessments relating to repairs and dilapidations⁹; but not any curate's stipend or any such taxes or rates in respect of the parsonage house of the benefice or of the glebe land belonging to it as are usually paid by tenants or occupiers, or any money expended in the repair or improvement of or such parts of those assessments as are attributable to the parsonage house and buildings and premises belonging to it¹⁰. The bishop has power to take the necessary steps to determine the net annual value and, for this purpose, his determination is final and conclusive¹¹.

When a benefice becomes vacant a sequestration is issued¹, and the duties are performed by a curate or curates appointed by the bishop² or, in default of any appointment by him, employed for the purpose by the sequestrators³; but any stipendiary curate who is licensed to the parish continues in office and his stipend is paid out of the income of the benefice during the vacancy, and this may sometimes render the employment of any other clerk unnecessary. The bishop may assign to every curate appointed to perform the duties a stipend not exceeding the net annual value⁴ of the benefice⁵. The sequestrators pay the amount out of the profits of the benefice which come to their hands and, if these are not sufficient, the incoming incumbent is liable to pay the balance out of the profits received by him⁶. Where a benefice is vacant and the right of presentation to it has been suspended by the bishop¹, the bishop must sequester the profits of the benefice² and, subject to and in accordance with the bishop's directions, the sequestrators must make provision for the performance of the ecclesiastical duties of the benefice³. Before giving any such directions the bishop must consult the parochial church council concerned and, as far as reasonably practicable, the patron of the benefice⁴. The bishop may appoint a curate in charge of the benefice and may require the curate to reside in the parsonage house of the benefice⁵. 717. Appointment of curate by bishop where incumbent is non-resident.

The bishop may appoint or license one or more curates to a benefice where the incumbent is non-resident for nine months in the year without lawful excuse¹ and fails to ensure that a curate performs the duties of the benefice². The licence must specify whether the curate is required to reside within the benefice or not³, but if the incumbent does not reside or does not satisfy the bishop of his intention to reside during four months in the year, the curate must normally reside within the benefice⁴.

A curate so appointed may be required to reside in the house of residence of the benefice, which may be assigned to him free of rent together with four acres of glebe land at a rent to be fixed by the archdeacon or rural dean and a neighbouring incumbent⁵. If the bishop has assigned to the curate a stipend not less than the whole value of the benefice and has directed him to reside in the house of residence, he is liable to the same rates and taxes as if he were the incumbent⁶. In other cases where the curate is directed so to reside, the bishop may require the incumbent to pay to the curate all or part of such rates or taxes as he actually has paid⁷. The order for payment of rates and taxes may be enforced by monition and both that order and the delivery of possession of the house may be enforced by sequestration of the profits of the benefice⁸. He must at any time give up possession of the house on six months' notice either from the incumbent with the bishop's written permission or from the bishop himself; or, in case of the benefice becoming vacant, on six weeks' notice from the new incumbent, if given within six months after admission to the benefice⁹.

In practice, as non-residence is usually due to disability arising from age or infirmity¹⁰ or to suspension or inhibition¹¹, the bishop, instead of exercising the foregoing powers, would probably exercise his other powers relating to these special cases¹².

720. Appointment of curate when incumbent is suspended or inhibited.

When a censure of suspension or inhibition has been pronounced against an incumbent¹, the bishop in whose diocese the incumbency is may appoint a person or persons to perform the incumbent's duties and may assign to him such part of the net stipend of the benefice as he thinks fit². If necessary the bishop may sequester the profits of the benefice for the payment of the stipend so assigned³. The person so appointed may be required by the bishop to reside in the parsonage house belonging to the benefice and the bishop may assign to him the use of the house together with the offices, gardens and appurtenances, or any part or parts of them without payment of any rent³. The person so residing is liable to pay the rates in respect of the house⁴.

Where possession of the premises assigned to a curate under the foregoing provisions is not given up to him, and until possession is given up, the bishop may direct that the profits of the benefice arising from sequestration are to be applied as if they arose under a sequestration for non-residence⁵.

It is the duty of the House of Bishops to draw up rules of guidance¹ to promote better relations between the incumbent and the parishioners and remove the causes of their estrangement, and to promulgate the rules in a Code of Practice².

A request for an inquiry into the pastoral situation in a parish on the ground that there has been a serious breakdown of the pastoral relationship between the incumbent and the parishioners³, to which the conduct of the incumbent or of the parishioners, or of both, has contributed over a substantial period may be made by the incumbent of the benefice⁴ to which the parish belongs⁵. It may also be made by the archdeacon in whose archdeaconry the parish is⁶, or a majority of not less than two-thirds of the lay members of the parochial church council of the parish present and voting at a duly convened meeting of that council on a resolution that the request be made⁷.

Where the incumbent is also the archdeacon, a request for an inquiry may be made by a majority of the members of the bishop's council and standing committee of the diocesan synod of the diocese in which the parish is situated⁸. An inquiry can only be undertaken after the persons concerned have had an opportunity to resolve the pastoral situation in the parish in question, and a request for an inquiry must not be made unless notice of intention to make the request has been given by the person concerned to the bishop of the diocese in which the parish in question is at least six months, and not more than twelve months, before the request is made⁹.

A request for such an inquiry, and a notice of intention to make it, must be made or given in writing to the bishop of the appropriate diocese and, in the case of a request, the secretary of the diocesan synod of that diocese and should contain particulars justifying an inquiry¹⁰.

4 Benefice means the office of rector or vicar, with cure of souls, including the office of vicar in a team ministry established under the Pastoral Measure 1968 or the Pastoral Measure 1983, but does not include any office in a Royal Peculiar nor the office of dean or provost of a parish church cathedral within the meaning of the Cathedrals Measure 1963: 1977 Measure s 19; 1993 Measure s 14, Sch 3.

On receipt of such request or notice the secretary of the diocesan synod must notify the incumbent unless it was he who made the request or gave the notice and similarly the archdeacon and the secretary of the parochial church council: s 1A(6). As to the withdrawal of the request, see s 1A(7).

2. Preliminary action to be taken by archdeacon

Where the bishop of a diocese receives a request for such an inquiry he must direct the archdeacon in whose archdeaconry the parish in question is situated¹ to remove the causes of their estrangement².

Not more than six weeks after receiving the directions of the bishop the archdeacon must report to the bishop whether in his opinion an inquiry would be in the best interest of the incumbent and the parishioners and should accordingly be instituted, and the archdeacon, in making his report to the bishop, must have regard to the extent to which the current Code of Practice³ has been complied with⁴.

The bishop must inform the secretary of the diocesan synod of the archdeacon's opinion and direct him to inform the incumbent, the secretary of the parochial church council and the designated representative, if any, of it⁵.

1 Where the archdeaconry is vacant the bishop must appoint another archdeacon in the diocese to act: Incumbents (Vacation of Benefices) Measure 1977 s 2(2). This provision is not affected by Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1983 s 9; see PARA 499A.

Where the archdeacon is of the opinion that it would not be right or expedient for him to act, he must inform the bishop who will appoint another archdeacon in the diocese to act in his place: 1977 Measure s 2(3).

3. Institution of inquiry

The bishop may, if he thinks fit, direct the secretary of the diocesan synod to institute such an inquiry where (1) the request for an inquiry was made by the archdeacon in whose archdeaconry the parish in question is situated, or that archdeacon is the incumbent; or (2) the archdeacon appointed to act as conciliator¹ reports that such an inquiry should be instituted; or (3) within six months of making his report the archdeacon informs the bishop that although he reported to the contrary he now considers that an inquiry is required; or (4) within six months of the making of the archdeacon's report the incumbent informs the bishop that, notwithstanding the archdeacon's report to the contrary, an inquiry is required².

The inquiry must be conducted by a provincial tribunal for the province in which the parish in question is situated³.

Where a request for an inquiry has been made, the incumbent may ask the bishop to accept his resignation⁴ at any time before the bishop notifies him of the action he proposes to take following the report of the inquiry⁵. If his resignation is accepted no further steps will be taken in connection with the inquiry⁶.

'Relevant date' means (i) in either of the cases in head (1) above, the date on which the request was made, (ii) in the case in head (2) above, the date on which the report was made, or (iii) in the case in head (3) or (4) above, the date on which the bishop is informed that, notwithstanding that the archdeacon did not report that in his opinion an inquiry should be instituted, such an inquiry is nevertheless required: 1977 Measure s 3(1B); 1993 Measure s 3.

4 Once the incumbent has been informed that his resignation has been accepted, he must execute a deed resigning his benefice as from the date specified in the deed. This date may not be more than three months after the date on which the incumbent was informed that his resignation had been accepted. He must then vacate his official residence not later than three months after the date specified in the deed: 1977 Measure s 4(1), (2).

1. Constitution of provincial tribunals

A provincial tribunal consists of five persons appointed by the vicar-general of the province in which the parish in question is situated¹. The chairman is either the chancellor of a diocese in the province for which the tribunal is to be appointed, other than the diocese in which the parish in question is situated, or a Queen's Counsel who is also a communicant member of the Church of England². Two members are clerks in holy orders from the panel appointed³ from the members of the lower House of the Convocation of the province concerned⁴. The remaining members are lay persons from the panel appointed⁵ from the members of the House of Laity of the General Synod⁶. No person who is ordinarily resident in the diocese in which the parish in question is or whose name is entered on the electoral roll of any parish of that diocese or who is a clerk in holy orders authorised to exercise his ministry in any such parish is to be appointed⁷.

Where the secretary of the diocesan synod is required to institute an inquiry, he must request the vicar-general of the province to constitute a provincial tribunal and to send him a list of the names and addresses of proposed members⁸. Any person appointed to serve as a member of the tribunal from a panel mentioned above may refuse to accept the appointment if in his opinion it would not be right for him to serve as a member of the tribunal⁹. On receiving the list of names of proposed members, the secretary must send a copy of it to the incumbent concerned and must inform him of his right of objection and of the period within which the right must be exercised¹⁰.

The incumbent may, within three weeks after the list is sent to him, object to any of the proposed members by sending a written notice to the secretary of the diocesan synod specifying the members to whom he objects and his grounds¹¹. The matter must then be referred to the vicar-general of a province other than the province for which the tribunal is to be appointed, for him to determine whether the objection is reasonable¹².

Where it is decided that the objection should be allowed the secretary of the diocesan synod must request the vicar-general of the province in which the parish in question is situated to appoint an alternative member¹³. The incumbent must be informed of the identity of the proposed member and may object in the same manner as above¹⁴.

As soon as the provincial tribunal has been constituted a list of the members must be sent to the incumbent and certain other persons¹⁵.

14 Ibid Sch 1 para 3(4), (5). The incumbent is not entitled to object to a person appointed under Sch 1 para 3(4) from a panel mentioned in TEXT AND NOTES 3, 5 above if, were the objection to be allowed, the result would be that the tribunal could not be constituted, there being no other person on the appropriate panel available for appointment as a member of the tribunal: Sch 1 para 3(6).

2. Legal advice and representation

At any meeting of any provincial tribunal to which the incumbent is invited or at which he is entitled to be present, he may be assisted, or in his absence represented, by some other person, whether having professional qualifications or not¹.

At an inquiry into the pastoral situation in a parish the parties² may be represented by a barrister or solicitor³.

3. Medical examinations

The tribunal by which an inquiry is being conducted may direct that the incumbent concerned should undergo a medical examination¹ for the purpose of obtaining a report on his mental or physical condition². Where a tribunal gives a direction and the incumbent concerned fails to take any steps required of him for the purpose of giving effect to the direction, the tribunal may draw such inferences (if any) as appear proper in the circumstances, without prejudice to the drawing of any other inferences that may properly be drawn by the tribunal in the course of the inquiry³.

1 The examination must be in accordance with the Incumbents (Vacation of Benefices) Rules 1994, SI 1994/703, rr 11, 12: Incumbents (Vacation of Benefices) Measure 1977 s 7A(1), added by Incumbents (Vacation of Benefices) (Amendment) Measure 1993 s 5.

4. Supplementary provisions with respect to an inquiry into the pastoral situation in a parish

In the case of such an inquiry the secretary of that diocesan synod must notify the secretaries of the parochial church councils of the parish to which the inquiry relates and of any other parish belonging to the benefice of which the incumbent concerned is the incumbent, of the institution of the inquiry and ask them whether those councils wish to make representations to the tribunal which is to conduct the inquiry: Incumbents (Vacation of Benefices) Measure 1977 s 8(1); Incumbents (Vacation of Benefices) (Amendment) Measure 1993 s 14, Sch 3. 733F. Powers of the bishop following an inquiry.

1. In cases of breakdown of pastoral relationship

If the tribunal recommends accordingly, the bishop may execute a declaration of avoidance declaring the benefice of the incumbent vacant as from a date specified in the declaration¹. He must disqualify the incumbent from executing or performing, without his consent, any right or duty of, or incidental to, the incumbent's office during the period beginning with the date on which the declaration is executed and ending on the date on which the benefice of the incumbent becomes vacant².

Where the tribunal reports that the breakdown of the pastoral relationship has been contributed to by the conduct of the incumbent over a substantial period the bishop may rebuke the incumbent³. He may also disqualify him from executing or performing without his consent any right or duty of, or incidental to the incumbent's office during a specified period⁴.

If the report concludes that the breakdown of the pastoral relationship is one to which the conduct of parishioners has contributed, the bishop may rebuke any of the parishioners and may, if he thinks fit, disqualify such of them as he thinks fit from being a church warden or member or officer of the parochial church council of the parish in question and of such other parishes in his diocese as he may specify during such period not exceeding five years as he may specify⁵.

In addition to his other powers, the bishop may give pastoral advice and guidance to the incumbent and the parishioners⁶.

assistant curate to help the incumbent²; or (3) give the incumbent leave of absence for a maximum of two years³; or (4) make any other temporary provision for the discharge of the incumbent's duties⁴.

An incumbent who is to resign his benefice must execute a deed resigning it as from the date specified in the deed⁵. If the incumbent refuses or fails to resign within one month from the date of notification, the bishop must execute a declaration of avoidance declaring the benefice vacant as from the date specified in the declaration⁶.

He must similarly notify the archdeacon in whose archdeaconry the parish concerned is situated³, the secretary of the parochial church council of that parish and any designated representative⁴.

The incumbent of any benefice which has been declared vacant⁵ or which he has resigned⁶ must vacate his official residence not later than three months after the date specified in the declaration of avoidance or deed of resignation⁷.

Where after obtaining the agreement of the bishop¹ an incumbent resigns his benefice² or, after an inquiry into the pastoral situation in a parish the bishop has declared the benefice of an incumbent vacant³, the incumbent is, on application made in writing to the diocesan board of finance, entitled to compensation for any loss suffered by him in consequence of his resignation or the vacation of his benefice⁴.

Where (1) after an inquiry into the pastoral situation in a parish in which the tribunal reported⁵ to the bishop that the incumbent was unable to carry out his duties adequately because of age or infirmity or (2) after an inquiry into the disability of an incumbent, the incumbent concerned resigns his benefice⁶, or the bishop has declared the incumbent's benefice vacant⁷, the incumbent will be deemed⁸ to have become incapable through infirmity, of performing the duties of his office on the date on which his resignation took effect or the date on which by virtue of the declaration, his benefice became vacant⁹. He is also deemed to have satisfied the Church of England Pensions Board to this effect and that the infirmity was likely to be permanent¹⁰.

The ministerial committee of a diocese consists of twelve clergymen (not being archdeacons) who are elected by the clergymen beneficed, or licensed under seal to officiate, in the diocese from among themselves¹. Elections are held triennially according to the principles of proportional representation, under rules approved by the archbishop of the province². The candidates obtaining the six highest places are ordinary members of the committee, the next six being reserve members, who may be nominated to take the place of an ordinary member who vacates his office or is unable or unwilling to act in any particular case³. Everything which the committee is empowered to do is to be done by the six ordinary members or such reserve members as may be nominated⁴ and five of these members are a quorum⁵. Except as otherwise provided⁶ every question must be decided by a majority of votes of those present, the chairman, who is elected by the members of the committee, having a casting vote⁷. All proceedings at any meeting of the committee must be held in private⁸, and the committee has no power to administer oaths or compel the production of documents or attendance of witnesses.

736. Bishop's powers to provide assistance.

Where the ministerial committee reports that through disability an incumbent is unable adequately to discharge the duties of his benefice without assistance and recommends that he be given assistance in discharging the duties the bishop may make such temporary provision for their discharge as he thinks fit¹. In particular he may, with the incumbent's consent², appoint and license one or more assistant curates³ and direct that certain duties be discharged by those curates instead of by the incumbent⁴, or he may give the incumbent temporary leave of absence for a period of up to two years and make provision for the discharge of his duties during his absence⁵. The appointment of a curate under the foregoing provisions may be determined by the bishop after such notice as is specified in the licence granted to the curate⁶. A record of every exercise of these powers must be filed in the diocesan registry⁷.

The stipend assigned to a curate appointed by the bishop under these powers must be specified in his licence⁸, and notwithstanding anything contained in other statutory provisions⁹ he is to receive such stipend as is assigned to him by the bishop, with the concurrence of the ministerial committee, out of the income of the benefice¹⁰. Before concurring in the amount to be paid the ministerial committee must have regard to any representation made by the incumbent as to his financial circumstances¹¹. 738. Evolution of clergy pensions schemes.

Before 1871 clerks in holy orders had no pensions as of right, but thereafter an incumbent of seven years' standing who retired for incapacity might have a pension assigned out of the revenues of the benefice¹. Similar provision was made in 1872 for deans and canons². Subsequently small annuities became payable by the Clergy Pensions Institution by way of an assurance scheme, and in 1927 a comprehensive and largely contributory clergy pension scheme came into operation, administered by the Church of England Pensions Board³. Some years later a pensions scheme was established for widows and other dependants⁴, and in 1946 a supplementary pensions scheme was introduced⁵. The existing schemes were consolidated in 1948⁶, and in 1954 clergymen's own pensions became non-contributory, these pensions being administered by the Church Commissioners⁷. Pensions for diocesan and suffragan bishops were separately provided for⁸. The schemes were further consolidated in 1961⁹, and were amended in 1972¹⁰ and 1975¹¹. The General Synod may, by regulations approved by it, make further provision with respect to pensions of the clergy and their widows and dependants and for other matters incidental and supplementary¹².

738A. The past service scheme and the funded scheme.

1. Establishment of two schemes

There are established two schemes with respect to the pensions and lump sum payments payable to clerks, deaconesses and licensed lay workers and their widows, widowers, surviving civil partners and dependants, namely (1) the Church of England Pensions Scheme, relating exclusively to past service (referred to as the 'past service scheme'); and (2) the Church of England Funded Pensions Scheme, relating to future service (referred to as the 'funded scheme')¹.

The past service scheme comprises provisions contained in the Church of England Pensions Regulations 1988, SI 1988/2256, the Clergy Pensions (Lump Sum Payments) Rules 1988 and any further regulations or rules relating to the past service scheme, whether made before or after 21 March 1997 (the date on which the Measure was passed)².

'Past service' means any period of pensionable service before the appointed day (1 January 1998), and 'future service' means any period of pensionable service on or after the appointed day³.

The Church Commissioners continue to be liable to meet the cost of pensions and lump sum payments in respect of past service, and lump sum payment arising from death before the appointed day⁴. The Pensions Board is liable for payments in respect of service or death after that date⁵.

1 Pensions Measure 1997 s 1(1) (amended by SI 2005/3325). The Measure came into force on 1 January 1998 in accordance with an order made jointly by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York on 28 November 1997.

2 1997 Measure s 1(2).

4 See PARA 739 TEXT AND NOTES.

5 See PARA 738A.2.

2. The funded scheme

The funded scheme must be established by deed by the Pensions Board¹. It must provide for the making of rules as to the nature and amount of the pensions and lump sum payments payable under the funded scheme and for the making of amending rules².

The scheme must provide for the constitution and maintenance of the Church of England Pensions Fund by the Board³.

Each responsible body must make contributions for the purposes of the funded scheme by paying to the Board in respect of each scheme member for whom the body is responsible such sums as the Board may determine⁴ in accordance with the regulations⁵. The Church Commissioners may, within such period as they may determine not exceeding the period of seven years following 1 January 1998, make such grants to a responsible body as they may think expedient for the purpose of assisting that body in meeting the cost of any contribution due to be paid under the provisions described above⁶.

The responsible bodies are: (1) in the case of a diocesan bishop or a dean, provost or residentiary canon in receipt of a stipend or other emoluments under the Cathedrals Measure 1963 s 28, the Church Commissioners; (2) in the case of a scheme member in receipt of a stipend paid from a diocesan stipends fund income account kept by the commissioners under the Diocesan Stipends Fund Measure 1953 s 1, the Diocesan Board of Finance of the diocese concerned; (3) in the case of a scheme member in receipt of periodical payments under the Incumbents (Vacation of Benefices) Measure 1977 s 13, Sch 2 para 2, or compensation under the Pastoral Measure 1983 s 26, Sch 4, the Diocesan Board of Finance of the diocese concerned; (4) in the case of a scheme member in receipt of a stipend paid wholly from caputular funds, the caputular body of the cathedral church concerned; (5) in the case of a scheme member in receipt of periodical payments under the Ordination of Women (Financial Provisions) Measure 1993 s 1(1)(b), the commissioners; (6) in the case of a scheme member who is (a) a clerk in Holy Orders employed by a World Mission Agency of the Church of England which is at the passing of this Measure an associate or full member of the Partnership for World Mission; or (b) a clerk in Holy Orders employed by the Church Pastoral Aid Society, the commissioners; (7) in the case of a scheme member employed in pensionable service otherwise than as mentioned in (5) above, the employer; and (8) in the case of any other person who is a scheme member performing pensionable service, the body primarily concerned for the time being in promoting that person's membership of the funded scheme⁷.

2 Ibid s 2(1). Rules must be approved by the General Synod: see s 2(2), (3).

All payments in respect of pensions and lump sum payments arising or to be provided under the scheme are made by the Board out of the fund: s 3(2).

4 Before making such a determination the Board must obtain the advice of an actuary, and the determination must be consistent with that advice: ibid s 4(2). 'Actuary' means a Fellow of the Institute of Actuaries or the Faculty of Actuaries in Scotland, not being a Church Commissioner or a member of the Board or a member of the staff of the commissioners or the Board, and includes a firm of actuaries: s 9(1). Before making a determination as to contributions, the Board must consult the archbishops and the responsible bodies: Church of England Pensions Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1929, reg 9(1).

5 Pensions Measure 1997 s 4(1). The payments must be made at such times as may be prescribed by regulations: s 4(3). The time so prescribed is the end of each calendar month: Church of England Pensions Regulations 1997 reg 10. If any payment is not made, the board may add interest when determining any subsequent payment: reg 9(2).

6 Pensions Measure 1997 s 6. The Commissioners may, for a limited period, apply capital funds for the purposes of making such a grant, or for meeting the costs of certain pensions or lump sums payable under the past service scheme or the Church Commissioners Superannuation Scheme: s 7 (substituted by the Church of England (Pensions) Measure 2003 s 5 and amended by the Church of England Pensions (Amendment) Measure 2009 s 1).

Minor amendments made relate only to administration and do not affect entitlement. The financial and constitutional provisions of the 1961 Measure are not affected.

The 1988 Regulations Pt II deals with pensions for Scheme members; Pt III with pensions for widows, widowers and children; Pt IV provides for contracted-out employment; and Pt V provides for reciprocal arrangements and accrued rights.

There are now established, by the Pensions Measure 1997, two schemes with respect to the pensions and lump sum payments payable to clerks, deaconesses and licensed lay workers and their widows, widowers and dependants, namely (1) the Church of England Pensions Scheme, relating exclusively to past service (referred to as the 'past service scheme'), and comprising the provisions of existing legislation; and (2) the Church of England Funded Pensions Scheme, relating to future service (referred to as the 'funded scheme'): see PARA 738A.

739 Entitlement to pensions

TEXT AND NOTES--The 1961 Measure Pts III, IV and the 1988 Regulations, SI 1988/2256, Pt II apply to a woman who becomes a clerk in holy orders by virtue of being ordained to the office of deacon and to her husband or widower, as they apply to a male clerk in holy orders: Deacons (Ordination of Women) Measure 1986 s 3.

The Church Commissioners continue to be liable to meet the cost of any pension arising from the retirement or death of a scheme member in so far as it is attributable to past service (ie service before 1 January 1998), any lump sum payment arising from the retirement of a scheme member in so far as it is so attributable to past service, and any lump sum payment arising from the death of a scheme member occurring before the appointed day (1 January 1998): see Pensions Measure 1997 s 5(1), (2). The Commissioners are not, however, liable for payments in respect of future service or death of a scheme member occurring on or after 1 January 1998: s 5(3). As to the establishment of a funded scheme in respect of future service see PARA 738A.

NOTE 2--1975 Regulations replaced: 1988 Regulations, SI 1988/2256. 1961 and 1972 Measures replaced in part by the 1988 Regulations.

NOTE 4--Where employment becomes contracted-out by reference to the clergy pensions scheme (in accordance with Social Security Pensions Act 1975 Pt III (ss 26-52)), the rate of pension is governed by SI 1988/2256.

NOTE 5--Replaced. The Commissioners may, within such period as they may determine not exceeding the period of seven years following 1 January 1998, apply capital funds for the purpose of meeting the cost of payments in respect of past service: Pensions Measure 1997 s 7 (see PARA 738A.2). Subject to that, all payments to be made by the commissioners to the Board, required by the Board for payments to be made by it under the past service scheme (see PARA 738A.1), must be made out of the commissioners' general fund: 1961 Measure s 17(1), as substituted by the Pensions Measure 1997 s 10, Sch 1 para 5.

739A. Entitlement to pensions: deaconesses and lay workers.

The Church Commissioners have power to make payments out of their general fund¹ to the Church of England Pensions Board for the purposes of providing or augmenting (i) pensions for deaconesses² and lay workers³ and their dependants⁴, widows and widowers or surviving civil partners, being pensions paid or payable under the past service scheme, or in respect of service which ended before 1 December 1988; and (ii) any lump sums paid or payable under that scheme to deaconesses and lay workers on their retirement from service⁵. Any such payment may be made on such terms and subject to such conditions, if any, as may be agreed between the Church Commissioners and the Board⁶.

Any sums paid to the Board in exercise of this power must be applied by the Board in such manner as it, in consultation with the Church Commissioners, thinks fit to implement the above purposes⁷. In addition, it may pay part or all of such sum into the Church Workers Pension Fund⁸ or any other fund established for the above purposes or any of them⁹.

2 See PARA 759 et seq.

3 A lay worker means a person who has been admitted by a bishop as a lay worker of the Church of England and who has been authorised by a bishop, whether by licence or otherwise, to serve as such a worker in a diocese: Deaconesses and Lay Workers (Pensions) Measure 1980 s 1(3). See further PARA 766 et seq. A 'licensed lay worker' means a person who has been admitted by a bishop as a lay worker, and authorised by a bishop by licence to serve as such a worker. It includes lay workers admitted and authorised other than by licence, being members of the Church Workers Pension Fund on 1 December 1988: Clergy Pensions Measure 1961 s 46(1); Church of England (Pensions) Measure 1988 Sch 2 para 20(b).

4 A dependant, in relation to a deaconess or lay worker, means such person as the Board may consider to have been wholly or partly dependent financially on the deaconess or lay worker at the time of his or her death: 1980 Measure s 1(3).

741. Conditions of entitlement generally.

Clergy who have served for a qualifying period of service¹ are entitled to a pension on retirement at the retiring age² or over, or upon retirement due to incapacity³, the rate of pension depending on age at retirement and the length of pensionable service⁴.

The Church of England Pensions Board may enter into an agreement with any clergyman under which any service⁵ performed by him as a clergyman may be treated as pensionable service and any such agreement may, if the board thinks fit, require the clergyman concerned to pay to the Church commissioners such sum or sums of money as the board may determine, having regard to the nature of the service performed and the cost of treating that service as pensionable service⁶. The board may also enter into reciprocal arrangements with any church or organised body of clergy recognised by the Archbishop of Canterbury for this purpose⁷ or with certain other pension authorities⁸.

Application for a pension to which a clergyman is entitled must be made in such manner as the board may determine, and where a clergyman is incapacitated from making such an application himself the board may authorise some other person to make an application on his behalf⁹.

741 Conditions of entitlement generally

TEXT--Where the service of a clerk becomes contracted-out employment by reference to the clergy pensions scheme (in accordance with Social Security Pensions Act 1975 Pt III (ss 26-52)), the rate of entitlement to a pension is governed by the 1988 Regulations, SI 1988/2256.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/4. MINISTRY/(1) CLERGY/(vi) Clergy Pensions/B. ENTITLEMENT TO CLERGY PENSIONS/742. Qualifying period of pensionable service.

742. Qualifying period of pensionable service.

Before becoming entitled to a pension, a clergyman must have completed a 'qualifying period of pensionable service'¹. This means a period of pensionable service of not less than five years or a succession of periods of such service, either with or without intervals², amounting in the aggregate to not less than five years³; although in relation to any individual clergyman, the Church of England Pensions Board, with the concurrence of the Church Commissioners, may in exceptional circumstances substitute such shorter period as it may determine⁴. To be 'pensionable service', the service must be whole time ecclesiastical service⁵ within the area to which the Clergy Pensions Measures 1961 to 1972 apply⁶ in connection with a diocese, cathedral or parish, or in connection with the collegiate churches of Westminster or Windsor⁷; or any service performed as a clergyman which is the subject of an agreement with the board⁸. Any period of service in respect of which a clergyman is a member of any pension or superannuation scheme other than that established by the Clergy Pensions Measure 1961 or one approved by the board or the commissioners for this purpose is not treated as pensionable service⁹, although if he ceases to be a member of that other scheme before being entitled to a pension under it the board may enter into an agreement with him under which that period of service may be treated as pensionable service¹⁰.

1 Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 1 (1).

2 Any interval not exceeding three months, or such longer interval as the Church of England Pensions Board may in exceptional circumstances allow, between two periods of pensionable service is ignored for purposes of determining whether the clergyman has performed a qualifying period or of determining the length of such period performed by him: ibid s 1 (5); Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Measure 1972, s 5 (1).

3 Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 1 (2); Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Regulations 1975, S.I. 1975 No. 136, reg. 2 (1). In the case of a person retiring or dying before 6th April 1975 this has effect as if 'ten years' were substituted in each place for 'five years': reg. 2 (2). Subject to the Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 1 (5) (see note 2 supra), where any period of service begins otherwise than on the first day of any month the period of service is treated as beginning on the first day of the following month; and where any such period ends otherwise than on the last day of the month, it is treated as ending on the last day of the immediately preceding month: s 1 (6).

4 Ibid s 1 (2) proviso; Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Regulations 1975, S.I. 1975 No. 136, reg. 2 (1).

5 'Ecclesiastical service' means service rendered under the direction of a diocesan bishop or carried on in furtherance of the spiritual or administrative work of the Church of England and recognised as such by a diocesan bishop: Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 46 (1).

6 The Clergy Pensions Measures 1961 to 1972 extend to the whole of the Province of Canterbury excluding the Channel Islands (although the Measure may be applied to them), the whole of the Province of York, including the Isle of Man, and the collegiate churches of Westminster and Windsor (which, as royal peculiars, are not within any province): Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 49. As to pensions schemes applying in the Channel Islands, see the Clergy Pensions (Channel Islands) Order 1963, S.I. 1963 No. 785; Clergy Pensions (Channel Islands) Order 1968, S.I. 1968 No. 1698 (which apply with modifications the Clergy Pensions Measure 1961 and the Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Measure 1967), made under the Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 49 proviso.

743. Retirement pensions.

The rate of pension of a clergyman¹ retiring at or above the retiring age², having performed a qualifying period of pensionable service³ of forty years or more⁴, depends on the highest rated office held at any time by the clergyman within the area to which the Clergy Pensions Measures 1961 to 1972 apply⁵. Where the qualifying period performed by such a clergyman is less than forty years, the rate of pension is calculated with reference to the number of years served within the area to which the Measures apply and the highest rated office held there at any time⁶.

The rates of pension may be increased at the direction of the Church Commissioners⁷.

1 A clergyman who, before attaining the retiring age, ceases to perform pensionable service otherwise than on the ground that he has become incapable of performing the duties of his office (see PARA 744 post), and who is not performing pensionable service on the date on which he attains that age, is deemed for the purpose of the Clergy Pensions Measures 1961 to 1972, any rules made thereunder and the Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Regulations 1975, S.I. 1975 No. 136, to have retired on that date: reg. 3.

2 'Retiring age' means the age of seventy years or such other age as the General Synod may by resolution from time to time determine: Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 46 (1); Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 2 (2).

3 For the meaning of 'qualified period of pensionable service', see PARA 742 ante.

4 For all clergy retiring or dying on or after 9th August 1972 who have performed a qualifying period of pensionable service of not less than thirty years, that qualifying period is deemed to be increased as follows: (1) in the case of a qualifying period of not less than thirty-seven years, by three years; (2) in the case of a qualifying period of less than thirty-seven years, but not less than thirty-three and one-half years, by two years; and (3) in the case of a qualifying period of less than thirty-three and one-half years, but not less than thirty years, by one year: Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Measure 1972, s 1 (1), (3).

5 Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 1 (1), Sch. 1, Part I para 1. The rate for each office is as follows: Archbishops of Canterbury and York, £2,000; Bishops of London, Durham and Winchester, £1,750; other diocesan bishops, £1,250; suffragan bishops, £900; deans and provosts of cathedral churches, and Deans of Westminster or Windsor, £700; archdeacons, £600; other clergymen, £400: Sch. 1, Part I para 1, Table. 744. Retirement on ground of incapacity.

If a clergyman retires before attaining the retiring age¹ on the ground that he has become incapable through infirmity of performing the duties of his office, and he has performed a qualifying period of pensionable service², he is entitled to a pension if the Church of England Pensions Board is satisfied, after considering medical evidence and such other evidence as in its opinion is necessary, that he is so incapable and that the infirmity is likely to be permanent³. The board's decision is subject to the condition that further medical evidence may subsequently be required by the board from time to time as the board directs⁴. If the clergyman fails to comply with the condition or the board is satisfied, after considering further medical evidence, that he has become capable of performing pensionable service, it may suspend or reduce the pension as it sees fit⁵.

A clergyman who is dissatisfied with a decision of the board may appeal to two or more referees appointed by the board as suitable persons to consider that appeal; and their decision is final⁶.

The rate of pension is calculated with reference to the highest rated office held at any time by the clergyman within the area to which the Clergy Pensions Measures 1961 to 1972 apply, with a percentage reduction for each year by which the clergyman falls short of the retiring age⁷.

1 For the meaning of 'retiring age', see PARA 743 note 2 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'qualifying period of pensionable service', see PARA 742 ante. For a clergyman retiring on or after 9th August 1972 who has performed not less than thirty years pensionable service, the qualifying period is deemed to be increased: see the Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Measure 1972, s 1, and PARA 743 note 4 ante.

745. Conditions for receipt of pensions.

If a clergyman in receipt of a pension under the Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, or any Measure repealed by it¹, accepts office as a diocesan bishop, suffragan bishop, archdeacon, dean, provost, residentiary canon or incumbent of a benefice², the Church of England Pensions Board must suspend his pension as long as he holds that office³. If a clergyman in receipt of such a pension but who has not attained the age of seventy performs, after his retirement, service (other than that specified above) which is pensionable service, the board may suspend or reduce the pension as it thinks fit⁴. Where the pension of a clergyman who has retired after performing less than forty years' pensionable service is so suspended or reduced, he must on his second retirement be paid at such rate as the board thinks fit, having regard to the additional period of pensionable service performed, not being a rate lower than that received by him before that suspension or reduction⁵. The rate of pension payable to any clergyman under the Clergy Pensions Measures 1961 to 1972 may not be increased by reason of the performance by him of pensionable service after retirement unless his pension has been suspended or reduced⁶.

748. Lump sum payments.

Subject to and in accordance with rules made by the Church of England Pensions Board the Church Commissioners may make lump sum payments to clergymen entitled to pensions under the Clergy Pensions Measures 1961 to 1972¹ in addition to those pensions².

Under the present rules³ such lump sum payments are payable in respect of clergymen who retired or retire⁴ on or after 22nd March 1967⁵. The maximum sum payable is £1,000 or such greater sum as may be recommended by the board and approved by the commissioners⁶. The amount of the lump sum payable to a clergyman retiring on or after attaining the retiring age⁷, having performed a qualifying period of pensionable service⁸ entitling him to the maximum rate of pension⁹, is the maximum lump sum payment¹⁰. In any other case the amount of the lump sum payable is such as bears the same proportion to the maximum lump sum payment as the pension to which he is entitled on retirement¹¹ bears to the pension to which he would have been entitled if he had retired at the retiring age, after having performed such a qualifying period of pensionable service entitling him to the maximum rate of pension¹². Where a clergyman is paid a pension on a second retirement¹³ the commissioners may make him a lump sum payment equal to the difference between the payment which would have been made if the retirement had been his first retirement and any lump sum payment or payments which has or have already been made to him or which would have been made to him if his previous retirements had taken place on or after 22nd March 1967¹⁴.

By notice in writing signed by him and delivered to the board, a clergyman may renounce the whole or any part of the lump sum payable to him¹⁵.

C. ADMINISTRATION

751. The Church of England Pensions Board.

The pensions authority is a body corporate called the Church of England Pensions Board, with perpetual succession and a common seal¹.

The board consists of a chairman, nominated by the General Synod, and between twenty-one and twenty-three members². These members consist of (1) sixteen members elected by the General Synod, of whom eight must be ordinarily resident in the Province of Canterbury and eight in the Province of York³; (2) five members appointed by the Church Commissioners, of whom one must be a diocesan bishop⁴; and (3) not more than two other members elected by the General Synod from among the beneficiaries of the Clergy Pensions Institution⁵. Members hold office for six years and casual vacancies are filled by nomination by the Church Commissioners or the Standing Committee of the General Synod as the case may be⁶.

751 The Church of England Pensions Board

TEXT AND NOTES 1-5--1961 Measure s 21(3) substituted: Pensions Measure 1997 s 8. Now the Board consists of 20 members (of whom eight must be representative of the members of the pension schemes administered by the Board) chosen in such manner, whether by election or by appointment, as may be prescribed by regulations made under the Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Measure 1972 s 6. See further the Church of England Pensions Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1929, regs 3 to 8. The chairman of the Board is appointed by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, acting jointly, with the approval of the General Synod: reg 3. In addition to the eight members representative of the pensions schemes (as to whom see reg 4), six must be elected by the House of Laity, one appointed by the two archbishops acting jointly, one appointed by the two archbishops acting jointly after consulting representatives of dioceses, and one appointed by the Church Commissioners: reg 5. As to terms of office and casual vacancies see regs 6, 7. As to election, eligibility for re-election, and disqualification see reg 8.

A person may not be a member (or stand for membership) of more than one of the following bodies at any one time, namely: the Archbishops' Council (see PARA 427A), the Church Commissioners, the Pensions Board, the Appointments Committee (see PARA 383A) or the Business Committee (see PARA 383B): National Institutions Measure 1998 s 11.

NOTE 6--1961 Measure s 21(4)-(8) repealed: Pensions Measure 1997 s 10, Sch 2 Pt I. A quorum is now six, including at least two of the persons representing the pension schemes administered by the board: 1961 Measure s 21(10), amended by Pensions Measure 1997 s 10, Sch 1 para 6.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/4. MINISTRY/(1) CLERGY/(vi) Clergy Pensions/C. ADMINISTRATION/752. Board's powers and duties.

752. Board's powers and duties.

The Church of England Pensions Board has the duty of controlling and administering the system of pensions¹. The power and obligation to make payments under the scheme is vested in the Church Commissioners, whose general fund is the source of all such payments². The commissioners have power to give directions to the board to increase the rates of pensions³, as to the general exercise of its functions⁴ and its employment of officers and servants⁵; and they must defray the board's working expenses (including the remuneration of its staff) out of the commissioners' general fund⁶.

The board has various powers, for example, the power to appoint servants and officers⁷, to appoint committees⁸, to delegate its functions to local committees⁹, to invest money and to acquire real and personal property¹⁰, which are ancillary to its principal functions¹¹. The board is a housing association¹², a trust corporation¹³ with extensive powers to act as trustee of charitable trusts for the benefit of retired clergymen, church workers and their widows and dependants¹⁴; and has power, both by itself and jointly with other persons, to provide, maintain and manage, homes for the residence of retired clergymen and church workers and their wives, widows and dependants¹⁵.

The board may also make loans to retired clergymen and church workers or their wives or widows to assist them to purchase, build, rebuild or improve dwelling houses, including flats, in which they reside or are to reside¹⁶.

The board has power to enter into reciprocal arrangements, on such terms as the Church Commissioners may approve, with the pensions authority of any church or organised body of clergy recognised by the Archbishop of Canterbury for this purpose¹⁷, and with the pensions authority controlling any scheme providing for servants of the Crown or of any public or local body, board or authority¹⁸. The board also has power regarding the application of any surplus in the Clergy (Widows and Dependants) Pension Fund¹⁹ as well as in relation to the Clergy Pensions Augmentation Fund²⁰, the Clergy (Widows and Dependants) Pensions Augmentation Fund²¹ and a Church Workers Pensions Augmentation Fund²².

752 Board's powers and duties

TEXT AND NOTES--The Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Regulations 1988, SI 1988/2239 amend 1961 Measure by inserting new s 38A, subsequently amended by the Pensions Measure 1997 s 10, Sch 1 para 11 and SI 2005/3325. The Board now has power to establish and administer, or participate in the administration of, an additional pensions scheme for the benefit of clerks, their widows and dependants and may, in conjunction with the exercise of these powers, acquire and hold property, whether real or personal, either alone or jointly with others. The scheme established will be supplementary to the past service scheme and the funded scheme (as to which see PARA 738A.1).

The Board is responsible for the administration of the General Purposes Fund: see the Church of England (Pensions) Measure 2003 ss 1, 2; and PARA 752A.

TEXT AND NOTE 1--Replaced. The function of the board is now expressed as the administration of the past service scheme and the funded scheme: 1961 Measure s 24, amended by the Pensions Measure s 10, Sch 1 para 8.

TEXT AND NOTE 2--Commissioners have power to make, out of general fund, payments of such amounts as are required by the additional scheme, established under the 1981 Regulations, to be paid by the employer of a clerk: see Clergy Pensions Measure 1961 s 38A(3); SI 1988/2239.

NOTE 2--1961 Measure s 17(1), (2) substituted: Pensions Measure 1997 s 10, Sch 1 para 5. Now commissioners may also make grants out of their general fund or loans of amounts expedient and, in the case of any loan, on such terms as they think fit, for any purpose connected with the payment of pensions to retired scheme members or their widows and dependants or with the powers of the Board under the 1961 Measure s 26 (see TEXT AND NOTES 15, 16): 1961 Measure s 17(3); Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Measure 1982 s 1; SI 2005/3325.

NOTE 3--1961 Measure s 10(2), 1967 Measure s 5 and 1972 Measure s 4(4) (wrongly cited as s 44) revoked: SI 1985/2081 (see PARA 754).

TEXT AND NOTE 4--After 'functions' add 'in relation to the past service scheme': 1961 Measure s 25, amended by Pensions Measure 1997 s 10, Sch 1 para 9.

TEXT AND NOTE 5--1961 Measure s 22(3) substituted: Pensions Measure 1997 s 10, Sch 1 para 7. The power to give directions under that provision is removed. Commissioners may now make payments to the Board out of their general fund in respect of administrative work in relation to the past service scheme (as to which see PARA 738A.1), and other matters in respect of which the commissioners have a financial interest.

TEXT AND NOTE 6--Salaries and working expenses must now be defrayed by the Board out of funds administered by it: 1961 Measure s 22(2), amended by Pensions Measure 1997 s 10, Sch 1 para 7.

NOTE 7--As to the transfer of officers from the Board see National Institutions Measure 1998 s 6, Sch 3.

TEXT AND NOTES 8, 9--1961 Measure s 23 (power to appoint and delegate to committees) repealed: Pensions Measure 1997 s 10, Sch 2 Pt I.

TEXT AND NOTE 10--1961 Measure s 32 amended: 1988 Measure s 14. As to investment of money comprised in certain pension funds, see 1961 Measure s 32A; 1982 Measure s 5.

NOTE 11--1961 Measure s 27 amended: 1988 Measure s 13; SI 2005/3325; see PARA 758.

NOTE 12--For meaning of 'housing association', see now Housing Associations Act 1985 s 1(1). 1961 Measure s 29 consequently amended: 1988 Measure Sch 2 para 12.

TEXT AND NOTE 14--References to widows now references to widows and widowers: 1988 Measure Sch 2 para 13.

1961 Measure s 30 further amended so as to include reference to surviving civil partners: SI 2005/3325.

TEXT AND NOTE 15--Reference to clerks and churchworkers now a reference to clerks, deaconesses and licensed lay workers; reference to wives and widows now a reference to spouses, former spouses, widows and widowers: 1961 Measure s 26(1)(a), (b); Church of England (Pensions) Measure 1988 s 12(1)(a); Church of England (Pensions) Measure 2003 s 3(a), (b). 1961 Measure s 26(1)(a), (b) further amended so as to include references to civil partners, former civil partners and surviving civil partners: SI 2005/3325. As to the application of the 1961 Measure s 26 to clerks in holy orders, deaconesses and licensed lay workers who have resigned from ecclesiastical service because of their opposition to women priests, see the Ordination of Women (Financial Provisions) Measure 1993 s 2 (see PARA 657C.1).

TEXT AND NOTE 16--Repealed: Church of England (Pensions) Measure 1988 s 12(1)(b). Corresponding provisions contained in 1961 Measure s 26(3A); 1982 Measure s 2(1); Deacons (Ordination of Women) Measure 1986 Schedule para 3 and the 1988 Measure s 12(2), which also enable loans to be made for this purpose to clergymen and church workers who have attained retiring age or a specified age below retiring age, or their spouses. 1961 Measure s 26(3A) amended so as to include references to civil partners, former civil partners and surviving civil partners: SI 2005/3325. See also the Church of England (Pensions) Measure 2003 s 1(3) (see PARA 752A NOTE 5).

TEXT AND NOTES 17-22--See 1988 Regulations, SI 1988/2256, regs 19-22 which enable clergy pensions scheme to be contracted-out under Social Security Pensions Act 1975 Pt III (ss 26-52).

NOTE 19--1961 Measure s 18(3) now as amended by Church of England (Legal Aid and Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1988 s 12. 1961 Measure s 18(2) amended and s 18(3) further amended: 1988 Measure Sch 2 para 7.

TEXT AND NOTES 20-22--1961 Measure ss 19, 20, 28 are repealed, and the Augmentation Funds referred to are now dissolved: see the Church of England (Pensions) Measure 2003 ss 2, 6, Schedule. The purposes for which they were established are now subsumed in those of the General Purposes Fund: see PARA 752A.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/4. MINISTRY/(1) CLERGY/(vi) Clergy Pensions/C. ADMINISTRATION/752A. General purposes fund.

752A. General purposes fund.

The Church of England Pensions Board has the function of administering the General Purposes Fund¹. The Board must pay into that fund any testamentary or other gifts made to the board² (1) for the relief of poverty in the case of any retired clerk or church worker³; (2) for the relief of poverty in the case of any widow, widower, former spouse, surviving civil partner or former civil partner, child or dependant of a deceased clerk or church worker⁴; (3) for the provision⁵, maintenance or management of homes of residence for retired clerks and church workers and their spouses or former spouses or civil partners or former civil partners⁶; and (4) for the provision, maintenance or management of homes of residence for the widows, widowers, former spouses, surviving civil partners, former civil partners and dependants of deceased clerks or church workers⁷. The Board may at its discretion⁸ apply the fund or part of it for any of the purposes mentioned above, and may borrow money on the security of the fund's assets to defray expenditure incurred for any of those purposes⁹.

The Board must pay into a separate account of the General Purposes Fund any sums received from a diocese for the relief of poverty in the case of any widow, widower, former spouse, surviving civil partner, former civil partner or dependant of a deceased clerk¹⁰ and must hold such sums on behalf of the diocese by which they were paid and add interest to those sums¹¹. The Board must pay out of this separate account any payments required by the diocese to be made for those purposes¹².

1 Church of England (Pensions) Measure 2003 s 1(1). The fund was established by resolution of the Board on 17 September 1975.

The Clergy Pensions Augmentation Fund, the Clergy (Widows and Dependants) Pensions Augmentation Fund and the Church Workers Pensions Augmentation Fund are dissolved, and sums held in those funds are now transferred to the General Purposes Fund: Church of England (Pensions) Measure 2003 s 2(1). Any testamentary or other sums purporting to be donated to the dissolved funds are now deemed to be donated to the General Purposes Fund: s 2(2).

The purposes for which the fund is held under the 2003 Measure s 1(2) (see TEXT AND NOTES 2-7), replace the purposes for which it was held before that provision came into force: s 1(5).

753. Determination of questions.

In connection with clergy pensions questions may arise as to:

- 10 (1) whether any clergyman is performing or has performed pensionable service¹;
- 11 (2) the length of the qualifying period of pensionable service performed by any clergyman or the date on which it terminated²;
- 12 (3) whether a clergyman satisfies any other conditions laid down for the receipt of a pension or the terms and conditions upon which his pension is granted or agreed to be paid³;
- 13 (4) whether a clergyman has retired or on what day he retired⁴;
- 14 (5) the rate at which a pension is to be paid and whether any deductions are to be made from it in respect of arrears of contributions⁵;
- 15 (6) the right of a clergyman to a repayment of any contributions paid by him⁶; or
- 16 (7) the rights of a widow, child or dependant of a clergyman or of the clergyman himself (including the question whether any person is a dependant of a clergyman⁷).

If any such question arises it is to be decided by the Church of England Pensions Board at a meeting specially convened for that purpose⁸. Any person aggrieved by the board's decision may appeal from that decision to the High Court and the decision of that court is final⁹. The appeal is heard by a single judge of the Chancery Division¹⁰, and is brought by originating motion, notice of which must be served on the board, and the appeal must be entered, within twenty-eight days after the date of the board's decision¹¹.

D. WIDOWS' AND DEPENDANTS' PENSIONS

754. Pensions for clergy widows.

Subject to what follows, where a clergyman who has performed a qualifying period of pensionable service¹ dies, on or after 1st April 1961², leaving a widow³ she is entitled to receive a pension from the Church of England Pensions Board for the remainder of her life⁴. If it thinks fit the board may discontinue the payment of a pension to a widow if she re-marries and may if it thinks fit resume the payment to a widow of a pension terminated at any time on her remarriage⁵.

If the clergyman was in receipt of a pension at the time of his death⁶ the widow's pension is equal to one third of that pension⁷. If he was not, it is equal to one-third of the pension to which he would have been entitled in respect of the period of pensionable service (together with any appropriate increase⁸) performed by him if he had retired at the retiring age⁹ after having performed the same period of pensionable service¹⁰.

The Church Commissioners may, at the board's request authorise the board to augment, by such sum and during such period as may be specified, the pension payable to any individual widow¹¹. Where a clergyman has surrendered to the board a part of his right to a pension¹² he is deemed, for the purposes of a pension for his widow, to have received the pension he would have received if he had not entered into that agreement¹³. Where a clergyman's pension has been suspended¹⁴ and the clergyman dies during its suspension leaving a widow entitled to a pension, it is payable at the rate of one-third of the pension received by him before the suspension¹⁵ or at the rate of one-third of the pension to which he would have been entitled in respect of the period of pensionable service performed by him if he had retired at the retiring age after having performed the same period of pensionable service¹⁶, whichever is the greater¹⁷.

The commissioners must pay the board out of their general fund such sum as the board requires for payments to be made to widows¹⁸.

1 For the meaning of 'qualifying period of pensionable service', see PARA 742 ante. In determining this question no account is to be taken of any period of service performed before the clergyman received a payment, if any, under the Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 7 (2), which has not been repaid: s 10 (4). In the case of a widow whose husband died on or after 9th August 1972 the Church of England Pensions Board may if it thinks fit in exceptional circumstances grant a pension in respect of a period after 5th April 1975 to her notwithstanding that her husband had performed less than five years' pensionable service (or, if he died before 6th April 1975, less than ten years' pensionable service): s 10 (1B); Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Regulations 1975, S.I. 1975 No. 136, reg. 8 (2)-(4). For the position before 6th April 1975, see the Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 10 (1) proviso (i); Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Measure 1972, s 4 (1) (b) (revoked).

2 As to the payment of pensions to widows of clergymen who died before this date, see the Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 10 (2); Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Measure 1967, s 5 (b); Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Measure 1972, s 4 (4).

3 Prior to 9th August 1972 it was necessary that they had been married for not less than five years, that the widow was being maintained by the clergyman at the time of his death, and (in the case of a retired clergyman) that the marriage had taken place before his retirement: Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 10 (1); Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Measure 1972, s 41 (now amended by the Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Regulations 1975, reg. 8). No pension, however, may be paid in respect of a period before 6th April 1975: reg. 8 (4).

If a clergyman's marriage took place after his retirement from pensionable service and within six months of his death on or after 9th August 1972 his widow is not entitled to a pension under these provisions, but the board may if it thinks fit grant one to her in respect of a period after 5th April 1975: Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 10 (1A); Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Regulations 1975, reg. 8 (2)-(4). For the position before 6th April 1975, see the Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 10 (1) proviso (i); Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Measure 1972, s 4 (1) (b) (revoked).

The position of the divorced wife of a deceased clergyman is not clear. As to the attitude of the Church to divorce, see the resolutions of the Convocations of Canterbury and York dated June 1938, and Winnett, The Church and Divorce, A Factual Survey (Mowbrays 1968). See also Payne-Collins v Taylor Woodrow Construction Ltd [1975] 1 All ER 898, [1975] 2 WLR 386, and PARA 658 ante. However, if the divorced wife is a widow within the meaning of the Clergy Pensions Measure 1961 the position of a woman whom the clergyman had married after the divorce is in even greater doubt.

4 Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 10 (1); Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Measure 1972, s 4 (1) (a) (revoked); Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Regulations 1975, reg. 8 (2).

5 Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 10 (1c); Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Regulations 1975, reg. 8 (2). This applies in the case of a widow whose husband died on or after 9th August 1972 (reg. 8 (3)). but no pension may be paid in respect of a period before 6th April 1975 (reg. 8 (4)). For the position before 6th April 1975, see the Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 10 (1) proviso (ii); Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Measure 1972, s 4 (1) (b) (revoked).

6 Where directions given by virtue of the Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 2 (1), have effect as from a date before 9th August 1972 and a clergyman to whom they are or would have been applicable dies on or after that date and before receiving the increased pension he is deemed, for the purposes of calculating his widow's pension, to have been in receipt of that increased pension at the time of his death: Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Measure 1972, ss 2 (1), 4 (3).

7 Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 10 (1) (a).

8 See note 10 infra.

9 For the meaning of 'retiring age' see PARA 743 note 2 ante.

10 Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 10 (1) (b). The Church Commissioners have power to give directions to the board for increasing the rate of the pension payable: s 10 (2); Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Measure 1972, s 4 (4). In determining the rate of pension received by a clergyman no account is to be taken of any augmentation or supplementary pension under the Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 2, or the Clergy Pensions Measure 1948, s 8, or of any commutation: Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 10 (5).

TEXT AND NOTES 1-17--Replaced. See now Church of England Pensions Regulations 1988, SI 1988/2256, regs 14-18; SI 1992/1748, SI 1997/1929; Pensions Measure 1997 Sch 1 Pt II, which provide for non-contributory pensions for widows and children and reproduce the Church Commissioners' power to give directions to the board for increasing the rate of pension payable.

Where the service of a clerk becomes contracted-out employment by reference to the clergy pensions scheme (in accordance with Social Security Pensions Act 1975 Pt III (ss 26-52)), the rate of entitlement to a widow's pension is governed by the Church of England Pensions Regulations 1988, SI 1988/2256, regs 19-22; SI 1992/1748.

A clerk is no longer liable to pay contributions under any agreement under the 1961 Measure s 15: Church of England (Pensions) Measure 1988 s 9.

755. Clergy contributory pensions.

Any clergyman ordained after 31st December 1947¹ and before 22nd March 1967² who is performing pensionable service³ must, unless he gives written notice to the Church of England Pensions Board⁴, pay contributions⁵ to the board⁶. The liability ceases with the half yearly payment next before the contributor attains the age of seventy years or receives a pension by reason of infirmity or ceases to perform pensionable service or dies, whichever first happens⁷.

On the death of a clergyman⁸ who has paid such contributions from the date on which he first becomes subject to these provisions to his attainment of the age of seventy years, his receiving a pension by reason of infirmity or his death, whichever first occurs, his widow (so long as she so remains⁹) is to be paid a pension of £50 per annum as from his death¹⁰, and a pension of £25 per annum is payable as from his death for the benefit of each of his children¹¹ until that child attains the age of eighteen years¹².

1 A clergyman ordained before this date, but after 1st July 1936, but who has paid contributions under the Clergy Pensions Measure 1948, Part II (ss. 10-16 (repealed)), may continue or resume those contributions: Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 14 (1). As to the payment of benefits accruing under these provisions, see s 14 (2), (3). As to the repayment of contributions, see s 14 (4). If a contributor is more than twelve months in arrear he is deemed to have given such notice; but the board may direct that this provision shall have no effect as respects the period before the direction: s 1 (3). In either case, provision is made as to benefits already accrued: s 1 (4).

5 As to the rates of contribution and the dates for payment, see the Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 11 (1), (2), (5). Contributions may be deducted from the clergyman's stipend: s 43.

TEXT AND NOTES--The Clergy Pensions Measure 1961 ss 11-13 which provide for the payment of contributions towards pensions for widows and children are repealed: Church of England (Pensions) Measure 1988 s 7. A clerk is no longer liable to make contributions. Any benefits which would have been payable on the clerk's death are now payable at a reduced rate to be certified by an actuary. The Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Measure 1967 s 1 is also repealed.

No contribution paid by a clerk under the 1961 Measure s 11 or 14 may be repaid: 1988 Measure s 10(2).

Payments to a clerk who has ceased to make contributions are not affected.

NOTE 1--Clergy Pensions Measure 1961 s 14 repealed: 1988 Measure s 8. A clerk shall make no further contribution and, on his death, benefits will be paid at a reduced rate.

756. Voluntary clergy pensions.

The Church of England Pensions Board may enter into an agreement with any clergyman for the payment, as from his death, of a pension to his widow or to such of his dependants¹ as may be specified in the agreement². The consideration for any such agreement must be actuarially adequate and may consist of either periodical or other contributions in money³ or of a surrender to the board⁴ of any part of his rights to a pension or a return of contributions⁵. However: (1) he may not surrender such a proportion, or a prospective right to such a proportion, of the pension as would, in the board's opinion, if surrendered, leave him without adequate provisions for his needs, and in no case may he surrender more than one-half of a pension⁶; and (2) no prospective right to a pension may be surrendered except in contemplation of his retirement and, if his retirement does not take place within three months from the surrender, the surrender is void⁷.

Any pension payable by virtue of such an agreement is payable in addition to and not in substitution for any pension or sum payable to the widow or dependant under any other provision of the Clergy Pensions Measures 1961 to 1972⁸.

1 'Dependant' has such meaning as the board may determine for the purposes of each case, having regard to all the circumstances: Clergy Pensions Measure 1961, s 46 (1).

The reference to widows is now a reference to widows and widowers, and limited to pensions paid or payable under the past service scheme (as to which see PARA 738A.1), or in respect of service which ended before 1 December 1988.

TEXT AND NOTE 2--Reference to church workers or the widows or dependants now includes a reference to widowers. A deaconess or licensed lay worker who has performed pensionable service for the purposes of the 1961 Measure is not eligible to join a scheme administered under the 1961 Measure s 27(2)(3)(4); 1988 Measure s 13, except at the discretion of the board. The board may grant a clerk permission to join a scheme under s 27. A person who is a member of that scheme shall be disqualified if that person subsequently performs service which is pensionable for the purposes of the 1961 Measure.

1961 Measure s 27(1) amended so as to include reference to surviving civil partners: SI 2005/3325.

NOTE 4--References to widows are now references to widows and widowers. The references to deceased clerks are now references to deceased clerks, deaconesses or licensed lay workers: 1988 Measure Sch 2 para 17.

(2) DEACONESSES

759. The order of deaconesses.

The order of deaconesses is the one order of ministry in the Church of England to which women are admitted by prayer and the laying on of hands by the bishop¹. A deaconess may accept membership of any lay assembly of the Church of England². It belongs to the office of a deaconess, in the place where she is licensed to serve³ and under the direction of the minister, to lead the people in public worship, to exercise pastoral care, to instruct the people in the Christian faith and to prepare them for the reception of the sacraments⁴.

A deaconess may be authorised by the bishop and invited by the minister⁵ to say or sing Morning or Evening Prayer, save for the absolution⁶; she may be authorised by the bishop⁷ and invited by the minister⁸ to distribute the holy sacrament of the Lord's Supper to the people and to read the epistle and Gospel at the celebration of the Holy Communion⁹. She may also be authorised by the bishop at the invitation of the minister of a parish or an extra-parochial minister¹⁰ to preach at divine service, to church women¹¹, to baptise in the absence of the minister¹¹, with the goodwill of the persons responsible to bury the dead or read the burial service before, at or after a cremation¹¹, and to publish banns of marriage at Morning and Evening Prayer on occasions when a lay person is permitted by the statute law to do so, and in accordance with the requirements of that law¹².

Any deaconess licensed to the parish is a member of the parochial church council¹³.

760. Admission to order of deaconesses.

Every woman to be admitted to the order of deaconesses must be at least twenty-five years of age, baptised and confirmed; and must satisfy the bishop that she is a regular communicant of the Church of England¹. She must present to the bishop of the diocese:

(1) a certificate signed by a person approved by the bishop that she has been nominated to exercise the office of deaconess within his diocese, either in a cure of souls or in a wider area, or is a teacher or lecturer in a school or college situated within that diocese, or is living under vows in the house of a religious order or community there situated²;

(2) her birth certificate³;

(3) a certificate or other evidence of her baptism and confirmation⁴;

(4) testimonials of her good life, her conformity to the doctrine, discipline and worship of the Church of England, and of her general fitness for the office of deaconess, from two beneficed priests, a deaconess holding a bishop's licence and the head of the house, hostel or college in which she has been trained for the office of deaconess⁵; and

(5) a certificate signed by the officiating minister and one churchwarden of the parish or ecclesiastical district in which she usually resides, or in which her name is on the electoral roll, that notice in a form approved by the ordinary was given in the church of that parish or district in the time of divine service on some Sunday at least a month before the day appointed for her admission to the order of deaconesses, of her intention of offering herself as a candidate for the order, and that no cause or impediment why she should not be admitted to the order was alleged by any person present⁶.

No woman may be admitted to the order unless she is found on examination, held by the bishop or by competent persons appointed by him for the purpose, to possess a sufficient knowledge of Holy Scripture and of the doctrine, discipline and worship of the Church of England⁷. Nor may any woman be admitted to the order who is suffering, or who has suffered, from any physical or mental infirmity which, in the bishop's opinion, will prevent her from exercising the office of deaconess⁸.

Admission, which is by prayer and the laying on of hands by the bishop⁹, must be according to the duly authorised¹⁰ form of service¹¹. Before her admission the deaconess must, in the presence of the bishop by whom she is to be admitted, or the commissary of such bishop, make and subscribe a declaration of assent, an oath of canonical obedience and a promise to use only the forms of service authorised or allowed by canon¹².

The names of all persons admitted to the order must be entered in a register kept by the diocesan bishop for that purpose¹³.

Any lay person, whether man or woman, who is baptised and confirmed and who satisfies the bishop that he or she is a regular communicant of the Church of England may be admitted by the bishop of the diocese to the office of reader¹ in the church and licensed by him to perform any duty or duties which may lawfully be performed by a reader according to the relevant provisions of the canons or which from time to time be so determined by Act of Synod². A pastoral scheme may provide for the employment of readers in any benefice³.

1 Before the Reformation a reader or 'lector' belonged to one of the five minor orders below that of deacon, but at the Reformation the office in England was allowed to lapse. Apart from a brief revival in the reign of Elizabeth I, the office in its present form dates from 1866, when it was re-established by resolution of the bishops. As to the re-establishment, see the Report of the Joint Committee of Convocations (1904), re-published under the title Readers and Sub-deacons (Central Readers Board 1962). The term 'lay reader', sometimes applied to a reader, is not correct. A reader was held not entitled to exemption from military service as 'a regular minister of a religious denomination' under the Military Service Act 1916 (repealed): Simmonds v Elliott [1917] 2 KB 894, DC.

A candidate for the office of reader in a parish or district must be nominated to the bishop by the minister of that parish or district, and a candidate for the office in a wider area must be nominated by one of the rural deans or archdeacons, after consultation with the minister of his parish or district¹. The nominator must satisfy the bishop that the candidate is of good life, sound in faith, a regular communicant and well fitted for the work of reader, and must provide all such other information about the candidate and the duties which it is desired that he should perform as the bishop may require². No person may be admitted to the office unless it is found on examination held by the bishop, or competent persons appointed by him for the purpose, that he possesses a sufficient knowledge of Holy Scripture and of the doctrine and worship of the Church of England as set forth in the Book of Common Prayer, that he is able to read the services of the Church plainly, distinctly, audibly and reverently and that he is capable both of teaching and preaching³.

Admission is by delivery of the New Testament to the candidate by the bishop, without the imposition of hands⁴. Before being admitted the candidate must, in the presence of the bishop by whom he is to be so admitted or his commissary, make and subscribe a declaration of assent, a promise of canonical obedience and a promise to use only the forms of service authorised or allowed by canon⁵.

The bishop must give to the newly admitted reader a certificate of his admission to the office⁶. On the reader's moving on to another diocese the admission is not to be repeated⁶. TEXT AND NOTES--Canon E7 now as substituted by Canon promulgated 25 February 1976, as follows: a lay person (man or woman) who is baptised, has had proper training and possesses other necessary qualifications may be admitted by the bishop as a lay worker to perform the following duties if authorised by licence or permission by the bishop¹: (1) under the minister's direction, to lead public worship, exercise pastoral care, evangelise, instruct people in the faith and prepare them to receive the sacraments²; (2) to say or sing Morning or Evening Prayer (save for the Absolution)³; (3) to distribute Communion and read the Epistle and Gospel⁴; (4) to preach⁵; (5) to church women⁶; (6) to bury the dead or read the burial service at a cremation, with the goodwill of the persons responsible⁷; (7) to publish banns of marriage⁸. A man or woman admitted to the office of evangelist is thereby admitted as a lay worker⁹.

Other provisions govern the admission and licensing of lay workers¹⁰.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/5. BENEFICES/(1) NATURE OF BENEFICES/768. Classification of benefices.

5. BENEFICES

(1) NATURE OF BENEFICES

768. Classification of benefices.

'Benefice'¹ has in common practice been confined to (1) rectories (or parsonages) with cure of souls²; (2) vicarages³; (3) perpetual curacies⁴; (4) chapelries or districts belonging or reputed to belong, or annexed or reputed to be annexed, to any church or chapel, and districts formed for ecclesiastical purposes under statutory authority⁵; (5) independent churches or chapels without districts⁶; and (6) sinecure rectories⁷.

Formerly charges on a benefice to secure the payment of money or for any other purpose were unlawful and void by statute⁸, but there is apparently no law now prohibiting an incumbent from charging his benefice⁹. An incumbent has certain powers of mortgaging his benefice which are discussed subsequently¹⁰.

1 As to the tenure of benefices, see PARA 689 ante. The term 'benefice' is defined in similar although not identical terms in different Acts and Measures. In the Pluralities Acts 1838 and 1850 'benefice' means benefice with cure of souls, and no other, and thus comprehends all parishes, perpetual curacies (see note 4 infra), donatives, endowed public chapels, parochial chapelries and chapelries or districts belonging or annexed or reputed to belong or be annexed to any church or chapel: Pluralities Act 1838, s 124; Pluralities Act 1850, s 3. In the Benefices Act 1898, the Incumbents (Disability) Measure 1945 and the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 it includes all rectories with cure of souls, vicarages, perpetual curacies, endowed public chapels, parochial chapelries, chapelries or districts belonging or annexed or reputed to belong or be annexed to any church or chapel and districts formed for ecclesiastical purposes by virtue of statutory authority, including benefices in the patronage of the Crown or the Duchy of Cornwall, but does not extend to royal chapels, royal peculiars, cathedral or capitular preferments or dignities, chapels belonging to colleges, schools, hospitals, inns of court, asylums or public or charitable institutions or private chapels: Benefices Act 1898, s 13 (1); Incumbents (Disability) Measure 1945, s 1 (1); Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 66 (1). In the Land Registration Act 1925 'benefice' includes all rectories with cure of souls, vicarages, perpetual curacies (see note 4 infra), donatives, endowed public chapels, parochial chapelries and chapelries or districts belonging or annexed to or reputed to belong or be annexed to any church or chapel: s 99 (4). In the Interpretation Measure 1925 and every Measure passed after 28th May 1925, unless the contrary appears, it means a benefice with cure of souls and no other, and comprehends all rectories and vicarages with cure of souls, perpetual curacies (see note 4 infra) and endowed public chapels, parochial chapelries and chapelries or districts belonging or annexed or reputed to belong or be annexed to any church or chapel: s 3. In the Pastoral Measure 1968 'benefice' means the office of rector or vicar of a parish or parishes with cure of souls but not including (except in s 88) the office of vicar in a team ministry, and 'the area of a benefice' means the parish or parishes belonging to a benefice: s 89 (1). Any question whether an ecclesiastical office is a benefice or whether any area is within a benefice is to be decided by the Church Commissioners after consultation with the bishop, and that determination is conclusive for the purposes of that Measure: s 89 (2). In the Tithe Act 1936 and the Queen Anne's Bounty (Powers) Measures 1937 and 1939 'benefice' means all rectories with cure of souls, vicarages, perpetual curacies (see note 4 infra), endowed public chapels, parochial chapelries, chapelries or districts belonging or annexed or reputed to belong or be annexed to any church or chapel and districts formed for ecclesiastical purposes by virtue of statutory authority, including benefices in the patronage of the Crown or the Duchy of Cornwall: Tithe Act 1936, s 47 (1); Queen Anne's Bounty (Powers) Measure 1937, s 1 (ii); Queen Anne's Bounty (Powers) Measure 1939, s 7.

'Benefice' was originally a lay term and was applied to grants of land made to soldiers or feudal vassals: Watson, Clergyman's Law (4th Edn) 1. In its wider sense it includes cathedral and capitular and other ecclesiastical dignities and preferments (3 Co Inst 155), as to which see PARA 636 et seq ante. An office is not rendered a spiritual or ecclesiastical benefice by the mere fact of its being tenable only by a person in holy orders. It is a spiritual or lay office according to the object for which it was established: A-G v St Cross Hospital (1853) 17 Beav 435 at 465, per Sir John Romilly.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/5. BENEFICES/(1) NATURE OF BENEFICES/769. Rectories.

769. Rectories.

Where the whole of the tithe and glebe land of a parish has been always attached to the benefice for the maintenance of the minister, the benefice is a rectory or parsonage with cure (or care) of souls¹. Other benefices have at different times been made rectories by statute².

Where a pastoral scheme³ provides for the union of two or more benefices, one of which is a rectory, or for the dissolution of a rectory in any other way, the new benefice created by the union, or the benefice in whose area is situated the residence of the rector of the dissolved rectory, is a rectory⁴. Every other new benefice created by a pastoral scheme is a vicarage, except in the case of a benefice for which a team ministry is established⁵.

1 Spelman, De Non Temerandis Ecclesiis 1. A rectory must have some land belonging to it, but the church and churchyard are sufficient: Berry v Wheeler (1662) 1 Sid 91. In Boulton v Richards and Booth (1819) 6 Price 483 the existence of an ecclesiastical rectory was held to have been proved even though there was no church or burying ground, but only a room in a mansion house fitted up as a chapel in which divine service was performed and marriages and baptisms were solemnised. A rectory may be attached to part of a church: Fowke v Berington [1914] 2 Ch 308. As to the meaning of 'minister', see PARA 654 note 1 ante.

2 See eg the Parish of Manchester Division Act 1850, s 2, but cf. the Somersham Rectory Act 1882, by which a vicarage was created. A distinct and separate parish formed under the Church Building Act 1818 (repealed by the New Parishes Measure 1943, s 32, but with a saving by s 8 (now itself repealed by the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 95, Sch. 9) as to the status of certain ecclesiastical districts), was a rectory, vicarage or perpetual curacy, according to the nature of the parish out of which it was formed: Church Building Act 1818, s 19 (repealed). Where the owner of an impropriate rectory or the patron and incumbent of a sinecure rectory surrender the tithe, glebe and other rectorial emoluments, or the tithe with or without a portion of the glebe, to the incumbent of a vicarage in perpetuity, the Church Commissioners (as the successors of the Church Building Commissioners: see PARA 537 ante) are authorised and directed to convert the benefice into a rectory: Church Building Act 1822, s 13. Upon the suppression of the sinecure rectory of a parish under the Ecclesiastical Commissioners Act 1840, s 48, its emoluments could, by Order in Council ratifying the commissioners' scheme, be annexed to the vicarage or perpetual curacy of the parish, which then became a rectory: s 55.

3 As to pastoral schemes, see PARA 856 et seq post.

4 Pastoral Measure 1968, s 22 (1). See also note 5 infra.

5 Ibid s 22 (2). Any question arising under s 22 (1) or s 22 (2), as to whether a benefice is or was a rectory, is determined by the Church Commissioners: s 22 (3). The rector or vicar of a new benefice created by a pastoral scheme has the exclusive cure of souls in the area of the benefice, subject to the bishop's rights and, if a team or group ministry is created, to the rights and duties of the other members of the team or group, and accordingly has all the rights and duties appertaining to a benefice with cure of souls, and is a corporation sole: s 22 (4). As to team and group ministries, see PARA 870 et seq post.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/5. BENEFICES/(1) NATURE OF BENEFICES/770. Vicarages.

770. Vicarages.

Before the Reformation the rectory, with its emoluments¹, was frequently appropriated to or by a religious house or collegiate church or some other religious corporation which, as such, could not perform the personal services required in a cure of souls and consequently put in its place a vicar, hence the name². In such cases provision was made by ecclesiastical constitutions or ordinances and afterwards by statute³ for his endowment in perpetuity, and where the benefice thus remains annexed to the perpetual use of some spiritual corporation, either sole or aggregate, the benefice is said to be appropriated and the appropriators are recognised as the parson or rector of the parish.

Upon the dissolution of the monasteries many of these rectories came into the hands of laymen and are in that case strictly called impropriate⁴ and the lay rectors are said to be the impropriators, but, as before, a vicar was still required for the cure of souls⁵.

The rector, whether spiritual or lay, has the freehold of the church and churchyard⁶, but where the rector is not the incumbent he has no control over the cure of souls or the performance of ministerial duties in the parish⁷, and where there is a lay rector the vicar has the corporal possession of the church and churchyard for the use of the parishioners⁸.

The incumbent of every parish who is not a rector but is authorised to solemnise marriages, churchings and baptisms and who is entitled to receive for his own use the entire fees for the performance of those offices is, for the purpose of style and designation only, deemed and styled the vicar, and his benefice the vicarage, of the parish⁹. Since 1st April 1969 a person holding a perpetual curacy or any other benefice comprising a parish or parishes with full parochial status, not being a rectory or a vicarage, is in fact a vicar¹⁰.

771. Perpetual curacies.

Where the rectory of parish was appropriate or inappropriate and there had been no endowment of a vicarage, the benefice was a perpetual curacy¹ and the appropriator or impropriator was bound to nominate a curate to serve the parish, and had no power to remove him after he had been licensed by the bishop; the curate was therefore called 'a perpetual curate'². A perpetual curate had a freehold interest in the buildings and land belonging to the curacy, and held them to himself and his successor as a corporation sole³. He also had the rights of a minister in respect of the appointment of churchwardens⁴.

On 1st April 1969⁵ all perpetual curacies and any other benefices which immediately before that date comprised a parish or parishes with full parochial status, but were not vicarages or rectories, became vicarages, and a person holding a perpetual curacy or any such benefice immediately before that date became the vicar without any further process or form of law⁶.

¹ All churches, curacies or chapels augmented by Queen Anne's Bounty, now the general fund of the Church Commissioners (Church Commissioners Measure 1947, s 18 (2): see PARA 376 ante, 1234 post), become thereupon perpetual cures and benefices, and their ministers are corporations sole: Queen Anne's Bounty Act 1714, s 4; R v Bishop of Chester (1786) 1 Term Rep 396. In course of time, however, these functions were left to the vicar alone and the rectory became a sinecure². A pastoral scheme³ may provide for merging with a benefice any sinecure rectory or any office of minister of a church or chapel without cure of souls, and make further provision for any related matters⁴. In particular, provision may be made for the vesting of any such church or chapel and its use either as a parish church or chapel of ease, or for declaring it redundant⁵, or for the transfer, vesting or disposal of rights of patronage, endowments or other property relating or belonging to the rectory on such terms as the scheme may provide⁶.

(i) Advowsons and Rights of Patronage

A. NATURE OF RIGHTS

776. Advowsons.

The initial right of a clergyman to hold a church and benefice is acquired by presentation or, if the benefice is in the gift of the bishop of the diocese in which it is situate, by collation¹. The right to fill a church and benefice by presentation or collation is called an advowson or right of patronage, and the owner of it is called the patron².

An advowson is an incorporeal hereditament³. It will pass under a conveyance or demise of hereditaments⁴ or tenements⁵ or real estate⁶, but not under a conveyance or demise of land⁷. On the death of the owner it is an asset for payment of his debts⁸. An advowson may be either appendant or in gross⁹.

The advowson of a rectory is normally appendant to a manor, but may become appendant to some house or land formerly belonging to the manor by the alienation of that house or land with the advowson apart from the manor or the alienation of the rest of the manor apart from the house or land and the advowson¹⁰. The advowson of a vicarage is normally appendant to the rectory out of which it is extracted, but may be severed from it and may be appendant to a manor¹¹. An advowson appendant passes by assurance¹² or by devolution of law¹³ with the manor or other hereditament to which it is appendant¹⁴.

The statutory prohibition of a sale by public auction of any right of patronage¹⁵ does not apply where the advowson is sold in conjunction with a manor¹⁶; and the provision by which patronage rights are made incapable of sale after two vacancies in the benefice since 14th July 1924¹⁷ does not apply to sales of land to which rights of patronage are appendant¹⁸. The powers which are conferred upon parochial church councils of purchasing compulsorily certain rights of patronage¹⁹ do not extend to a right of patronage sold on the occasion of the last transfer in conjunction with any manor or with an estate of not less than 100 acres situate in the parish in which the benefice is situate, or in an adjoining parish, and belonging to the same owner as the right of patronage²⁰. If an advowson appendant is severed from the manor or other hereditament to which it is appendant, as is possible, it becomes an advowson in gross, if the severance is complete, and cannot again be made appendant²¹ except by operation of law²². Where a benefice is held in mediety²³ there may be an advowson of each mediety²⁴.

1 Co Litt 119b, where it is stated that every church is either presentative, collative, donative or elective. Before 1st January 1899 certain churches and benefices were donative and were filled by a donation to a clergyman by the patron without recourse to the bishop (Co Litt 344a; 2 Bl Com (14th Edn) 22, 23); but they have since all become presentative: Benefices Act 1898, s 12. 7 Westfaling v Westfaling (1746) 3 Atk 460 at 464. An advowson is not 'land' within the definition in the Limitation Act 1939, s 31 (1), which excludes incorporeal hereditaments (see LIMITATION PERIODS vol 68 (2008) PARA 1018, and Brooks v Muckleston [1909] 2 Ch 519 at 522, where the property was an advowson in gross), but is included in the definition of 'land' in the Law of Property Act 1925, s 205 (1) (ix). Whether it will pass under a conveyance or devise of hereditaments, tenements or real estate, situate and being in the parish or county in which the church and benefice are situate depends upon circumstances: Anon (1573) 3 Dyer 323 b; London v Chapter of Southwell Collegiate Church (1618) Hob 303; Kensey v Langham (1735) Cas temp Talb 143; Crompton v Jarratt (1885) 30 ChD 298, CA; Re Hodgson, Taylor v Hodgson [1898] 2 Ch 545. It will pass by the word 'church' (Ashegells and Dennis Case (1589) 1 Leon 191, per Walmesley J; Co Litt 17b), or by the word 'living', though this word may mean only a single presentation (Webb v Byng (1856) 2 K & J 669). However, it does not pass under the words 'commodities, emoluments, profits and advantages' (London v Chapter of Southwell Collegiate Church supra); and where a testator, who was both patron and incumbent of a benefice, devised the advowson of the benefice and other real estate upon trust to apply the rents as income according to his will, his heir-at-law was held entitled to present on the vacancy occasioned by his death (Martin v Martin (1842) 12 Sim 579). Where two benefices have been united the advowson of the united benefice does not pass by the name of the advowson of one of them (Robinson v Marquis of Bristol (1852) 11 CB 241, Ex Ch), but this is not so where there is only one patron (Lord Elcho v Andrews [1910] 1 Ch 706, CA).

An agreement for an exercise of the right of patronage of a benefice on the nomination of a particular person is invalid (Benefices Act 1898, s 1 (3)), but nothing in s 1 prevents the reservation or limitation in a family settlement of a life interest to the settlor: s 1 (7); Benefices Act 1898 (Amendment) Measure 1923, s 4. As to where the advowson is held in trust, see PARAS 780, 799, 800 post. As to the remedy of the person entitled to nominate in case of the non-presentation of his nominee, see PARAS 822, 823 post; but where, as in Queen Anne's Bounty Act 1714, s 6, the legal patron is mentioned as having the nomination and the right to nominate to the bishop, the words have the same meaning or the same effect as 'presentation' and 'present'. 779. Patronage of co-owners.

Generally, where the advowson or right of patronage of a benefice is vested in two or more persons¹ with the right to present jointly, the bishop may accept the presentation of one², but is not bound to act on a presentation in which they do not all concur; he may require a presentation by all and if they do not agree to make a joint presentation within the allowed period of six months he may collate by right of lapse³. If, however, he admits a clergyman to the benefice on a presentation in which they do not all concur, their common title is not disturbed⁴, for the advowson is one entire thing and is not in its nature severable⁵.

A right of patronage may be exercisable by several patrons in turn⁶, and the patronage of a new or consolidated benefice may be originally vested in several patrons in turn⁷. If one of several part-patrons presents out of his or her turn and the presentee is instituted or admitted the presentation is a usurpation, and the patron entitled to the turn loses it for that turn although the cycle of turns is not altered⁸. The turn is complete when the presentee is instituted or admitted, so, if he is rejected by the bishop or if his institution or admission is ipso facto void, the same part-patron may present again; but if he is afterwards deprived or his institution or admission is adjudged null and void by a declaratory sentence the turn is gone and the part-patron next in turn has the presentation⁹. The turn is lost if the part-patron allows his right of presentation to lapse to the bishop¹⁰ or if he allows his right to be usurped by a stranger and does not vindicate it by quare impedit¹¹; but where, on the appointment of the incumbent to a bishopric, the Queen presents by royal prerogative¹² this presentation does not count as a turn¹³.

783. Who is deemed to be patron.

Certain statutes require the consent or concurrence of the patron of a benefice, or notice to him, in matters affecting the benefice. The persons deemed to be the patron for these purposes are, in all cases, those persons who, if the benefice were at the time vacant, would be entitled to present or nominate to it¹.

Where it is necessary to determine who is the patron of a benefice for the purposes of the Pastoral Measure 1968 or any scheme or order made under it², and it appears to the Church Commissioners that it is doubtful which of two or more persons is the patron, the commissioners may determine the question themselves³. If they consider that it is not possible or reasonably practicable to find the person believed to be entitled to the patronage or to ascertain who is entitled, they may direct that the diocesan board of patronage be treated as the person entitled⁴. The provisions applying to a person who cannot be found apply also where the commissioners are satisfied that a person is outside the United Kingdom and has no representative in the country authorised to act for him⁵, and either that no address for writing to him is known or that a letter asking him to nominate a representative has been sent to him at his last known address without a reply being received within a reasonable period⁶. If the commissioners consider that the interest of any person in the patronage of a benefice is so small that it may be disregarded for the purposes of the provisions of a pastoral scheme dealing with rights of patronage⁷ they may determine his interest to be negligible⁸.

TEXT AND NOTES 3, 4--1968 Measure consolidated in Pastoral Measure 1983. 1968 Measure s 80(1) now 1983 Measure s 80(1). Where it is necessary for the purposes of the 1983 Measure or any scheme or order made under it to find the registered patron of a benefice and it appears to the commissioners that it is not possible or is not reasonably practicable to find that patron, the commissioners may direct that the diocesan board of patronage be treated as the registered patron: 1983 Measure s 80(1) (substituted by 1986 Measure Sch 4 para 22). Any such direction is conclusive: 1983 Measure s 80(1). As to the meaning of 'registered patron', see s 87(1); and PARA 872.

783A. Registration of rights of patronage.

1. Registration of patrons

The registrar of each diocese must compile and keep at the diocesan registry a register indicating in relation to every benefice¹ in the diocese the person who is the patron² of the benefice³. The form of the register must be in accordance with that prescribed by the Patronage (Procedure) Committee⁴ and must contain in relation to each benefice in the diocese the following particulars: (a) the name of the benefice; (b) the date of registration of the interest of each registered patron; (c) the name, style and address of each registered patron; (d) the interest of each registered patron; (e) the name, style and address of any transferee from a registered patron, the date of registration consequent on that transfer⁵ and the interest registered; (f) the name of the patron collating a priest or presenting a priest for institution, the name of that priest and the date of his collation or institution to the benefice⁶.

Except as otherwise provided by the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986⁷, no person is entitled to exercise any of the functions of a patron of a benefice unless he is registered as patron of that benefice⁸.

1 'Benefice' means the office of rector or vicar of a parish or parishes, with cure of souls, but not including the office of vicar in a team ministry or any office in a cathedral church: 1986 Measure s 39(1). 'Parish' means a parish constituted for ecclesiastical purposes (see PARAS 583, 586) and does not include a conventional district (see PARA 540): s 39(1). Where a pastoral scheme or pastoral order (see PARA 856 et seq) provides for the holding of benefices in plurality, any reference in the 1986 Measure to a benefice is construed as including a reference to benefices held in plurality: s 39(2).

As to provisions relating to Crown benefices, see s 35 (see PARA 783A.10).

2 'Patron', in relation to any benefice, means the person or persons entitled, other than by virtue of ibid s 16 (see PARA 818A.8), to present to that benefice on a vacancy, including (a) in any case where the right to present is vested in different persons jointly, every person whose concurrence would be required for the exercise of the joint right and (b) in any case where the patronage is vested in different persons by way of alternate or successive right of presentation, every person who would be entitled to present on the next or any subsequent turn: s 39(1).

3 Ibid s 1(1); Patronage (Benefices) Rules 1987, SI 1987/773, r 2. In the case of a right of patronage of a benefice which belongs to an office, the registrar's duty under the 1986 Measure s 1(1) is to register that office as a patron of that benefice: s 2.

The register must be open to inspection by the public at all reasonable times and any person may make searches in it and make extracts from it on payment of such fees as may be prescribed: s 1(5); 1987 Rules r 10(1). The registrar must, on request, supply a certified copy of an entry in the register on payment of such fee as may be prescribed: r 10(2). As to fees, see Ecclesiastical Judges and Legal Officers (Fees) Order 1998, SI 1998/1711.

4 As to the Patronage (Procedure) Committee, see 1986 Measure s 38 (see PARA 783A.11).

5 'Transfer' means a transfer inter vivos including a transfer by way of exchange, a transfer by operation of law, a transfer on the appointment of a new trustee and a transfer by the personal representatives of a deceased person: SI 1987/77 r 3(2).

6 Ibid r 3(1).

7 As to rights of patronage exercisable otherwise than by a registered patron, see the 1986 Measure s 5 (see PARA 783A.7).

8 Ibid s 1(2). The registration of any person or office as a patron of a benefice is conclusive evidence of the matters registered: ss 1(4), 2.

Detailed provisions relating to the registration of patrons and related matters are contained in Sch 1; see PARAS 783A.2-783A.5.

2. Application for registration

After 1 October 1987, any person to whom a right of patronage of a benefice is transferred must before the expiration of the period of 12 months beginning with the date on which the transfer takes effect apply to the registrar of the diocese to be registered as a patron of that benefice¹. On a transfer inter vivos the applicant must send to the registrar with the instrument of transfer any notice of consent required by the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986². On a transfer by personal representatives, the applicant must send to the registrar with the instrument of transfer an office copy of the grant of probate or of the letters of administration to the estate of the deceased patron³.

On being satisfied with an application made in accordance with the prescribed provisions⁴, the registrar must register a transferee as patron⁵. On the completion of a registration, the registrar must send the patron, without charge, a certified copy of the relevant entry in the register⁶.

Any person who claims in relation to any benefice (a) that he is entitled to be registered as a patron of that benefice in place of, or in addition to, any person who is so registered or (b) that any information registered as to the exercise of a right of presentation to that benefice is incorrect, may at any time apply to the registrar for the register to be rectified⁷.

3. Determination of disputes

Where the registrar decides that (a) any person (i) who is named in a list of patrons¹ or (ii) who has made an application² for registration, is not entitled to be registered as a patron³ of the benefice⁴ concerned or (b) information which any patron of a benefice wishes to be registered as to the exercise of his right to present to that benefice ought not to be registered or (c) any person who is registered as a patron of a benefice was not entitled to be so registered or (d) any information which is registered as to the exercise of a right to present to a benefice is incorrect, he must serve a notice on that person informing him of his decision and of the effect of the following provisions⁵. A person on whom a notice is served under the foregoing provision may, before the expiration of the period of 28 days beginning with the date of the notice, appeal against the registrar's decision by sending him a notice of appeal⁶. On receiving such a notice, the registrar must refer the appeal to the chancellor of the diocese, who must decide whether to uphold or dismiss the appeal and must inform the registrar and the appellant of his decision⁷.

Where a right of patronage of a benefice belongs to, or is claimed to belong to, an office, any notice required to be served under Sch 1 para 7 or information required to be given under Sch 1 para 9 must be served on or given to the person who then holds that office: Sch 1 para 16.

6 Ibid Sch 1 para 8. The Patronage (Appeals) Committee, as constituted by Sch 1 para 10, in accordance with its powers under Sch 1 para 11 has made rules regulating the procedure and practice on or in connection with proceedings on an appeal under Sch 1, including rules regulating matters relating to costs, fees and expenses in respect of any such proceedings: Patronage (Appeals) Rules 1988, SI 1988/1980.

7 1986 Measure Sch 1 para 9(1). See also NOTE 5. Any proceedings on an appeal to the chancellor of a diocese under Sch 1 para 9 must be held in public and any party to such proceedings is entitled to appear by counsel or a solicitor: Sch 1 para 9(2).

4. Registration

In the case of any disagreement as to the person entitled to be registered as patron¹ of a benefice² or as to the exercise of the right of presentation, the registrar as soon as practicable after he (a) has determined that a person is entitled to be registered as a patron of a benefice (and has determined the information, if any, to be registered as to the exercise of the right of presentation) and either the prescribed period³ has expired or an appeal against the registrar's determination has been dismissed or (b) has been informed of the decision⁴ of the chancellor of the diocese on an appeal⁵, must register that person as a patron of that benefice (together with any information to be registered as to the exercise of the right of presentation) and must inform him that he has done so⁶.

Unless the person entitled to the right of patronage in question has already been registered under the foregoing provision⁷, the registrar must at the end of the registration period⁸ register as a patron of the benefice specified in the appropriate notice⁹ the person to whom the notice was sent (and the information in that notice) and must inform him that he has done so¹⁰.

Any person who is a patron of two or more benefices which are for the time being held in plurality may be registered as a patron of those benefices while so held: Sch 1 para 15.

5. Notices to parishes

After the registrar has registered any person as a patron¹ of a benefice² he must within one month from the end of the registration period³ or, in the case of a right of patronage registered after the end of that period, as soon as practicable after the registration, send to the secretary of the parochial church council of the parish, or of each of the parishes, belonging to the benefice a notice⁴ in the prescribed form stating that that person has been registered and giving the name and address of that person and particulars of the benefice and of the information which has been registered in relation to it⁵.

5 Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 Sch 1 para 14.

6. Rectification of register

The registrar of a diocese may rectify an entry in the register of patrons¹ in any case (a) where all the persons interested agree to the rectification of the entry or (b) where the registrar decides that the entry should be rectified (i) because a person is, or is not, entitled to be registered as patron of a benefice or (ii) because information registered as to the exercise of a right of presentation to a benefice is incorrect, and, in either case, no appeal against the registrar's decision has been brought within the specified period² or the appeal has been dismissed or (c) where any rectification of the entry is required by reason of a decision³ of the chancellor of the diocese⁴. Where in the case of an entry in the register relating to any benefice (a) the entry has been adverse to the claim of any person for a period of more than 30 years or (b) if the period of 30 years from the end of the registration period⁵ has not expired, the benefice has been held adversely to the claim of any person for a period of more than 30 years, then no rectification of that entry may be made in favour of that person unless all the persons interested agree to that rectification⁶.

7. Rights of patronage exercisable otherwise than by registered patron

Where an office is registered¹ as a patron of a benefice, the person who is for the time being the holder of that office is entitled to discharge all the functions of a patron of that benefice².

Where a registered patron of a benefice dies, until the person to whom the right of patronage is to be transferred is registered as a patron of that benefice, the personal representatives of the deceased patron are entitled to discharge all the functions of a patron of that benefice³.

A registered patron of a benefice may by an instrument creating a power of attorney confer on the donee of the power authority to discharge on his behalf all the functions of a patron of that benefice, and where such a power is created the donee is entitled to discharge those functions until the power is revoked⁴.

Any person entitled to discharge any functions in relation to a benefice by virtue of these provisions is entitled to discharge those functions notwithstanding that he is not registered in the register of patrons in relation to that benefice⁵.

These provisions⁶ apply to a registered patron of a shared benefice⁷ other than Her Majesty or the possessor for the time being of the Duchy of Cornwall⁸.

1 'Registered' means registered under the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 in a register of patrons: s 39(1). See PARA 783A.1.

8. Appointment of patron of benefice which has no registered patron

Where at the expiration of the registration period¹ or at any subsequent time, no person is registered as the patron² of a benefice³, then unless in relation to that benefice (a) a prescribed notice⁴ has been served on any person by the registrar of the diocese in which the benefice is and either a specified period⁵ has not expired or an appeal⁶ has not been determined or (b) the right of presentation to the benefice is exercisable by the personal representatives of a deceased patron, the diocesan board of patronage⁷ for the diocese becomes the patron of that benefice, and the registrar of the diocese must register that board as patron⁸.

9. Crown benefices

Subject to the following exceptions, the foregoing provisions of the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 do not apply to any benefice the patronage or any share in the patronage of which is vested in or exercisable by Her Majesty, whether in right of Her Crown or Her Duchy of Lancaster or otherwise, or is vested in or exercisable by the possessor for the time being of the Duchy of Cornwall, whether Her Majesty or a Duke of Cornwall ('a Crown benefice')¹.

Where it appears to the registrar of a diocese that a benefice is a Crown benefice, he must, as soon as practicable after 1 October 1987, notify Her Majesty or the possessor for the time being of the Duchy of Cornwall that he proposes to register² Her Majesty or the possessor of the Duchy of Cornwall as patron of the benefice specified in the notice³.

Where in the case of a Crown benefice a share only in the patronage is vested in Her Majesty or the possessor for the time being of the Duchy of Cornwall ('a shared benefice'), the registration provisions⁴ apply for the purpose of enabling any patron other than Her Majesty or the possessor of the Duchy of Cornwall to be registered as a patron of that benefice⁵.

1 Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 s 35(1), which is expressed to be without prejudice to the application of ss 28 (see PARA 832), 31 (see PARA 826-830) to the Crown.

Without prejudice to the provisions of the Lord Chancellor (Tenure of Office and Discharge of Ecclesiastical Functions) Act 1974, the 1986 Measure s 35 applies to a benefice the patronage or a share of the patronage of which is vested in the Lord Chancellor as it applies to a Crown benefice; accordingly any reference in s 35 to Her Majesty must be construed, in relation to any benefice the patronage or a share of the patronage of which is vested in the Lord Chancellor, as including a reference to the Lord Chancellor: s 36.

10. Notices and other documents

All notices, agreements, approvals, consents and requests required or authorised by the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 to be served, sent, given or made must be in writing, and, subject to exception¹, all such notices and other matters required by the 1986 Measure to be prescribed must be in the form set out in the Patronage (Benefices) Rules 1987². Any other matters may be in such form as may be approved from time to time by the Patronage (Procedure) Committee³.

Any notice or other document required or authorised by the 1986 Measure to be served on or sent or given to any person may be served, sent or given by delivering it to him, or by leaving it at his proper address⁴, or by post⁵. Any notice or other document required or authorised to be served, sent or given to a corporation or to an unincorporated body having a secretary or clerk or to a firm, is duly served, sent or given if it is served on or sent or given to the secretary or clerk of the corporation or body or a partner of the firm⁶.

1 An exception is made for notices under the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 Sch 1 paras 7 and 8: see PARA 783A.3.

2 Ibid s 37(1); Patronage (Benefices) Rules 1987, SI 1987/773, r 14(1). If at the material time a parish has no parochial church council or no secretary of the council, the provisions of the 1986 Measure and SI 1987/773 with respect to notices, consents and other things required or authorised to be given or done by or to such council or such secretary have effect, if the parish has churchwardens, as if the churchwardens were the council or the secretary; if there are no churchwardens, those provisions have no effect with respect to that parish: r 15.

3 Ibid r 14(2). The precedents of such matters and any amendments, revocations or additions to them must be approved by the Standing Committee of the General Synod and must then be communicated to the registrar and designated officer of every diocese: s 14(2). As to the meaning of 'designated officer', see r 1(1) (see PARA 818A.10).

4 The proper address of the person on or to whom any such notice or other document is required or authorised to be served, sent or given is his last known address, except that in the case of the secretary or clerk of a corporation, it is that of the registered or principal office of the corporation, and in the case of the secretary or clerk of an unincorporated body or a partner of a firm, it is that of the principal office of the body or firm: 1986 Measure s 37(4), which is expressed to be subject to s 37(5). If the person on or to whom any such notice or other document is to be served, sent or given has specified an address within the United Kingdom for the serving, sending or giving of the notice or other document, his proper address for the purposes of s 37 is that address: s 37(5).

6 Ibid s 37(3).

11. Patronage (Procedure) Committee

The Patronage (Procedure) Committee has power to make rules with regard to any matter of procedure arising under the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 and in particular with regard to any matter to be prescribed under the Measure¹. The committee consists of a chairman and four other members appointed by the Appointments Committee of the General Synod².

1 Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 s 38(1), (2). However, no rules may be made under s 38(2) with regard to any matter in respect of which rules may be made by the Patronage (Appeals) Committee under Sch 1 para 11: s 38(2). As to further provisions relating to the rule-making procedure, see s 38(4)-(6), Sch 1 paras 10, 12; Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1995 s 14; SI 1998/1715.

B. CROWN PATRONAGE

784. The Sovereign as patron.

Besides possessing the patronage of certain benefices in right of the Crown or of the Duchy of Lancaster, or of the Duchy of Cornwall where there is not a Duke of Cornwall of full age, the Sovereign is the patron paramount of all the other benefices¹ and, as such, has the right to fill all such benefices as are not regularly filled by their patrons, whether this happens by neglect, as where the patronage ultimately lapses to the Crown², or by incapacity to present, as where the patron is an alien or has been guilty of simony³ or the like⁴. Moreover, where a benefice becomes void by the promotion of its holder to a see in the province of Canterbury or York, or where the advowson of a benefice is attached to a see and the benefice is void during a vacancy in the see, or where the advowson is attached to another ecclesiastical office and the benefice is void during a vacancy of the office occasioned by the promotion of the holder to such a see, the Sovereign has the prerogative of presenting to the void benefice⁵. As against the Sovereign a benefice is not deemed full by institution or collation until induction has supervened⁶. In exercising Crown patronage of a benefice above the yearly value of £20 in the Queen's books the Queen acts under the advice of the Prime Minister and the First Lord of the Treasury⁷. Where the yearly value of a benefice does not exceed £20 in the Queen's books the Queen is advised by the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, or the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster⁸. No Roman Catholic or Jew, however, may advise the Queen as to the exercise of ecclesiastical patronage⁹.

Under certain statutes where the consent of a patron is required or notices are to be served on him the consent of and notices to the Crown are given by or to the First Lord of the Treasury, the Lord Chancellor or the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster as the case may be¹⁰.

Where the Crown or the Duchy of Cornwall is patron of a benefice, or has a share in the patronage, no pastoral scheme or order¹¹ may apply to that benefice without the consent of the Queen or the Duke of Cornwall, if he is of full age, given generally or in respect of a particular benefice¹².

785. Duchies of Lancaster and Cornwall.

Patronage belonging to the Queen in right of the Duchy of Lancaster is exercised under the advice of the Chancellor of the duchy¹.

Where there is a Duke of Cornwall of full age², patronage belonging to the Duchy of Cornwall is exercisable by him, and when that is not the case, and the patronage belongs to the Crown in right of the duchy, it is exercisable by the same persons as the Crown patronage, namely, by the Queen on the advice of the Prime Minister and the First Lord of the Treasury if the benefice is above the yearly value of £20 in the Queen's books, and, if not, by the Lord Chancellor³.

788. Patronage of new churches and benefices before 1943.

Provision was made by the Church Building Acts¹ and the New Parishes Acts² for the patronage of churches, chapels and benefices established under those Acts. Those Acts were consolidated and largely repealed³, but existing rights of patronage in parishes and districts formed under the Acts were protected⁴. The rights of patronage in such new districts and parishes vested, by agreement⁵ and otherwise, in various persons (for example the patron of a parish out of which the new district was formed⁶, its incumbent⁷, the bishop of the diocese⁸, the Crown⁹ or other persons¹⁰, but in all cases the schemes under which the districts or parishes were formed had to be registered in the diocesan registries¹¹ and they will show what rights of patronage exist in each parish or district formed under those Acts.

789. Patronage since 1943.

After 4th February 1943 new parishes and ecclesiastical districts could only be formed under the New Parishes Measure 1943¹, which was based generally on the New Parishes Acts and replaced the provisions of those Acts and the Church Building Acts, which were contained in more than twenty statutes².

Where an existing church was proposed as the new parish church³, corporation, whether ecclesiastical, collegiate or lay, tenants for life and persons acting in a fiduciary capacity who were entitled to any right of patronage of the existing church had full power to agree with the Church Commissioners and the diocesan bishop as to the surrender, exercise or transfer of the right⁴. If a new church had been or was to be erected, the bishop might, before its consecration, agree with the incumbent and the patron of the ecclesiastical district⁵ in which it was situated as to the person by whom the patronage of the new church, after consecration, was to be exercised; upon registration in the diocesan registry such an agreement effectively vested the right of patronage in accordance with its terms⁶.

Subject to such agreements the right of patronage of any new parish or district constituted by schemes under the Measure⁷ belonged to the bishop⁸ unless or until the right had been otherwise wholly⁹ assigned or unless an existing church became the parish church of the new parish and the right of patronage of that church belonged to another person¹⁰.

Schemes for the union of benefices, where all the benefices were not in the same patronage, had to contain directions for the settlement of the future exercise of the rights of patronage of the united benefice¹¹ and similarly reorganisation schemes forming new benefices or parishes had to vest the patronage of those benefices in one or more patrons and, where necessary, settle the future exercise of the right¹².

The New Parishes Measure 1943 was repealed as regards the creation of new parishes¹³ by the Pastoral Measure 1968¹⁴, with effect from 1st April 1969¹⁵. As from that date the formation of new parishes is provided for by pastoral schemes made under the Measure¹⁶. A pastoral scheme creating any new benefice may provide for vesting the patronage of the benefice in a patron or patrons and, where necessary, for determining the manner in which the rights of patronage are to be exercised¹⁷. Unless such provision is made by a scheme the patron of a new benefice so created is the diocesan board of patronage¹⁸ for the diocese in which the benefice lies¹⁹.

TEXT AND NOTES 18, 19--Now ibid s 32(3), (3A); Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 s 29(1). Without prejudice to the generality of the 1983 Measure s 32(1) and (2), a pastoral scheme (whether it relates only to an existing benefice or provides for the creation of a new benefice), may, with the consent of the registered patron (see s 87(1); see PARA 872) or patrons of any benefice affected by the scheme, provide for the transfer of existing rights of patronage to, or for the vesting of new rights of patronage in, a special patronage board constituted by the scheme: s 32(3). A special patronage board constituted by a pastoral scheme under s 32(3) consists of such members as the

D. PATRONAGE OF CORPORATIONS AND TRUSTEES

790. Diocesan boards of patronage.

In every diocese there is a diocesan board of patronage¹ consisting of the bishop, who is chairman, three clergymen elected by the House of Clergy of the diocesan synod², five laymen elected by the House of Laity of that synod, and the archdeacon and the rural dean in whose respective jurisdictions any particular benefice in respect of which business is transacted is situate³. The board may acquire, hold and transfer rights of patronage, and may exercise any right of patronage so held⁴. No right of patronage may be transferred by the board without the consent of the parochial church council of the parish concerned, except when the transfer is incidental to the transfer of that parish from one diocese to another, when the right of patronage may be transferred to the board of patronage of the other diocese⁵.

1 The board is a body corporate by the name of the diocese in which it is established followed by the words 'Diocesan Board of Patronage'; it has perpetual succession and a common seal: Benefices (Diocesan Board of Patronage) Measure 1932, s 1 (4).

2 As to diocesan synods, see PARA 503 et seq ante.

3 Benefices (Diocesan Boards of Patronage) Measure 1932, s 1 (1); Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 4 (7). The election is on the principle of proportional representation by single transferable vote: Benefices (Diocesan Boards of Patronage) Measure 1932, s 1 (2). The bishop may nominate a suffragan or assistant bishop of the diocese to act in his place: s 1 (3). As to terms of office, quorum, vacancies, qualifications, regulations and officers, see s 3.

4 Ibid s 2; Charities Act 1960, s 48, Sch. 7, Part II. The board is also thereby empowered to transfer rights of patronage, but this power is subject to the restrictions mentioned: Benefices (Diocesan Boards of Patronage) Measure 1932, s 2 proviso.

5 Ibid s 2 proviso (a). Any transfer of a right of patronage not in accordance with this is void: s 2 proviso (b). A clerical member of the board is not to take part in proceedings relating to a presentation in his favour: s 3 (9).

796. Patronage vested in parochial church council.

The power of presenting¹ to a benefice formerly vested in the vestry of the parish, including the case where it was vested in or in trust for the parishioners², is now in the parochial church council³.

1 'Presentation' here appears to include rights of nomination and is not to be confined to legal patronage only. As to 'nomination', see PARA 777 ante.

2 It is uncertain whether this is so where the advowson is vested in or in trust for 'parishioners' in a sense which is not synonymous with 'the vestry'.

Where an advowson is held in trust for the inhabitants and parishioners of a particular place¹ the majority of the electors are entitled to nominate the minister, and the trustees must present the electors' nominee² if on other grounds the election is valid³.

Where the right of election is vested in the parishioners the question whether they must also be ratepayers may be determined by usage⁴. Where the ratepayers are the electors, only those who have actually paid rates may vote⁵.

In the election by parishioners of a vicar, Jews are entitled to vote but Roman Catholics are not⁶.

800. Trustee patrons in perpetuity.

An advowson or right of patronage of a benefice may be held by trustees in perpetuity and without power of alienation¹, whether or not a trust is expressed or beneficiaries are named². If no trust is expressed nor beneficiaries named, or if a trust is declared simply to present a fit person to the benefice, which is the legal duty of all patrons, the trust is not a charitable trust³. The trust is charitable, however, if the advowson is given to trustees for the benefit of a charity⁴, or if the trustees are to present a clergyman elected by the parishioners or some other class of persons⁵, or a clergyman holding special opinions in the interest of a particular school of thought in the church⁶. In the absence of any provision to the contrary all the trustees must present⁷ unless they are a corporation, in which case the majority may select the presentee without using the corporate seal⁸, but a power for the majority to present may be contained in the instrument creating or regulating the trust⁹. In the absence of a provision to the contrary in the instrument of trust the survivors or survivor of the trustees may present¹⁰.

(ii) Transfer and Transmissions of Patronage

802. Transfer of patronage.

An advowson or right of patronage is transferable or transmissible by conveyance or devise or by operation of law in the same manner as other incorporeal hereditaments¹, but is subject to the following restrictions²: (1) the transfer³ must be registered in the prescribed manner⁴ in the diocesan registry within one month from the date of transfer or within such extended time as the bishop under special circumstances thinks fit to allow⁵; (2) it must transfer the whole interest of the transferor in the advowson or right of patronage, except that in a family settlement a life interest may be reserved to the settlor⁶; and (3) except in the case of an advowson to be sold in conjunction with a manor or with an estate in land of not less than 100 acres situate in the parish in which the benefice is situate, or in an adjoining parish and belonging to the same owner as the advowson, a right of patronage cannot be offered for sale by public auction⁷.

The following agreements are also invalid: (a) an agreement for the exercise of a right of patronage in favour of or on the nomination of a particular person, and (b) an agreement on or in connection with the transfer of a right of patronage (i) for the retransfer of the right; (ii) for postponing payment of any part of the consideration of the transfer until a vacancy in the benefice or for more than three months; (iii) for payment of interest until a vacancy or for more than three months; (iv) for any payment in respect of the date at which a vacancy occurs; and (v) for the resignation of a benefice in favour of any person⁸.

The advowson of a benefice may be legally transferred when the incumbent is in extremis if an intended presentee is not privy to the transfer⁹.

The right of patronage of a guild church¹⁰ may be transferred in the same way as the right of patronage of a benefice although it may not be sold¹¹. Unless he is himself the patron the bishop's consent is required¹².

With the consent of the patron or patrons concerned, a pastoral scheme¹³ may provide for the exchange or transfer of the rights of patronage of any benefice or church, whether or not that benefice or church is otherwise affected by the scheme¹⁴.

Special restrictions lie under the Benefices (Diocesan Boards of Patronage) Measure 1932, s 2, where the transferor is a diocesan board of patronage: see PARA 790 ante. A further restriction requiring the lapse of twelve months since the last institution or admission to a benefice no longer applies: Benefices Act 1898, s 1 (1) (c) (repealed).

3 'Transfer' includes any conveyance or assurance passing or creating a legal or equitable interest inter vivos and any agreement for such a conveyance or assurance, but does not include a transmission on marriage, death or bankruptcy, or otherwise by operation of law, nor a transfer on the appointment of a new trustee where no beneficial interest passes: ibid s 1 (6). The register must include a note of the price, if any, paid for the interest transferred and the application for registration must state the price: Benefices (Purchase of Rights of Patronage) Measure 1933, s 6 (1). A duplicate of the entry in the register must be sent by the registrar to the parochial church council within fourteen days: s 6 (2). This Measure is obsolescent since the coming into force of the Pastoral Measure 1968; see PARA 805 post.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/5. BENEFICES/(2) PATRONAGE/(ii) Transfer and Transmissions of Patronage/802A. Transfer of rights of patronage.

802A. Transfer of rights of patronage.

A right of patronage of a benefice¹ is incapable of sale and any transfer² of it for valuable consideration is void³.

A right of patronage vested in an ecclesiastical corporation⁴ may not be transferred to any body or person unless (a) the consent of the bishop⁵ or, if the bishop is the proposed transferor, the consent of the archbishop⁶ has been obtained or (b) the transfer is made by a pastoral scheme⁷ or order⁸.

Where a right of patronage of a benefice is proposed to be transferred other than by a pastoral scheme or order, the proposed transferor must send to the bishop (or, if the bishop is the proposed transferor, to the archbishop) and to the registrar of the diocese a notice⁹ in the prescribed form stating (a) his intention to transfer that right, (b) the name and address of the proposed transferee and (c) the particulars of the terms of the proposed transfer¹⁰. On receiving such a notice, the registrar must send to the secretary of the parochial church council of the parish concerned a notice¹¹ in the prescribed form informing him of the proposed transfer and stating that, before the expiration of the period of one month beginning with the date on which the notice is sent to him, representations with respect to the proposed transfer may be made to the registrar by the parochial church council¹². The registrar must notify the bishop and the proposed transferor or, if the bishop is the proposed transferor, the bishop and the archbishop, of any representations made to him within the one-month period¹³. After the expiration of the one-month period, the bishop or, if the bishop is the proposed transferor, the archbishop must consider any representations made under the foregoing provision¹⁴. Whether or not any such representations have been made, the bishop or archbishop may request the proposed transferor (either personally or through some person appointed by the proposed transferor) to confer with him (or with some person appointed by the bishop or archbishop) as to the proposed transfer¹⁵.

Any transfer of a right of patronage other than by a pastoral scheme or order must be in the prescribed form¹⁶.

Where a right of patronage of a benefice is transferred other than by a pastoral scheme or order, the registrar must not register the transferee as a patron of that benefice unless (a) he is satisfied that the requirements of these provisions have been complied with and (b) an application¹⁷ for registration is made before the expiration of 12 months from the date of the execution of the transfer¹⁸.

A transfer of a right of patronage of a benefice may not take effect during the period of a vacancy in that benefice¹⁹.

Where a right of patronage of a benefice is proposed to be transferred to Her Majesty or to the possessor for the time being of the Duchy of Cornwall, the foregoing provisions²⁰ do not apply but the transferor must send a notice to the registrar to inform him of the transfer and the registrar must notify Her Majesty or the possessor of the Duchy of Cornwall that he proposes to register Her Majesty or the possessor of the Duchy of Cornwall as patron of that benefice²¹.

Where a right of patronage in a Crown benefice²² is transferred to any person other than Her Majesty or the Duke of Cornwall, the registrar must not register the transferee as patron of the benefice unless the application for transfer is made in accordance with prescribed provisions²³.

before the expiration of the period of 12 months beginning with the date of execution of the transfer²⁴.

1 See PARA 783A.1.

2 'Transfer' means a transfer inter vivos including a transfer by way of exchange; it does not include a transfer by operation of law, a transfer on the appointment of a new trustee or a transfer by the personal representatives of a deceased person: Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 s 3(9); Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 s 17(b).

803. Obligations of intending transferor.

A patron intending to transfer¹ his advowson or right of patronage must notify to the bishop his intention or desire to transfer, the name and address of the proposed transferee and particulars of the terms of the proposed transfer; and must also, if the bishop within twenty-one days after such notification so requires, confer with the bishop or some person appointed by him². The bishop must within one month give notice with particulars to the churchwardens and the secretary of the parochial church council inviting objections by the council to the proposed transfer within fourteen days, and if such objections are made he must communicate them to the patron³. Where a bishop, as patron, proposes to transfer, he must send notice to the churchwardens and to the secretary of the parochial church council⁴.

No transfer may be registered unless one month has elapsed since the sending of the notice to the churchwardens and until the transferor has complied with these obligations⁵.

1 'Transfer' has the same meaning as in the Benefices Act 1898, as to which see PARA 802 note 3 ante: Benefices (Transfer of Rights of Patronage) Measure 1930, s 7.

2 Ibid s 1.

3 Ibid s 2. The churchwardens must cause the notice to be fixed on the principal door or notice board of the church or chapel and take such other step as they think expedient for giving it publicity; if there is more than one church or chapel in the benefice the bishop determines where the notice shall be fixed: s 5.

4 Ibid s 4 (i). As to the churchwardens' duties in regard to the notice, see note 3 supra. If requested, the bishop must confer with the council: s 4 (ii).

804. Patronage rights incapable of sale.

A right of patronage (including a right of nomination¹) to a benefice is incapable of sale after the occurrence of two vacancies in the benefice subsequent to 14th July 1924, and after two such vacancies a transfer of such a right for valuable consideration is invalid². This does not apply to assignments of patronage under the New Parishes Acts³ or to sales of land to which rights of patronage are appendant⁴.

Any right of patronage created by or under the Pastoral Measure 1968 is incapable of sale and any transfer of such a right for valuable consideration is void⁵.

A person entitled for his own benefit in fee simple or fee tail in possession, whether for a legal or equitable estate, to a right of patronage may, by declaration under seal registered in the diocesan registry, declare his intention that the right of patronage be thenceforth without power of sale and from the date of registration the right then becomes incapable of sale⁶.

805. Compulsory purchase of patronage.

Where a transfer of a right of patronage has been registered¹ since 14th July 1924, and at the date of registration two vacancies of the benefice subsequent to 14th July 1924 have not occurred, the parochial church council may pass a provisional resolution for the purchase of the patronage². The provisional resolution must be passed within three years after the registration of the transfer and confirmed, within three months of being passed, by a confirmatory resolution passed at a special or extraordinary parochial church meeting³. Within fourteen days of the passing of the confirmatory resolution the council must notify the patron and the diocesan board of patronage⁴ that it has resolved to purchase⁵, and this 'original notice' must contain an offer to purchase at a named price⁶. If within three months of the original notice no agreement is reached for the sale and purchase the council may within one month notify the patron that it refers the matter to arbitration⁷. The price to be paid on the proposed purchase is awarded by an arbitrator selected from a panel of three persons appointed by the Church Commissioners with the approval of the Lord Chancellor or, if the parties cannot agree as to that arbitrator, selected by the bishop⁸. The arbitrator sends his award to the council, and a copy to the patron⁹, and by his award must certify the price to be paid by the council¹⁰, which must not be less than the price named in the original notice, and must be such as the arbitrator considers equitable after taking all the circumstances of the case into consideration, including any price paid on any registered since 14th July 1924¹¹. If the price awarded is not more than that named in the original notice, then that notice and the award constitute a binding contract for sale between the patron and the council as from the date of the original notice and at the price named in the award¹². If the price awarded is more than that named in the original notice and the council sends the patron within six months of the award a final notice stating that it desires to proceed with the purchase, then the original notice, the award and the final notice constitute a binding contract for sale as from the date of the original notice and at the price named in the award¹³.

An exchange or transfer of advowsons, or alterations in the exercise of patronage of benefices, with a view either to improve the value or make better provision for the spiritual duties of ill-endowed parishes or districts, or to make better provision for the cure of souls in the benefices affected by the transaction, may be effected by schemes of the Church Commissioners ratified by Order in Council with the consent of the patrons and of the bishop of the diocese, or of each diocese if the benefices lie in different dioceses, and, where the bishop is himself one of the patrons, of the archbishop of the province¹.

Generally, the Queen, as regards patronage vested in her in right of the Crown or in right of the Duchy of Lancaster or the Duchy of Cornwall, and any archbishop or other ecclesiastical corporation, sole or aggregate, and any other corporation, and the head or governing body of any college or collegiate establishment or hospital, entitled in his or their corporate capacity to any patronage, may give and take, by way of exchange, advowsons and ecclesiastical patronage, by means of a scheme of the commissioners ratified by Order in Council². Where the patronage of a benefice is given in exchange by the Crown, the benefice taken in exchange follows the course of patronage of the benefice so given in exchange³.

810. Right of presentation when benefice becomes vacant.

When a benefice becomes vacant the right of presentation to it is said to be fallen. It has become a personal right or chattel, disannexed from the advowson¹. It cannot be alienated², but must be exercised by the person who was patron at the time when it fell, or by that person's personal representatives³. Consequently it does not pass by a transfer of the patronage which is not completed before the avoidance of the benefice⁴.

(iii) Restrictions on Exercise of Patronage

811. In general.

In the years following the second world war a fall in the value of the incomes of most benefices and the shortage of clergy made it necessary to reorganise some benefices and to prevent others from being filled, in order that the best pastoral use might be made of the money and clergy available. For these reasons extensive restrictions on the right of patrons to present clergymen to benefices were introduced¹, and clerical patrons were made subject to some further special restrictions². Parochial church councils had already been given a limited voice in the selection of a new incumbent³.

812. Self-presentation.

If a right of patronage has become vested in a person who was at the time it became so vested, or who subsequently becomes, a clergyman, or in his wife, or in someone on his or her behalf, he cannot be presented to the benefice, and such presentation is void¹.

¹ Benefices Act 1898 (Amendment) Measure 1923, s 3, applying after 14th July 1924. With regard to patronage which became vested before the passing of that Measure, it may be said that a patron technically cannot present himself, but if he is in other respects fit he may offer himself to the bishop to be admitted to the benefice and the bishop is bound to admit him: Gib Cod 794; Watson, Clergyman's Law (4th Edn) 227; Walsh v Bishop of Lincoln (1875) LR 10 CP 518; Lowe v Bishop of Chester (1883) 10 QBD 407.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/5. BENEFICES/(2) PATRONAGE/(iii) Restrictions on Exercise of Patronage/813. Suspension of presentation.

813. Suspension of presentation.

Within three months before a benefice¹ is due to become vacant or during a vacancy² the bishop³ may, with the consent of the pastoral committee⁴ and after consultation with the patron⁵ of the benefice⁶ and the parochial church council of the parish⁷ or parishes concerned, give notice that during a specified period not exceeding five years (known as 'the suspension period') the patron must not exercise his right of presentation without the consent of the pastoral committee and of the bishop, and thereupon it may be exercised only in accordance with the notice during the suspension period⁸. The period may be extended by the bishop for further periods, not exceeding five years in the case of any one period, by a further notice, which requires the same consent and the same consultation as the original notice⁹. The suspension period comes to an end (1) if notice is given by the bishop that the necessary consent has been given to the exercise of the patron's right of presentation¹⁰; (2) if notice has been given by the bishop, with the consent of the pastoral committee, terminating the period¹¹; or (3) if a pastoral scheme or order¹² provides for the holding of the benefice in plurality with another benefice or other benefices, or if a pastoral scheme otherwise affecting the benefice expressly provides for the termination of the period¹³.

Any notice given by the bishop must be given to the Church Commissioners, the patron of the benefice (unless the bishop is patron), the churchwardens of the parish or each of the parishes concerned, and the sequestrators, if any have been appointed¹⁴; and a copy must be filed in the diocesan registry¹⁵. The churchwardens must affix any such notice at or near to the door of the parish church or, if there is no parish, church, of the principal place of worship in the parish¹⁶.

The bishop may suspend the right of presentation even though the right is already restricted¹⁷.

5 'Patron' in relation to any benefice means the person or persons for the time being entitled, otherwise than by lapse, to present to that benefice upon a vacancy, and includes (1) in a case where the right to present is vested in different persons jointly, every person whose concurrence would be required for the exercise of the joint right, and (2) in any case where the patronage is vested in different persons by way of alternate or successive right of presentation, every person who is for the time being the person who would be entitled to present on the next or any subsequent turn: ibid s 90 (1). 'Right of patronage' is to be construed accordingly: 90 (1). In the application of these definitions the fact that any person is a Roman Catholic is to be disregarded: s 90 (1).

814. Performance of duties during vacancy.

While the benefice is vacant owing to the suspension of the right to present, the sequestrators¹ must, subject to and in accordance with the bishop's² directions, provide for the performance during the suspension period³ of the ecclesiastical duties of the benefice⁴. Before giving any directions the bishop must consult the parochial church council of the parish or each of the parishes concerned and, so far as is reasonably practicable, the patron of the benefice⁴. A curate appointed to be in charge of the benefice may be required to reside in the parsonage house⁵ of the benefice⁶.

5 'Parsonage house' means the house or other dwelling vested in the incumbent of a benefice (when the benefice is full) and being his official residence, and includes, and outbuildings or land included in the curtilage of any such house or dwelling and any rights appurtenant thereto: ibid s 90 (1).

815. Sequestration during suspension.

Where the bishop¹ has declared a suspension period² in respect of a benefice³, during that period he must sequester the profits of the benefice, and in appointing sequestrators must ensure that one of the persons appointed is specially qualified by training or by experience to discharge efficiently the duties of the office⁴. With the bishop's consent the sequestrators may exercise in relation to the property of the benefice all the powers of the incumbent, not being powers exercisable during a vacancy by the bishop or the Church commissioners⁵. With the commissioners, consent the bishop may authorise the sequestrators, if they think fit, to grant a lease or tenancy of the parsonage house⁶ for such period as he may authorise⁷. The sequestrators must apply the income⁸ of the benefice in the prescribed manner⁹.

1 For the meaning of 'bishop', see PARA 813 note 3 ante.

2 Under the pastoral measure 1968, s 67: see PARA 813 ante. Where, on the termination of a suspension period in respect of any benefice, there immediately follows a further period during which the profits of the benefice are sequestrated, the suspension period includes that further period for the purposes of Sch. 7: s 68 (4), Sch. 7 para 7 (2).

3 For the meaning of 'benefice', see PARA 768 note 1 ante.

4 Pastoral Measure 1968, s 68 (1). Such a qualified sequestrator may be paid his proper professional charges for work undertaken by him: Sch. 7 para 3 (1) (d).

5 Ibid Sch. 7 para 1. These powers are in addition to those which the sequestrators have under the Benefices (Sequestrations) Measure 1933 or under the general law: Pastoral measure 1968, Sch. 7 para 1.

6 For the meaning of 'parsonage house', see PARA 814 note 5 ante.

7 Pastoral Measure 1968, Sch. 7 para 2. Any such lease or tenancy is subject to the provisions of the Pluralities Act 1838, s 59 (as to which see PARA 1157 post): Pastoral Measure 1968, Sch. 7 para 2. Such a lease or tenancy may also be granted where the profits of a benefice to which presentation is restricted are sequestrated: see s 69 (5), and PARAS 816, 817 post.

8 For the purposes of ibid Sch. 7, 'income' includes any sum charged on the endowments of the benefice for the payment of an assistant curate and accruing during the suspension period: Sch. 7 para 7 (1). If immediately before the suspension period there has been a vacancy in the benefice concerned during which sequestrators were appointed, they must pay any balance in their hands at the close of that sequestration, after discharge of liabilities, to the sequestrated appointed under s 68 (1); the provisions of Sch. 7 apply to any money so received as if it were income of the benefice accruing during the second sequestration: Sch. 7 para 5.

9 Ibid Sch. 7 para 3 (1). Notwithstanding any statutory requirements to the contrary the sequestrators must apply the income in payment of (1) expenses incurred by the bishop under ss 67, 68 (Sch. 7 para 3 (1) (a)); (2) expenses properly incurred in the collection of the income of the benefice (Sch. 7 para 3 (1) (b)); (3) expenses of performance of the ecclesiastical duties of the benefice, including accommodation (Sch. 7 para 3 (1) (c)); (4) sequestration expenses, including the proper professional charges of the qualified sequestrator (Sch. 7 para 3 (1) (d)); and (5) the stipend and expenses of accommodation of an assistant curate (Sch. 7 para 3 (1) (e)). Whilst the suspension period lasts, the sequestrators may, with the bishop's consent, and must if he directs, pay part of the balance in their hands to the Church Commissioners (Sch. 7 para 3 (2)), to whom the balance must be paid at the close of sequestration (Sch. 7 para 3 (3)).

The commissioners must apply the money, on the direction of the bishop with the concurrence of the pastoral committee, in one or more of the following ways: (a) towards the augmentation of the endowment of the benefice (including any benefice the area of which includes the whole or part of the area of the benefice the presentation to which was suspended and, if the benefice is or is to be held in plurality, any of the benefices so held or to be held), the provision of a parsonage house for it, or otherwise to its advantage; (b) in making a grant to the next succeeding incumbent; (c) by crediting the capital or income account of the diocesan stipends fund: Sch. 7 para 4. Accounts must be rendered by the sequestrators in accordance with Sch. 7 para 6.

816. Restrictions on presentation where pastoral scheme or order contemplated.

Where the bishop has given directions to a pastoral committee¹ to consider the creation, alteration or dissolution of benefices², the holding of benefices in plurality³ or the establishment, termination or alteration of team⁴ or group ministries⁵, he may, when giving notice of a vacancy or impending vacancy in any of the benefices concerned⁶, also notify the patron⁷ (unless he is himself the patron) and the parochial church council that those matters are being considered, and thereupon the patron must not exercise his right of presentation without the consent of the pastoral committee and the bishop⁸. This restriction ceases one year from the date of the notification unless within that period proposals are submitted to the Church Commissioners⁹ containing recommendations for any of the above-mentioned matters which would affect the benefice concerned¹⁰.

The right of presentation cannot be restricted in this way in the case of any benefice the patronage or any share in the patronage of which is vested in the Crown or the Duchy of Lancaster or the Duchy of Cornwall without the consent, given either generally or in respect of a particular benefice, of Her Majesty or, as the case may be, the Duke of Cornwall¹¹.

When the right of presentation is suspended in this manner time does not run for the purposes of lapse¹².

The fact that restrictions are in force under s 69 does not prevent the bishop from exercising his powers under ss 67, 68. If he does so, 67, 68 and Sch. 7 apply to the benefice, to the exclusion of s 69: s 69 (4). Even if he does not he may, if the profits of the benefice are sequestrated, exercise the power conferred by Sch. 7 para 2, to authorise a lease or tenancy of the parsonage house: s 69 (5). Whilst a benefice is vacant by virtue of s 69, the patron may nevertheless exercise any right of presentation vested in the incumbent of the benefice: s 71.

818. Restriction at instance of parochial church council.

A vacancy or impending vacancy¹ in a benefice² must be notified³ by the bishop to the patron and the parochial church council⁴. The council may then make written representations to the patron as to the conditions, needs and traditions of the parish, but without mentioning the name of a particular clergyman⁵. A copy must be sent to the bishop⁶.

Notwithstanding the receipt by the patron of these representations, he may exercise his rights of presentation or collation as if these provisions had not been passed unless within thirty days after the notification of the vacancy or impending vacancy the council passes a resolution (which must be notified forthwith to the bishop and patron) that the following provisions shall have effect⁷. The patron may exercise his right of presentation after conferring with and obtaining the consent of the churchwardens acting as the council's representatives⁸. When sixty days have elapsed since the notification of vacancy or impending vacancy, and either (1) the churchwardens have not given their consent, or (2) a conference has, for any reason other than the patron's neglect or refusal, not taken place, the patron may exercise his right after obtaining the bishop's approval of the clergyman presented as being suitable for the duties attaching to the cure⁹. Before giving or withholding his approval the bishop may, and if the patron or council requires it must, consult the body of advisers¹⁰. If the bishop finally withholds his approval his decision is open to review by the archbishop at the instance of the patron¹¹. A presentation is not valid unless made with the foregoing consent, approval or authorisation¹². If the bishop is himself the patron he must, before collating a clergyman, consult the churchwardens and also, if he deems it expedient or if the churchwardens so require, the body of advisers¹³. This provision also applies where the patronage of a vacant benefice has lapsed to a bishop or archbishop¹⁴.

1 'Impending vacancy' means only such a vacancy as the bishop considers must necessarily occur within such a period that in his opinion it is reasonable to notify it under the Benefices (Exercise of Rights of Presentation) Measure 1931: see s 9.

2 The Benefices Act 1898, s 2 (2), and the provisions of the Benefices (Exercise of Rights of Presentation) Measure 1931 do not apply to the admission of a person designated by, or selected under, a pastoral scheme or order as the incumbent of any benefice (Pastoral Measure 1968, s 23 (4), Sch. 3 para 4 (3)); or to Crown patronage, the patronage of the Duchy of Cornwall or the Greenwich Hospital patronage of the Admiralty (Benefices (Exercise of Rights of Presentation) Measure 1931, s 7).

A member who has a personal interest may not sit, and if the archdeacon has a personal interest his place is taken by such other member as the bishop selects: Benefices (Exercise of Rights of Presentation) Measure 1931, s 4 (3). The diocesan synod has power to fix a quorum for the body and make provision with respect to casual vacancies, and to make provision for a separate body for each archdeaconry in the diocese and to determine the manner of elections: s 4 (2); Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 4 (7). 818 Restriction at instance of parochial church council

TEXT AND NOTES--1931 Measure replaced by Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 Pt II (ss 7-24) (see PARA 818A).

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/5. BENEFICES/(2) PATRONAGE/(iii) Restrictions on Exercise of Patronage/818A. Exercise of rights of presentation.

818A. Exercise of rights of presentation.

1. Notification of vacancies

Where a benefice¹ becomes vacant by reason of the death of the incumbent, the bishop must, as soon as practicable after he becomes aware of the vacancy, give notice of that fact to the designated officer² of the diocese³. Where the bishop is aware that a benefice is shortly to become vacant by reason of resignation or cession, the bishop must give such notice of that fact as he considers reasonable in all the circumstances to the designated officer of the diocese⁴. As soon as practicable after receiving a notice under the foregoing provisions, the designated officer must send notice of the vacancy to the registered patron⁵ of the benefice and to the secretary of the parochial church council of the parish belonging to the benefice⁶.

These provisions⁷ apply to a Crown benefice⁸.

Where the bishop declares a suspension period⁹ in respect of any benefice, or any restriction¹⁰ comes into force in respect of any benefice (a) no notice¹¹ of a vacancy or impending vacancy in that benefice may be given during the suspension period or while the restriction is in force; (b) any such notice relating to that benefice given before the suspension period began or the restriction came into force is deemed to have been revoked and any act done in consequence of that notice is of no effect; (c) that benefice is deemed to become vacant immediately after the day on which the suspension period comes to an end or the day on which the restriction ceases to be in force, but if a further suspension period is declared, the benefice shall no longer be deemed to be vacant; and (d) as soon as practicable after he becomes aware of the vacancy, the bishop must give notice of that fact to the designated officer and, unless he is the designated officer, to the registrar of the diocese¹².

Where a benefice is vacant on 1 October 1987 or becomes vacant after that date and before the end of the registration period¹³, the vacancy must be filled in accordance with the law in force immediately before 1 October 1987¹⁴. However, if a suspension period has been declared in respect of the benefice or any restriction¹⁵ has been imposed in respect of the benefice and the suspension period does not come to an end, or the restriction does not cease to be in force, until after the end of the registration period, the vacancy must be filled in accordance with the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986¹⁶.

² 'The designated officer', in relation to a diocese, means such person as the bishop, after consulting the bishop's council, may designate or, if no person is designated, the secretary of the pastoral committee of the diocese: Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 s 7(5).

⁴ Ibid s 7(2), which is subject to the 1983 Measure s 70. See also 1986 Measure s 7(3), NOTE 3.

In the 1986 Measure Pt II (ss 7-24), except in ss 7(4) and 10, any reference to a registered patron, in relation to any vacancy in a benefice in respect of which there is more than one patron registered under the 1986 Measure, is construed as a reference to the registered patron whose turn it is, according to the information in the register of patrons (see PARA 783A.1) on the date when the vacancy occurs, to present on that vacancy: s 24(1), which is expressed to be subject to s 24(2) and (3).

In a case where the functions of the registered patron of a benefice in relation to a vacancy in the benefice are to be discharged by the holder of an office or the donee of a power of attorney, any reference in the 1986 Measure Pt II (except in ss 8, 9(1)-(4) and 21) to the registered patron must be construed as a reference to that office holder or donee: s 24(2), which is expressed to be subject to s 24(3) (see PARA 818A.5, PARA 818A.7).

2. Declarations of membership

Where the registered patron¹ of a benefice² is an individual and is not a clerk in holy orders³, he must on receiving notice⁴ of a vacancy in the benefice (a) if able to do so, make a written declaration⁵ ('the declaration of membership') declaring that he is an actual communicant member of the Church of England or of a Church in communion with that Church⁶ or (b) if unable to make the declaration himself, appoint some other person, being an individual who is able and willing to make it or is a clerk in holy orders or one of certain specified bodies⁷, to act as his representative to discharge the functions of a registered patron in his place⁸.

Where the registered patron of a benefice is a body of persons corporate or unincorporate then, on receiving notice of a vacancy in the benefice, that body must appoint an individual who is able and willing to make the declaration of membership or is a clerk in holy orders to act as its representative to discharge the functions of a registered patron in its place⁹.

Where the right of presentation to a benefice belongs to an office (other than an ecclesiastical office¹⁰) and the benefice become vacant, the person who holds that office on the date when the benefice becomes vacant is entitled to present on that vacancy and must as soon as practicable after that date (a) if able to do so, make the declaration of membership or (b) if unable to make the declaration himself, appoint some other person¹¹ to act as his representative to discharge the functions of a registered patron in his place¹².

Where the right of presentation to a benefice is exercisable by the donee of a power of attorney, the donee must as soon as practicable after receiving notice of the vacancy in the benefice (or, if the power is created during the vacancy, as soon as practicable after it is created) (a) if able to do so, make the declaration of membership or (b) if unable to make the declaration himself, appoint some other person to act as his representative to discharge the functions of a registered patron in his place¹³.

2 See PARA 783A.1.

3 'Clerk in holy orders' means a priest or deacon of the Church of England and 'priest' includes a bishop: Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 s 39(1).

4 See under ibid s 7(4) (see PARA 818A.1).

5 As to the form of declaration, see the Patronage (Benefices) Rules 1987, SI 1987/773, Form 15.

6 'Actual communicant member of the Church of England' means a member of the Church of England who is confirmed or ready and desirous of being confirmed and has received Communion according to the use of the Church of England or of a Church in communion with the Church of England at least 3 times during the 12 months preceding the date on which he makes the declaration of membership: 1986 Measure s 39(1). 'Actual communicant member of a Church in communion with the Church of England' means a communicant member of a Church in communion with the Church of England who has received Communion according to the use of the Church of England or of a Church in communion with the Church of England at least 3 times during the 12 months preceding the date on which he makes the declaration of membership: s 39(1). If any question arises whether a Church is a Church in communion with the Church of England, it must be conclusively determined for the purposes of the 1986 Measure by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York: s 39(3).

7 The bodies are (a) the dean and chapter or the cathedral chapter of the cathedral church of the diocese; (b) the dean and chapter of the collegiate church of St Peter in Westminster; (c) the dean and canons of the collegiate church of St George, Windsor; (d) any diocesan board of patronage; (e) any patronage board constituted by a pastoral scheme; (f) any university in England or any college or hall in such a university; (g) the colleges of Eton and Winchester: ibid s 8(7). Where a body mentioned in s 8(7) is appointed under s 8 to discharge the functions of a registered patron, that body must as soon as practicable appoint as its representative an individual who is able and willing to make the declaration of membership or is a clerk in holy orders: s 8(6).

8 Ibid s 8(1)(a), (b). Notwithstanding anything in s 8(1), where the registered patron of a benefice who is an individual and is not the bishop of a diocese is of the opinion, on receiving notice of a vacancy under s 7(4), that he will be unable for any reason to discharge his functions as a patron of that benefice he may, notwithstanding that he is able to make the declaration of membership, appoint such a representative as is mentioned in s 8(1)(b) to discharge those functions in his place: s 8(3).

3. Information to be sent to the designated officer

Before the expiration of the period of two months beginning with the date when a benefice¹ becomes vacant or the expiration of three weeks after receiving notice of the vacancy from the designated officer², whichever is the later, a registered patron³ who is an individual must send to the designated officer⁴ of the diocese (a) the declaration of membership⁵ made by him or (b) the name and address of his representative⁶ and the declaration of membership made by that representative⁷. Before the expiration of that period of two months, or three weeks as the case may be, a registered patron which is a body of persons corporate or unincorporate must send to the designated officer of the diocese the name and address of the individual who is to act as its representative and the declaration of membership made by that representative⁸.

Where the registered patron or his representative is a clerk in holy orders⁹, the registered patron must notify the designated officer of that fact before the expiration of the period during which the declaration of membership is required to be sent to the designated officer under the preceding provisions; a declaration of membership made by that clerk is not required to be sent to the designated officer¹⁰.

As soon as practicable after receiving information under these provisions as to the appointment of a representative, the designated officer must send the name and address of the representative to the secretary of the parochial church council¹¹.

Where any declaration of membership or other information required to be sent to the designated officer under the foregoing provisions is not sent to him before the expiration of the period during which it is required to be sent and the registered patron is a person other than the bishop then, after the expiration of that period (a) no meeting of the parochial church council, the registered patron and the bishop may be held¹² by reason of any request made by the registered patron and certain provisions¹³ do not apply to that patron and (b) no offer may be made¹⁴ to any priest to present him to a benefice¹⁵. However, the bishop may make an offer to such priest as he thinks fit to collate him to the benefice¹⁶.

Where the functions of a registered patron are to be discharged by the donee of a power of attorney s 9(1) applies to the donee as it applies to the registered patron except that, if the power is created during the vacancy concerned, there is substituted for the period of two months in s 9(1) the period of two months beginning with the date on which the power is created, and the information required to be sent under s 9(1) includes information as to that date: s 9(4).

Section 13(3), (4)(b) and (5) (see PARA 818A.7) apply to a request sent by the bishop to the parish representatives by virtue of s 14(2) with the substitution of a reference to the bishop for a reference to the registered patron: s 14(2).

Where under s 14(1) the bishop makes an offer to a priest to collate him to a benefice in respect of which there is more than one person registered in a register of patrons, the registered patron whose turn it was to present to the benefice is treated as having exercised that turn: s 14(3).

4. Disqualification for presentation

Where the registered patron¹ of a benefice² or the representative³ of that patron, is a clerk in holy orders⁴ or is the wife of such a clerk, that clerk is disqualified for presentation to that benefice⁵.

5. Requirements as to meetings of the parochial church council

Before the expiration of the period of four weeks beginning with the date when notice¹ of a vacancy in a benefice² is sent to the secretary of the parochial church council, one or more meetings of that council must be held for the purposes of (a) preparing a statement describing the conditions, needs and traditions of the parish³; (b) appointing two lay members of the council to act as representatives⁴ of the council in connection with the selection of an incumbent⁵; (c) deciding whether to request the registered patron⁶ to consider advertising the vacancy⁷; (d) deciding whether to request a joint meeting⁸ with the registered patron and the bishop⁹; (e) deciding whether to request a statement in writing from the bishop describing in relation to the benefice the needs of the diocese and the wider interests of the Church¹⁰ and (f) deciding whether to pass a resolution that it will not accept a woman as the minister who presides at or celebrates the Holy Communion or pronounces the Absolution in the parish and/or that the administrative body will not accept a woman as dean of its cathedral, or a resolution rescinding those resolutions¹¹.

If, before the vacancy in the benefice is filled, any person appointed¹² to act as representative of the parochial church council dies or becomes unable for any reason to act as the representative of, or ceases to be a member of, the council by which he was appointed, then his appointment is deemed to have been revoked and the council must appoint another lay member of the council to act in his place¹³.

If a parochial church council holds a meeting but does not appoint any representatives at that meeting, then two churchwardens who are members of that council (or, if there are more than two churchwardens who are members of the council, two churchwardens chosen by all the churchwardens who are members) must act as representatives of the council in connection with the selection of an incumbent¹⁴.

A copy of the statement¹⁵ describing the conditions, needs and traditions of the parish together with the names and addresses of the parish representatives¹⁶ must, as soon as practicable after the holding of the meeting¹⁷, be sent by the secretary of the parochial church council to the registered patron and, unless the bishop is the registered patron, to the bishop¹⁸.

Where a benefice comprises two or more parishes¹⁹, certain of these provisions are substantially modified²⁰.

Any reference in ibid ss 11 and 12 (except in s 11(2)(b)) to the registered patron of a benefice must be construed, in a case where the functions of the patron in relation to a vacancy in the benefice are to be discharged by a representative, as a reference to that representative: s 24(3). benefice and (b) if the bishop is not the registered patron, that patron is entitled to proceed under s 13 (see PARA 818A.7) as if s 13(1)(a), (b)(i), (3) and (4)(b) had not been enacted: s 15.

6. Joint meeting of parochial church council with registered patron and bishop

Where a request for a meeting under these provisions is made (a) by a notice¹ sent by the registered patron² or the bishop to the secretary of the parochial church council or (b) by a resolution passed at a parochial church council meeting³, a joint meeting of the council with the registered patron and (if the bishop is not the registered patron) the bishop must be held for the purpose of enabling those present at the meeting to exchange views on the statement⁴ of the needs of the parish and the statement⁵ of the needs of the diocese⁶.

At any meeting held under these provisions, the bishop must present either orally or, if a request for a statement in writing has been made by the registered patron or the parochial church council, in writing, a statement describing in relation to the benefice the needs of the diocese and the wider interests of the Church⁷.

The outgoing incumbent and the spouse or civil partner of the outgoing incumbent are not entitled to attend a meeting⁸.

If either the registered patron or the bishop is unable to attend a meeting, he must appoint some other person to attend on his behalf⁹.

A meeting requested under these provisions is not treated for the purposes of the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 as having been held unless there were present at the meeting (a) the bishop or the person appointed to attend on his behalf and (b) the registered patron or the person appointed to attend on his behalf and (c) at least one-third of the members of the parochial church council who were entitled to attend¹⁰.

The secretary of the parochial church council must invite both the rural dean of the deanery in which the parish is (unless he is the outgoing incumbent) and the lay chairman of the deanery synod of that deanery to attend a meeting under these provisions¹¹.

Where a benefice comprises two or more parishes¹², certain of these provisions are modified¹³.

1 Any such notice must be sent to the secretary of the parochial church council not later than 10 days after a copy of the statement prepared under the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 s 11(1)(a) (see PARA 818A.5) is received by the persons mentioned in s 11(8): s 12(3).

4 Ie the statement prepared under ibid s 11(1)(a).

5 Ie the statement presented under ibid s 12(2).

6 Ibid s 12(1)(a), (b).

A meeting requested under s 12 must be held before the expiration of the period of 6 weeks beginning with the date when the request for the meeting was first made (whether by the sending of a notice as mentioned in s 12(1)(a) or by the passing of a resolution as mentioned in s 12(1)(b)): s 12(5). At least 14 days' notice (unless a shorter period is agreed by all the persons concerned) of the time and place at which the meeting is to be held must be given by the secretary of the parochial church council to the registered patron, the bishop (if he is not the registered patron) and the members of the parochial church council: s 12(5).

If notice is not given under s 12(5) of any joint meeting requested under s 12(1)(a) then (a) if the bishop is the registered patron, he may, without making any request for the approval of the parish representatives (see PARA 818A.5), make to such priest as he thinks fit an offer to collate him to the benefice and (b) if the bishop is not the registered patron, that patron is entitled to proceed under s 13 (see PARA 818A.7) as if s 13(1)(a), (b)(i), (3) and (4)(b) had not been enacted: s 15.

13 See Sch 2 paras 10-15, which modify s 12(1)-(3), (5), (8), (9). These modifications apply unless Sch 2 para 19 or 20 applies; see PARA 818A.14.

7. Selection of incumbent

The registered patron¹ of a vacant benefice² must not make to any priest an offer to present him to a benefice until (a) if a request for a joint meeting³ of the parochial church council, the registered patron and the bishop has been made, either (i) that meeting has been held, or (ii) all the parties concerned have agreed that no such meeting should be held or (iii) a prescribed⁴ period of 6 weeks has expired and (b) (whether or not such a request has been made) the making of the offer to the priest in question has been approved (i) by the parish representatives⁵ and (ii) if the registered patron is a person other than the bishop of the diocese in which the benefice is, by that bishop⁶. If, before the expiration of the period of 4 weeks beginning with the date when the registered patron sent the bishop a request for him to approve under head (b) the making of the offer to the priest named in the request, no notice is received from the bishop of his refusal to approve the making of the offer, the bishop is deemed to have given his approval⁷. Similar provision is made in relation to the parish representatives, except that a period of two weeks is specified instead of a period of 4 weeks⁸.

If the bishop or any parish representative refuses to approve the making of the offer to the priest named in the request, the bishop or the representative must notify the registered patron in writing of the grounds on which the refusal is made⁹. Where approval of an offer is refused by the bishop or any parish representative, the registered patron may request the archbishop to review the matter and if, after review, the archbishop authorises the patron to make the offer, the patron may do so¹⁰.

Where a priest accepts an offer made in accordance with these provisions to present him to a benefice and the registered patron is a person other than the bishop, the patron must send the bishop a notice presenting the priest to him for admission to the benefice¹¹.

1 See PARA 818A.1. Any reference in the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 s 13 to the registered patron of a benefice must be construed, in a case where the registered patron, being an individual, has appointed a body mentioned in s 8(7) (see PARA 818A.2) or another individual to discharge the functions of patron, as a reference to that body or that other individual: s 24(3).

7 Ibid s 13(2).

Section 13(5) does not apply in respect of (a) a parish in a diocese to which a declaration under the Priests (Ordination of Women) Measure 1993 s 2(1)(b) (see PARA 657B.1) applies or (b) a benefice comprising a parish to which a resolution under the 1993 Measure s 3(1) (see PARA 657B.2) applies, where the refusal is made solely on grounds of gender: 1986 Measure s 13(5) proviso; 1993 Measure Sch 3 para 12.

The archbishop, after making such inquiries as he deems necessary, must give his reasons in writing for giving or withholding his authorisation to the patron to make the offer: Patronage (Benefices) Rules 1987, SI 1987/773, r 11(1). The archbishop may appoint the Vicar General of the province to make the inquiries on his behalf; the Vicar General must send a written report to the archbishop who must then determine the matter: r 11(2). A copy of the archbishop's determination must be sent to the bishop and to the parish representatives: r 11(3).

11 1986 Measure s 13(6).

8. Presentation to benefices remaining vacant for 9 months

If at the expiration of the period of 9 months¹ beginning with the date when a benefice² becomes vacant (a) no notice of presentation³ has been received by the bishop or (b) where the bishop is the registered patron⁴, he has not received an acceptance of any offer made by him to collate a priest to the benefice, the right of presentation to that benefice is exercisable by the archbishop in accordance with the following provisions and a notice to that effect must be sent by the bishop to the archbishop⁵.

As soon as practicable after a right of presentation becomes exercisable by an archbishop, he must send the secretary of the parochial church council of the parish concerned a notice requiring him, within three weeks after receiving the notice, to send the archbishop copies of the statement⁶ describing the conditions, needs and traditions of the parish together with copies of any additional observations which the council wishes the archbishop to consider⁷.

The bishop may, and if the archbishop so requests must, send the archbishop a statement describing in relation to the benefice the needs of the diocese and the wider interests of the Church⁸.

Before the archbishop decides on the priest to whom an offer to present him to the benefice is to be made he must consult the bishop, the parish representatives⁹ and such other persons as he thinks fit, including other persons who in his opinion can also represent the views of the parishioners¹⁰.

Where a priest accepts an offer to present him to a benefice made in accordance with these provisions, the archbishop must send the bishop a notice presenting the priest to him for admission to the benefice¹¹.

1 In calculating the period of nine months, no account is to be taken of any of the following periods: (a) a period during which the decision of the bishop to refuse to approve the making to a priest of an offer to present him to a benefice is under review by an archbishop, (b) a suspension period within the meaning of the Pastoral Measure 1983, or any period during which the benefice is vacant immediately before the declaration of a suspension period or between suspension periods, and (c) a period during which the exercise of rights of presentation is restricted under ibid s 24 or 69: Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 s 16(2) (amended by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 s 63(3)).

9 See PARA 818A.5.

11 Ibid s 16(6).

9. Refusal of bishop to institute presentee

Nothing in the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 affects the power¹ of a bishop to refuse to institute or admit a presentee to a benefice². Where in exercise of any such power a bishop refuses to institute or admit a presentee to a benefice, and either no legal proceedings in respect of the refusal are brought or the refusal of the bishop is upheld in such proceedings, the presentation to the benefice affected must be made by the registered patron whose turn it was to present when the vacancy first occurred³.

1 Ie under the Benefices Act 1898 s 2(1)(b) or the Benefices Measure 1972 s 1 or any rule of law.

2 Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 s 17(1).

3 Ibid s 17(2). For the purposes of ss 7, 9, 11 and 12 (see PARAS 818A.1, 3, 5 and 6), a new vacancy is not treated as having occurred by virtue of s 17: s 17(2).

10. Notice of bishop's intention to institute or collate

A bishop may not institute or collate any person to a benefice¹ unless, after the occurrence of a vacancy, (a) a notice² in the prescribed form signed by or on behalf of the bishop is served on the secretary of the parochial church council of the parish³ concerned by the designated officer⁴ or the registrar of the diocese, as the bishop directs, informing the secretary of the bishop's intention to institute or collate that person to the benefice specified in the notice and (b) a period of three weeks has expired since the date of the service of the notice⁵.

Immediately on receipt of the notice, the secretary of the parochial church council must cause the notice or a copy of it to be fixed on or near the principal door of every church in the parish and every building licensed for public worship in the parish and to remain affixed there for two weeks; the secretary must also take such other steps as he thinks expedient for giving publicity to the notice⁶.

1 See PARA 783A.1.

2 As to the prescribed form of notice, see the Patronage (Benefices) Rules 1987, SI 1987/773, Form 17.

3 See PARA 783A.1.

4 'Designated officer' means in relation to a diocese such person as the bishop, after consulting the bishop's council, may designate or, if no person is designated, the secretary of the pastoral committee of the diocese: ibid r 1(1).

5 Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 s 19(1); 1987 Rules r 12(1). The notice must state the name of the priest in full and the ecclesiastical preferments previously held and declared by him and so far as they are known to the bishop: r 12(2).

The 1986 Measure s 19(1) does not apply to a person designated by or selected under a pastoral scheme or order (see PARA 856 et seq) as the incumbent of any benefice: s 19(3).

Where a benefice comprises two or more parishes then, except in a case in which Sch 2 para 19 or 20 applies (see PARA 818A.14) s 19(1) is modified by Sch 2 para 17 by the substitution of 'of each of the parishes' for 'of the parish'.

6 Ibid s 19(2); 1987 Rules r 13(1). At the expiration of the period during which the notice has been published the secretary of the council must sign an indorsement attached to the notice that he has complied with the provisions of r 13 and must return the notice: r 13(2).

11. Bishop acting in place of incumbent patron

Where a benefice¹ ('the ancillary benefice') becomes vacant and it is the turn of the incumbent of another benefice ('the principal benefice'), being the registered patron² of the ancillary benefice, to present to that benefice, then if when the ancillary benefice becomes vacant or at any time during the vacancy and before a notice of presentation³ is sent to the bishop by the incumbent of the principal benefice (a) the principal benefice is or becomes vacant or (b) the principal benefice is under sequestration or (c) the incumbent of the principal benefice is suspended or inhibited from discharging all or any of the duties attached to his preferment, the bishop must discharge in his place the functions of a registered patron⁴.

1 See PARA 783A.1.

2 See PARA 818A.1.

3 Ie under the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 s 13(6) (see PARA 818A.7).

4 Ibid s 20.

12. Exercise of patronage by personal representatives

Where a benefice¹ becomes vacant and either (a) the registered patron² who would have been entitled to present on the vacancy is dead and the person to whom the right of patronage is to be transferred has not been registered³ as a patron of that benefice before the vacancy occurs or (b) the registered patron dies during the vacancy, then the right of presentation to that benefice on that vacancy is exercisable by that patron's personal representatives⁴.

2 See PARA 818A.1.

3 Ie registered under the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 in a register of patrons: ibid s 39(1). See PARA 783A.1.

4 Ibid s 21, which applies notwithstanding anything in s 3(8) (see PARA 802A).

Before exercising their right under s 21, the personal representatives must comply with the requirements of ss 8 and 9 (see PARAS 818A. 2, 3) as if they were the registered patron: s 21.

Section 21 applies to a registered patron of a shared benefice (see PARA 818A.15) other than Her Majesty or the possessor for the time being of the Duchy of Cornwall: s 35(3).

13. Exchange of benefices

Two incumbents may by instrument in writing agree to exchange their benefices¹ if the agreement of the following persons has been obtained: (a) the bishop of the diocese in which each benefice is, (b) any registered patron² whose turn it is to present to either of the benefices and (c) the parochial church council of the parish of each benefice, the agreement having in each case been given by resolution of the council³. This provision applies to a Crown benefice⁴.

1 See PARA 783A.1.

2 See PARA 818A.1.

3 Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 s 22(1). Where a registered patron whose turn it is to present to a benefice has agreed under s 22(1) to an exchange by the incumbent of that benefice, he is treated for the purposes of the 1986 Measure as having exercised that turn: s 22(2).

Where a benefice comprises two or more parishes (see PARA 783A.1) then, except in a case in which Sch 2 para 19 or 20 applies (see PARA 818A.14) s 22(1) is modified by Sch 2 para 18 by the substitution of 'every parish belonging to each benefice' for 'the parish of each benefice'.

4 Ibid s 35(8). See further PARA 818A.15.

14. Special provisions applicable to certain benefices

Certain provisions¹ of the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 Pt II relating to the exercise of rights of presentation have effect subject to modifications in their application to (a) a benefice² which comprises two or more parishes³, (b) a benefice of which the parochial church council of the parish belonging to the benefice is the registered patron⁴ and (c) benefices held in plurality⁵.

Where, by a pastoral scheme⁶ or by a scheme made under the Church Representation Rules⁷, a team council is established in respect of a benefice which comprises more than one parish, the functions of the parochial church councils of those parishes under the 1986 Measure Pt II are exercisable by the team council⁸. Where by a pastoral scheme or by a scheme made under the Church Representation Rules, a joint parochial church council is established for all the parishes of a benefice, the functions of the parochial church councils of those parishes under the 1986 Measure Pt II are exercisable by the joint parochial church council⁹.

Where the parochial church council of the parish belonging to a benefice is the registered patron of the benefice, the 1986 Measure Pt II has effect in relation to that benefice as if the provisions requiring the appointment of parish representatives¹⁰ and the approval of such representatives to the making of an offer to present a priest to the benefice, and any other provisions referring to such representatives were omitted¹¹.

Where two or more benefices are held in plurality, the 1986 Measure Pt II has effect in relation to them as if they were a single benefice comprising two or more parishes¹².

1 The provisions affected are the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 ss 7(4), 9(6), 11, 12, 16(3), 19(1) and 22(1).

15. Crown benefices

Subject to the following exceptions, the foregoing provisions of the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 do not apply to any benefice the patronage or any share in the patronage of which is vested in or exercisable by Her Majesty, whether in right of Her Crown or Her Duchy of Lancaster or otherwise, or is vested in or exercisable by the possessor for the time being of the Duchy of Cornwall, whether Her Majesty or a Duke of Cornwall ('a Crown benefice')¹.

The provisions² relating to the notification of vacancies apply to a Crown benefice, and where the designated officer³ of a diocese receives a notice under those provisions in respect of a Crown benefice then (a) if the patronage is vested wholly in Her Majesty or the possessor for the time being of the Duchy of Cornwall or, in the case of a shared benefice⁴, if the right of presentation on the vacancy in question is exercisable by Her Majesty or the Duke of Cornwall, any parochial church council to which notice of the vacancy is given⁵ may send to Her Majesty or the Duke of Cornwall a statement describing the conditions, needs and traditions of the parish⁶, and a copy of any such statement must be sent to the bishop; (b) if the benefice is a shared benefice and the right of presentation on the vacancy in question is exercisable by a person other than Her Majesty or the Duke of Cornwall, certain provisions⁷ relating to the exercise of rights of presentation apply to the benefice⁸.

Provisions⁹ relating to the exchange of benefices apply to a Crown benefice¹⁰.

1 Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 s 35(1), which is expressed to be without prejudice to the application of ss 28 (see PARA 832), 31 (see PARA 826-830) to the Crown.

Without prejudice to the provisions of the Lord Chancellor (Tenure of Office and Discharge of Ecclesiastical Functions) Act 1974, the 1986 Measure s 35 applies to a benefice the patronage or a share of the patronage of which is vested in the Lord Chancellor as it applies to a Crown benefice; accordingly any reference in s 35 to Her Majesty must be construed, in relation to any benefice the patronage or a share of the patronage of which is vested in the Lord Chancellor, as including a reference to the Lord Chancellor: s 36.

The Patronage (Procedure) Committee has power to make rules with regard to any matter of procedure arising under the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 and in particular with regard to any matter to be prescribed under the Measure¹.

(iv) Disturbance of Patronage

819. How right may be disturbed.

The right of the patron of a benefice may be disturbed by a pretending patron if he presents a clergyman to the benefice; by a clergyman presented by a pretending patron if he demands or obtains institution or admission to the benefice; and by the bishop if he either institutes or admits a clergyman presented by a pretending patron, or, without any adverse presentation having been made, collates a clergyman selected by himself or refuses or unduly delays¹ to institute or admit a clergyman presented by the patron. Where both the patron and a pretending patron make presentations, the church of the benefice becomes litigious². If a clergyman is instituted or admitted to a benefice upon the presentation of one who is not the lawful patron it is called a usurpation.

The remedies for disturbance of right of patronage are an appeal to the court¹, an action in the nature of a *quare impedit*², a suit of *duplex querela*³, and a *jus patronatus*⁴. Pending a dispute as to the patronage the presentation, institution and induction of the clergyman of one of the claimants can be restrained by injunction⁵.

821. Appeal from refusal to institute or admit.

Where a bishop refuses to institute or admit a presentee to a benefice on any ground of unfitness or disqualification of the presentee sufficient in law to justify the refusal¹, except a ground of doctrine or ritual, the bishop must signify in writing the refusal and the grounds to the person who presented and to the presentee, and within one month after the signification either of these persons may require that the matter be heard by a court consisting of the archbishop of the province and a judge of the Supreme Court nominated by the Lord Chancellor². The bishop must be made a party to the proceedings³. The court thus constituted may direct the institution or admission of the presentee or uphold the bishop's refusal, and its judgment is final⁴.

If, in any case to which the foregoing applies, the bishop has signified his refusal in the manner so provided, no proceedings in the nature of quare impedit or duplex querela may be taken in any other court in respect of the refusal⁵.

821 Appeal from refusal to institute or admit

TEXT AND NOTE 2--Now within one month after the signification either of these persons may appeal to the archbishop and the Dean of the Arches and Auditor who must decide whether to uphold the bishop's refusal or direct him to institute or admit the presentee: s 3(1) (amended by Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 s 18(1)(a)). 1926 Rules revoked: Patronage (Benefices) Rules 1987, SI 1987/773 r 16. The Dean of the Arches and Auditor may nominate a chancellor to hear, in his place, an appeal under the 1898 Act s 3 with the archbishop, and where any such nomination is made any reference in s 3(1) or (4) to the dean must be construed accordingly: s 3(6) (amended by 1986 Measure s 18(1)(d)).

'Archbishop' means the archbishop of the province in which the benefice (see PARA 783A.1) is or, where the benefice is in the diocese of the archbishop of that province or the archbishopric of that province is vacant or the archbishop is patron of that benefice, the archbishop of the other province: 1898 Act s 3(7) (amended by 1986 Measure s 18(1)(d)).

TEXT AND NOTE 3--This no longer applies: s 3(1) (amended by 1986 Measure s 18(1)(a)).

TEXT AND NOTE 4--Replaced. Any proceedings on an appeal under the 1898 Act s 3 must be held in public and any party to such proceedings is entitled to appear by an authorised person: s 3(2) (amended by 1986 Measure s 18(1)(b); and Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 21 para 14(a)). 'Authorised person' means a person who, for the purposes of the Legal Services Act 2007, is an authorised person in relation to an activity which constitutes the exercise a right of audience (within the meaning of that Act) (see LEGAL PROFESSIONS vol 65 (2008) PARA 512): 1898 Act s 3(2A) (added by Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 21 para 14(b)).

NOTE 4--Reference to judgment is now to a decision of the archbishop and dean: 1898 Act s 3(4) (amended by 1986 Measure s 18(1)(c)).

822. Action of quare impedit.

An action in the nature of a quare impedit¹ can be brought in the temporal court by the patron where the bishop refuses to institute or admit his presentee on the ground of unfitness in respect of doctrine or ritual², or on the ground of the patron's want of title, or of the church having become litigious³, or if he refuses on some other ground and fails to signify his refusal to the patron and the presentee in writing⁴. If the disturbance arises from the action of the bishop alone, he alone is made defendant to the action⁵, but if another clergyman has been presented by a pretending patron the action must be brought against the pretending patron⁶, and it is important to join his clergyman and the bishop as co-defendants⁷, for if the clergyman has already been instituted or admitted to the benefice and is not joined in the action a judgment in favour of the patron will not extend to remove the clergyman, and the patron, though successful, will therefore lose the present turn⁸.

If the action is not determined within six months after the benefice became void the bishop, unless he is made a party to it, will become entitled to collate to the benefice by lapse⁹.

If successful the plaintiff is entitled to judgment ordering the bishop to admit his presentee¹⁰. If proceedings were begun within six months of his induction, judgment must be given for the removal of any incumbent instituted to fill the vacancy, his institution having been on a presentation made without title¹¹.

Where the Crown presents to a benefice which is full of an incumbent effect must not be given to the presentation without judgment having been given for the removal of the incumbent in proceedings by way of quare impedit brought by or on behalf of the Crown¹².

If the bishop refuses institution or admission on the grounds of doctrine or ritual or, refusing on some other ground sufficient in law, fails to signify his refusal to the patron and the presentee in writing or, apparently, refuses on some ground insufficient in law to justify the refusal¹ the presentee may bring a suit of duplex querela² against the bishop before the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved³. Appeal lies to a Commission of Review⁴. If another clergyman has also been presented he is made a co-defendant⁵. The suit, however, cannot be brought after another clergyman has been inducted to the benefice, since a temporal right has been then acquired which can only be questioned in a temporal court⁶.

A jus patronatus is a process instituted by the bishop, if he so thinks fit, at the request of either of the parties claiming to be patrons, or either of the clergymen presented by them, when the church is litigious¹ or, when it is not litigious, if he has a doubt as to the title of the patron claiming to present². 825. Limitation of time for recovery.

Actions to enforce rights of patronage are barred, and the rights themselves extinguished¹, at the end of whichever of the two following periods is the longer: (1) a period during which three clergymen in succession have held the benefice adversely to the right of patronage it is sought to enforce²; or (2) a period of sixty years during which the benefice has been held adversely³. Moreover, in no case may an action be brought to enforce the right after the expiration of a period of 100 years during which the benefice has been held adversely to right or to the right of some person entitled to a preceding estate or interest or an undivided share or alternate right of presentation or gift held or claimed under the same title⁴.

(v) Lapse of Patronage

826. Lapse of patronage by no-exercise.

If the patron of a benefice neglects to present to it within the allowed time, the patronage for that turn lapses to the bishop; if a bishop neglects to collate to a benefice within the allowed time after the patronage has lapsed to him or, being the patron, within the allowed time after it has become void, the patronage for that turn lapses to the archbishop of the province; and if an archbishop neglects to present to a benefice within the allowed time after the patronage has lapsed to him or, being the patron, within the allowed time after it has become void, the patronage for that turn lapses to the Queen as supreme patron¹. The patronage of a benefice which is originally in the Queen or has come to her or to a preceding Sovereign by lapse is not lost by any delay in its exercise².

The time allowed to the patron, the bishop or the archbishop is in each case six calendar months³.

Where any benefice is dissolved by a pastoral scheme⁴, or where a chapel of ease becomes a parish church by virtue of a pastoral scheme, the rights of patronage of the benefice and any rights of patronage of the chapel of ease cease to exist⁵.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/5. BENEFICES/(2) PATRONAGE/(v) Lapse of Patronage/827. Calculation of time.

827. Calculation of time.

The bishop must notify the patron of a benefice of a vacancy or impending vacancy in the benefice¹. If he notifies the patron of an impending vacancy time begins to run, in cases of death or cession², from the actual vacation. In cases of death this is from the date of death, except where the incumbent dies abroad, in which case the time is to be reckoned from the day on which the patron might reasonably have known of it³. In cases of cession, the vacation occurs on admission to the benefice or cathedral preferment⁴.

If the bishop notifies the patron of an actual vacancy time begins to run from the date of notification⁵. Similarly in cases of resignation or deprivation, even though the bishop may have notified an impending vacancy, the time begins to run only from the day when the patron receives notice from the bishop of the resignation or deprivation⁶. Where the bishop is the patron time begins to run from the date of the vacancy except where the bishop is the patron time begins to run from the date of the vacancy except where the incumbent dies abroad, in which case it is reckoned from the day on which the patron might reasonably have known of it⁷.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/5. BENEFICES/(2) PATRONAGE/(v) Lapse of Patronage/828. Suspension of running of time.

828. Suspension of running of time.

The running of time for lapse is suspended if the bishop collates or the archbishop presents before the right has lapsed to him¹, or if the bishop is made a party to an action in good faith in quare impedit or a suit of duplex querela², but is not suspended by a feigned and baseless action in quare impedit brought against himself³, or by an action in quare impedit to which he is not a party⁴. The bishop cannot bring about a lapse by delaying his examination or acceptance of the presentee⁵, and in reckoning the time for lapse no account is to be taken, in the case of the first and second presentations to a benefice by a patron in respect of the same vacancy, of the period between the patron's presentation and the bishop's refusal to institute or admit the presentee, or of the period between the bishop's refusal to institute or admit and the court's decision⁶, upon such refusal; nor, in the case of a bishop having a right to collate to a benefice, of the period between the service of the notice on the churchwardens⁷ and the expiration of a month from that service⁸. If the bishop withholds his approval of a presentee by virtue of his powers⁹, the running of time is suspended during any period during which the bishop's decision is under review by the archbishop¹⁰.

Time does not run for the purposes of lapse when the exercise of the right of presentation has been suspended¹¹, or when the right is restricted¹² pending the making of pastoral schemes and orders relating to the creation, alteration or dissolution of benefices, the holding of benefices in plurality and the establishment, termination or alteration of team and group ministries¹³. When the running of time for lapse is postponed as against the bishop, the periods for lapse to the archbishop and the Queen are correspondingly postponed¹⁴.

If, after the patronage has lapsed to the bishop, the patron presents before the bishop collates, the presentation is as effectual as if it had been made within the allowed time¹, and the same applies if the bishop allows the patronage to lapse to the archbishop and the patron presents before a presentation is made by the archbishop². After lapse to the archbishop, however, a bishop loses his right to collate by lapse, since his right is merely temporary and accidental³. After lapse to the Queen the patron cannot defeat the Queen's right by a prior presentation; it will be overridden by a subsequent presentation of the Queen, and if the patron's presentee is admitted to the benefice the Queen may remove him by an action in quare impedit and present notwithstanding the admission⁴. If the patron's presentee is admitted and is not so removed during his incumbency, however, the Queen's right is lost, for it was only for that turn⁵. If the Queen dies before exercising the right it will descend to her successor⁶.

(vi) Reorganisation Areas

831. Patronage in reorganisation areas.

Under the Reorganisation Areas Measure 1944¹ the Church Commissioners were empowered to declare as ecclesiastical reorganisation areas parishes which had suffered war damage or in which, by reason of causes attributable to the second world war or as a result of planning schemes, material changes in the number or situation of the population had occurred². The commissioners could make reorganisation schemes for such areas on proposals received by them from the bishop and the diocesan reorganisation committee³ before 21st March 1957⁴. Schemes confirmed by the commissioners and not disapproved by either House of Parliament had the force of law⁵. The schemes could provide for the dissolution of a benefice⁶, so that the right of patronage of that benefice was extinguished: but further provision might have been made to modify existing rights of patronage or to create valid new ones⁷. Where a reorganisation scheme provided for the formation of a new benefice it had to make provision for the rights of patronage of that benefice⁸, and such rights could not be sold or otherwise transferred for valuable consideration⁹. Interested patrons agree that a reorganisation scheme should provide for the exchange, surrender or assignment of their patronage rights in order to facilitate any rearrangement of pastoral supervision to be effected by the scheme¹⁰.

When a benefice in a reorganisation area became vacant, or was vacant when the patron received notice of the order declaring the area to be a reorganisation area, the patron might not present to the benefice without the bishop's consent until after 21st March 1957¹¹. If the bishop withheld his consent he had to make such provision as he deemed necessary for the cure of souls during the vacancy, after consulting the patron and the parochial church council¹². Whilst this restriction on the right of patronage was in force, time did not run for the purposes of lapse¹³.

(i) Simony

832. Penalties and disability on simony.

Simony, so called from Simon Magus¹, includes² the buying or selling of holy orders or of an ecclesiastical benefice or admission to a benefice³. The procuring or acceptance of the presentation, institution, collation, induction or admission to a benefice in consideration of any money, profit or benefit, direct or indirect, or of any promise, agreement or assurance of or for such money, profit or benefit is simoniacal and void⁴. Where it takes place the Queen may present or bestow the benefice for that turn, and every person and body giving or taking any such money, profit or benefit, or making or taking any such promise, agreement or assurance is liable, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding £100⁵, and the person who so corruptly procures or accepts the benefice becomes thenceforth disabled in law from holding it⁶. Patrons and clergymen innocent of simony are not to be prejudiced by former simoniacal presentations or promotions⁷, and leases made in good faith by simonists for valuable consideration to tenants without notice of the simony are valid⁸.

1 See Acts 9:18, 19.

2 The exact limits of the offence of simony in English law are perhaps not settled. Any trafficking for money in spiritual things has at times been called simony: see inter alia Dictionary of Christian Antiquities, Simony.

An incumbent who sells a curacy is liable to deprivation: Bishop of St David's v Lucy (1699) Carth 484. If the simoniacally presented clergyman has been admitted to the benefice and does not voluntarily resign, he may be removed by an action in quare impedit (R v Bishop of Norwich, Cole and Saker supra), or by an action of possession brought by the Sovereign's presentee after admission to the benefice (Doe d Watson v Fletcher (1828) 8 B & C 25).

A transaction may be simoniacal in the sense that it is tainted with simony and therefore void even though neither the patron nor the presentee is a party or privy to it¹. If, however, the presentee is not cognisant of it he is not himself guilty of simony, even if he is simoniacally promoted². A contract to pay money in consideration of being promoted to a benefice is void and cannot be enforced³.

The following acts have been held to be simoniacal: unless authorised by statute, the giving of a bond by a presentee on his presentation that he will resign the benefice at the request of the patron⁴; an agreement before presentation to give up a claim to some of the emoluments of the benefice⁵; and the selling of a curacy⁶. (ii) Presentation to Benefice

835. Filling of benefice by presentation.

A vacancy or impending vacancy in a benefice must be notified by the bishop to the patron and the parochial church council¹. Thereafter, except where the bishop collates by reason either of being himself the patron or of the right of presentation lapsing to him², the first legal step towards filling a vacant benefice³ is the presentation of a fit clergyman to the bishop by the patron or other person entitled to present⁴, although a person designated or selected under a pastoral scheme or order as the incumbent of a benefice need not be presented or collated⁵, and the first incumbent of a new benefice created by the union of two or more benefices under a pastoral scheme is deemed to have been admitted if he was the incumbent of any of the constituent benefices immediately before the union⁶.

Where the patron is under a legal obligation to present some other person's nominee a nomination of the clergyman by that person to the patron precedes the presentation⁷. In other cases the patron selects the presentee.

1 Benefices (Exercise of Rights of Presentation) Measure 1931, s 1; Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C9 para 1: see PARA 818 ante. Subject to any provisions in the scheme for his designation or selection, this Measure applies to the presentation of the first incumbent of a new benefice created by a pastoral scheme as it applies on a vacancy in a benefice: Pastoral Measure 1968, s 32 (10), Sch. 3 para 5 (2). For the meaning of 'benefice', see PARA 768 note 1 ante. A notice given by the bishop to the person who is or will be (having regard to the scheme or order) entitled to exercise the right of presentation and to the parochial church councils concerned of the coming into force of the scheme or order is a notice for this purpose: Sch. 3 para 5 (2). As to the position where a team or group ministry is established, see PARA 870 post. The Measure of 1931 does not apply to guild churches: see PARA 601 ante.

2 See PARA 846 post. As to lapse, see PARA 826 et seq ante.

3 The benefice must be actually vacant: see PARA 836 text to note 2 post. As to the restriction on the right of presentation where a pastoral scheme provides for the creation of a new benefice by union, see the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 23 (1), and PARA 869 post.

NOTES--1968 Measure consolidated in Pastoral Measure 1983.

TEXT AND NOTE 1--1931 Measure s 1 replaced by the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 s 7, which requires the bishop to notify the designated officer of the diocese, who must notify the registered patron and the secretary of the parochial church council. As to s 7, see PARA 818A.1.

1968 Measure s 32(10), Sch 3 para 5(2), as consolidated in 1983 Measure s 32(10), Sch 3 para 6(2) repealed: 1986 Measure Sch 5.

TEXT AND NOTE 2--As to the abrogation of the rules as to lapse, see ibid s 31 (see PARA 826-830).

NOTE 3--See now 1983 Measure s 24(1), which applies where a pastoral scheme provides for the creation of a new benefice, by union or otherwise; see PARA 869.

TEXT AND NOTE 5--Now a person so designated or selected need not be presented to the benefice, nor is the bishop required to nominate that person as the person to whom he collates the benefice; 1983 Measure s 24(4), Sch 3 para 5(1).

TEXT AND NOTE 6--Now where a pastoral scheme creates a new benefice, transfers a parish from one benefice to another, or establishes a team ministry for the area of a benefice, then if the first incumbent of that new benefice or the first rector of that ministry is so designated or selected, he is, unless the bishop otherwise directs, deemed to have been admitted to that new benefice or to the benefice for the area of which the team ministry is established, as the case may be, and no fees are payable; in any other case, 1983 Measure s 75(1) (see PARA 849) applies: Sch 3 para 5(2) (amended by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 Sch 5 para 20). Where a pastoral scheme or order provides for the holding in plurality of two or more benefices, then if the first incumbent who is to hold all the benefices concerned was immediately before the scheme or order comes into operation the incumbent of any of those benefices, he is, unless the bishop otherwise directs, deemed to have been admitted to the other benefice or benefices, and no fees are payable; in any other case, 1983 Measure s 75(2) (see PARA 849) applies: Sch 3 para 5(3).

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/5. BENEFICES/(3) FILLING OF BENEFICES/(ii) Presentation to Benefice/836. Mode of presenting.

836. Mode of presenting.

A presentation is made when it is exhibited to the bishop¹, and cannot be made until the church and benefice are actually void².

The presentation ought to be to the church of the benefice, and the document or announcement should show whether the benefice became void by death, cession, resignation or deprivation³. It may be made by word of mouth⁴ except where a corporation aggregate is patron, in which case it must be under the common seal⁵. It is usually in writing, in the nature of a letter missive to the bishop presenting to him a clergyman for admission to the vacant benefice⁶, and is not complete until it is sent or delivered to the bishop by the patron⁷.

An instrument purporting to be a grant by the Queen of a benefice in her patronage to a clergyman is a good presentation without any actual words of presentation⁸. She may present generally without specifying by what title, but if she recites a particular title and has no such title the presentation is void⁹. The presentation may be either under the Great Seal or under the privy seal¹⁰.

1 Rud v Bishop of Lincoln (1623) Hut 66. A presentation refused by the bishop and established by quare impedit can be afterwards again exhibited to the bishop, since the benefice, if full before, is made void by the judgment in the quare impedit; Rud v Bishop of Lincoln supra.

837. When presentation is complete.

A presentation by a spiritual patron is complete when it is received by the bishop, and cannot afterwards be varied or revoked¹ although, if his presentee is on good grounds refused by the bishop, he can make a fresh presentation². A presentation by a lay patron other than the Sovereign, however, is not complete until the institution or admission of the presentee, and before this takes place he may either (1) vary his presentation by presenting one or more additional clergymen, in which case the bishop may elect which of them he will institute or admit; or (2) revoke his presentation and present another clergyman, in which case the bishop must institute or admit the later presentee. If his presentee is refused by the bishop he can make a fresh presentation within the permitted time³. A presentation by the Sovereign is not complete until induction; until then she may, even after institution or admission, make a fresh presentation⁴, and her later presentation, even if it does not expressly revoke the former, has the effect of revoking it so that the bishop cannot elect to act upon it⁵.

838. Death of patron or presentee.

The death of the Queen's presentee before he is inducted or of another patron's presentee before he is instituted or admitted revokes the presentation¹. If the Queen dies before her presentee is inducted her successor can revoke the presentation; if another patron dies before his presentee is instituted or admitted, however, the presentation is not revocable, and if his personal representatives make another presentation the bishop may elect between the two presentees².

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/5. BENEFICES/(3) FILLING OF BENEFICES/(ii) Presentation to Benefice/839. Who may be presented.

839. Who may be presented.

The presentee must be a fit person¹, namely a person (1) of the canonical age, and in priest's orders by episcopal ordination or who can obtain such ordination before he is instituted or admitted²; (2) of sufficient learning³; and (3) against whose orthodoxy and morals no charge can be established⁴.

The bishop is at liberty to refuse a presentee if at the date of the presentation not more than three years have elapsed since he was ordained deacon⁵. The bishop may also in his discretion refuse a presentee who has not previously held a benefice or the office of vicar in a team ministry on the ground that he has had no, or less than three years' experience as a full-time parochial minister⁶. Such a refusal and the reason for it must be signified by the bishop to the person presenting to the benefice and to the presentee, either of whom may within a month after the signification appeal in writing to the archbishop of the relevant province, who may either uphold the bishop's decision or direct him to institute or admit the presentee⁷.

As regards sufficiency of learning, the bishop is the judge⁸, but if after examination and inquiry he decides that the presentee is deficient in this respect, he must give notice to the patron of his decision and of the particulars of the deficiency, the adequacy of which is subject to judicial review⁹. As regards orthodoxy, it is not enough that the bishop should notify that he finds the presentee schismatic or unfit, but he must specify particulars, and his decision is liable to be judicially overruled¹⁰. As regards moral life, the presentee must produce a sufficient testimony of his former good life and behaviour, if the bishop requires it¹¹. It is not sufficient for the bishop to refuse him on the general ground that he is criminous¹². The notice of refusal must specify the particulars of his moral unfitness¹², but any cause which would be sufficient to deprive an incumbent is a sufficient ground for refusing a presentee¹³.

The presentee may be refused on the ground that he is unfit for the discharge of the duties of the benefice by reason of physical or mental infirmity or incapacity, pecuniary embarrassment of a serious character, grave misconduct, or neglect of duty in an ecclesiastical office, evil life, having by his conduct caused grave scandal concerning his moral character since his ordination or having, with reference to the presentation, been knowingly party or privy to any invalid¹⁴ transaction or agreement¹⁵. He may also be refused if, at the date of the vacancy, not more than one year has elapsed since a transfer¹⁶ of the right of patronage of the benefice unless it is proved that the transfer was not effected in view of the probability of a vacancy occurring within the year¹⁷.

The bishop is allowed twenty-eight days for inquiring and informing himself of the sufficiency and qualifications of a presentee¹⁸.

When a presentee has been refused he cannot be presented again by the patron in respect of the same vacancy¹⁹.

841. Refusal when presentor has no title or church is litigious.

The bishop has the right, and ought, to refuse, or perhaps suspend, the admission of a presentee where the person presenting appears to have no title¹, or when the church is litigious². If the bishop admits a clergyman on one of the presentations to a litigious church, or admits a clergyman on presentation when a caveat against his so doing has been entered by another person, he will be liable as a disturber in the event of the title of the presentor being disproved. In either case he ought to pause until the conflicting claimants or their clergymen either take legal proceedings to pray him to award a jus patronatus³ to inquire into and determine the right of patronage⁴. If, however, the bishop institutes upon a void presentation the presentee thereby acquires the benefice, by the bishop's collation, against all persons except the lawful patron⁵.

(iii) Admission to Benefice

842. Admission.

The bishop admits a clergyman to a benefice in respect of the cure of souls (which is its spiritual part) either by institution after presentation, or by collation where the bishop is the patron or acquires the right of appointment by lapse¹. In the case of a perpetual curacy admission was by licence, whether a presentation had been made to the benefice or the bishop was himself the patron².

¹ Strictly speaking, admission is merely the bishop's declaration that he approves a presentee as a fit person to serve the cure of the church or benefice: Co Litt 344a; Watson, Clergyman's Law (4th Edn) 154. The word is more commonly used to signify generally the actual committal of the cure to the clerk, however, and was used particularly for the committal of the cure in the case of a perpetual curacy by licence (see the text and note 2 infra) as distinguishable from institution or collation. As to the simoniacal admission of a clerk to a benefice, see PARAS 832-834 ante. As to refusal to admit, see PARAS 821, 822 ante. The term 'collation' is used in two different senses in relation to the bishop's right of patronage. He may be said to collate the benefice to the priest (as in the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C10, par. 5), or to collate the priest to the benefice (as in the Benefices Act 1898, s 2 (2)). The former appears to be the earlier, although perhaps now the less common, usage: see Oxford English Dictionary, 'collate' and 'collation'

843. Notice of intention to admit.

The bishop must not collate, institute or admit any person to a benefice until the expiration of one month after notice of his intention has been served on the churchwardens of the parish, who must publish it¹. The notice must be sent to the churchwardens by registered letter addressed to them as such². Immediately they receive it they must fix it on the principal door or notice board of the church or chapel of the benefice or, if there is more than one, of such one of the churches or chapels as the bishop determines, where it is left fixed for one calendar month, and take such other steps as they think expedient for giving publicity to the notice³. At the end of the month they must return it to the bishop with a certificate that they have complied with the directions as to fixing it³.

845. Institution.

Admission of a presentee to the cure of souls and spiritualities of a rectory or vicarage is by institution by the bishop or, if he is for some grave and urgent cause unable to give institution himself, by his commissary¹. This act, which admits the clergyman to his office, may be performed either within or outside the diocese, and the particular seal used for the instrument of institution is immaterial². The institution and the induction³ normally take place at the same time at a service in the church of the benefice⁴. After the institution and induction the bishop presents the new incumbent to the congregation, on whose behalf the churchwardens welcome him. It is customary for the incumbent to be led to the font, prayer desk, lectern, pulpit and sanctuary where he is reminded of his duties in the conduct of public worship and the ministry of the Word and sacraments.

1 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C10 paras 5-7. The clergyman kneels before the bishop while he reads the words of institution from a written instrument, drawn beforehand for the purpose, with the episcopal seal appendant, which the presentee holds in both hands: see 1 Burn's Ecclesiastical Law (4th Edn) 168; Revised Canons Ecclesiastical Canon C10 para 6. The bishop then delivers the instrument of institution to the presentee. The institution of a person not in holy orders is a nullity: R v Ellis (1888) 16 Cox CC 469.

Where the bishop is himself patron of the rectory or vicarage, he institutes without a previous presentation, but although the act is in the same form (as where the person instituted has been presented by any other patron) it is commonly called collation¹.

¹ Gib Cod 813; 1 Burn's Ecclesiastical Law (4th Edn) 164. It is also collation if the bishop institutes upon a void presentation: Watson, Clergyman's Law (4th Edn) 221. 847. Effect of institution or collation.

By institution or collation the cure of souls of the benefice is committed to the clergyman. He is admitted to his office to pray and preach, and he is then bound to discharge his duties as incumbent and is liable for any neglect of them. He may also enter into the glebe and receive the profits of the benefice, but until induction he has no title to sue for or deal with them. After presentation and institution the church is regarded in law as full, except as against the Queen, against whom it is not full until after induction, and except also in the case of an exchange, which is not complete until induction¹. Collation, if not rightful, however, does not render the church full, and is only a temporary provision for celebration of divine service until the lawful patron presents².

1 As to exchange, see PARA 927 et seq post. Pending a dispute as to the patronage of the benefice the institution of the presentee of one of the claimants can be restrained by injunction: Nicholson v Knapp (1838) 9 Sim 326; Greenslade v Dare (1853) 17 Beav 502.

(iv) Induction

849. Induction.

The induction of an instituted or collated clergyman into the church and into the temporalities of the benefice is performed by the archdeacon¹, to whom the bishop issues a mandate for the purpose, or by some person to whom the archdeacon by precept delegates the duty². The person who inducts takes the clergyman by the hand and lays it upon the key or ring of the church door while he pronounces the words of induction, after which the inducted clergyman tolls a bell to make the induction public³. The mandate is then returned to the bishop with a certificate of the induction indorsed upon it⁴. Induction normally takes place at the same time as institution⁵.

Where an appointment is made to a benefice in the area of which there are two or more parish churches the bishop may direct in which parish church the incumbent is to be inducted, and after induction in that church the incumbent is deemed to have been inducted in both or all of the parish churches situated in the area of the benefice and to have been admitted to the benefice⁶.

It is not necessary, by reason only of the substitution of another church for a parish church by a pastoral scheme or order⁷, for the incumbent of the benefice to be inducted in the new parish church or to comply with any other process or form of law⁸.

1 By prescription or composition others may have the right to induct instead of the archdeacon: Gib Cod 815; 1 Burn's Ecclesiastical Law (4th Edn) 172. As to the simoniacal induction of a clergyman to a benefice, see PARA 833 ante.

2 See the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C11 para 1. If the archdeacon is unable to make the induction himself he must issue a general mandate for the induction to all and singular ministers beneficed or licensed within the archdeaconry by virtue of which any such minister may make the induction on his behalf: Canon C11 para 3. If such a mandate is issued induction made by a clergyman not resident within the archdeaconry will be good: Dean's Case (1609) Noy 134. A mandate for induction is not revoked by the accession of a new bishop before it is executed: Robinson v Wolley (1678) T Jo 78, Ex Ch.

3 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C11 para 2. No particular form of induction is required. If necessary the hand may be laid on the church or churchyard wall: Canon C11 para 2. Induction may also be made by delivery of a clod or turf and twing of the glebe: Gib Cod 815; Degge, Parson's Counsellor, Part I, c. 2, pp. 7, 8; 1 Johnson's Clergyman's Vade Mecum 84.

851. Public declaration of assent.

It was formerly necessary for a clergyman, having been instituted or collated to a benefice, publicly to read the Thirty-Nine Articles and make the declaration of assent on the first Sunday on which he officiated¹, but this is no longer required².

1 See the Clerical Subscription Act 1865, ss 1, 7 (repealed). Failure to do so involved absolute forfeiture of the benefice or perpetual curacy: s 7 (repealed); see Green's Case (1602) 6 Co Rep 29a. This applied also to incumbents of new benefices created under a pastoral scheme or order: see the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 75 (2) (repealed), Sch. 3 para 4 (2). See also Brown v Spence (1663) 1 Keb 590; Powel v Milbank (1772) 3 Wils 355; Chapman v Beard (1797) 3 Anst 942.

However, every minister licensed to a stipendiary curacy must, on the first Sunday on which he officiates in the church or one of the churches in which he is licensed to serve or, in the case of a guild church, in that church on such weekday as the bishop may approve, publicly and openly make the declaration of assent (see the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C15 para 1 (substituted by Amending Canon No. 4)) at the time of divine service in the presence of the congregation: Canon C15 para 4 (substituted by Amending Canon No. 4)).

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/5. BENEFICES/(4) PLURALITIES/852. Pluralities before 1st April 1969.

(4) PLURALITIES

852. Pluralities before 1st April 1969.

The position before the date of the coming into force of the Pastoral Measure 1968¹ was that, except insofar as was specifically permitted by law, no incumbent could hold more than one benefice at a time². The exceptions permitted³ were pluralities allowed by licence or dispensation from the Archbishop of Canterbury⁴ or those authorised by a bishop's order⁵.

1 le on 1st April 1969: see the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 96 (3); London Gazette, 7th February 1969.

2 See the Pluralities Act 1838, s 2 (repealed).

3 In addition to those here specified deans and other clergy holding cathedral preferments were in certain circumstances permitted to hold benefices as well as those preferments (cf. ibid s 2 (repealed)), and suffragan bishops might also (and often did) hold benefices (see the Suffragan Bishops Act 1534, s 7, which appears to have been saved by the Pluralities Act 1838, s 132, and is saved by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1969, s 4 (2)).

4 Thus a clergyman holding such a licence or dispensation might hold together any two benefices the churches of which were within four miles of one another by the nearest road or footpath or by an accustomed ferry, and the annual value of one of which did not exceed £400: Pluralities Measure 1930, s 1 (repealed); Pluralities Act 1838, s 129. A condition in a bequest that a benefice should not be held in plurality is not broken by its union with another benefice: Re Macnamara, Hewitt v Jeans (1911) 104 LT 771. Two churches in different civil parishes may constitute one benefice: Carpenter v Laundon Overseers (1922) 127 LT 555, DC. For deductions which might be made in computing the value, see the Pluralities Act 1850, s 4 (repealed). For the procedure on application for the licence or dispensation, see the Pluralities Act 1850, s 4 (repealed). For the procedure on application for the licence or dispensation, see the Pluralities Act 1838, ss 6, 7, 9 (repealed).

Alternatively the bishop might forward to the Church Commissioners a recommendation of the diocesan pastoral committee that two or more benefices might be held in plurality, and the Church Commissioners thereupon had to request the bishop to issue a commission under which commissioners could recommend that the benefices be so held; if the bishop, the Church Commissioners, any other bishop affected and the patrons concerned approved, the recommendation was transmitted to the Archbishop of Canterbury who might grant a licence to the clergyman concerned: Pluralities Measure 1930, s 2; Pastoral Reorganisation Measure 1949, s 1 (both repealed). There was no limitation on the number of benefices to be held or to be served in one day, on their distance apart or in their annual value: Pluralities Measure 1930, s 2 (3) (repealed).

5 Thus the bishop and the diocesan pastoral committee might forward to the Church Commissioners provisional proposals that two or more dioceses should be held in plurality, and the committee; after considering any representations made by interested parties the commissioners might approve the draft order which might then be made by the bishop, authorising the incumbent to hold the benefices concerned subject to conditions, with directions as to the selection of the first incumbent and the future exercise of the right of patronage: Pastoral Reorganisation Measure 1949, ss 3, 5 (repealed). There was no limitation on the number of benefices to be held or to be served in one day, on their distance apart or on their annual value: s 5 (8) (repealed).

The bishop's order remained valid until the next vacation of the benefices or until revoked by him: see s 5 (1), (9), (11) (repealed). He might by subsequent order vary the original order, but if this would adversely affect the existing incumbent's rights his consent was required: s 5 (11) (repealed). The bishop might direct what services might be omitted in the churches concerned (s. 6; Marriage Act 1949, s 76, Sch. 5, Part II (both repealed)), and might direct where banns were to be published and marriages solemnised, but no person might be deprived of the right to be married in any particular church and a person might be married in one church even if the banns had been called, by the bishop's directions, in another church (s. 23).

853. Pluralities under the Pastoral Measure 1968.

No person may now hold benefices¹ in plurality except in pursuance of a pastoral scheme or order² or under provisions in force before 1st April 1969³. No person may hold a cathedral preferment with a benefice or two or more benefices authorised to be held in plurality by a pastoral scheme or order unless the cathedral statutes so provide or allow⁴, and a cathedral preferment may not be held in more than one cathedral⁵.

A pastoral scheme or order may provide for the holding in plurality of any two or more benefices subject to such conditions, if any, as may be specified⁶. Except with the leave of the bishop⁷ the incumbent of two or more benefices held in plurality may not resign any of those benefices without resigning the other or others and, if the bishop grants leave and there are at least two other benefices, the resignation does not affect the holding in plurality of those other benefices⁸.

The provisions of a pastoral scheme for the holding of benefices in plurality continue in force, unless the scheme otherwise provides, during a vacancy⁹. They may, however, be terminated, when the bishop gives notice of a vacancy or impending vacancy¹⁰, in one of two ways: (1) by the bishop, who may state in the notice that the provisions are to be terminated and must then serve the notice on the patrons¹¹ of the benefices concerned and those who will become patrons on the termination of the plurality provisions¹²; or (2) by any interested parochial church council which may, within twenty-eight days after the service of the notice, pass a resolution that the provisions are to be terminated and must then notify the resolution to the bishop, who notifies the other interested parochial church councils, together with the patrons and those who will become patrons on the termination of the plurality provisions; the bishop must then serve a fresh notice on all the councils and patrons concerned, which has effect in substitution for the previous notice¹³. In either case those provisions then cease to have effect on the vacancy or the service of the notice, whichever is the later¹⁴. The termination of these provisions is without prejudice to any provisions relating to the future exercise of the rights of patronage of the benefices concerned in the event of a renewal of the plurality¹⁵.

A draft order giving effect to the proposals is then prepared by the commissioners⁴ and is duly sealed and made⁵.

The proposals made by the bishop may provide for including among the benefices to be held in plurality one or more benefices from a diocese other than his own diocese, but the consent of the bishop of the other diocese, who must consult the pastoral committee of his diocese, must be obtained before the consents of the interested parties in that other diocese are sought⁶. 855. Presentation to benefices held in plurality.

A pastoral scheme or order providing for the holding of two or more benefices¹ in plurality may provide for the exercise of rights of patronage of those benefices, including the exercise of those rights on a renewal of the provisions for plurality². Such a scheme or order may particularly provide for the designation or selection of the incumbent who is to hold all the benefices concerned and of the incumbent of any such benefice falling vacant before all the benefices concerned come to be held in plurality³. Provision may also be made for restricting the rights of presentation on the occurrence of such a vacancy³.

If, on the date of the coming into operation of any provision for a pastoral scheme for the holding of benefices in plurality, any of the benefices concerned is not vacant and the existing incumbent is not to hold the benefice by virtue of a designation by the scheme or any appointment made under it, the benefice is deemed to be vacated on that date⁴.

(i) Introduction

856. The Pastoral Measure 1968.

The Pastoral Measure 1968 provides for changes in benefices and also deals with pluralities¹, the creation of new parishes, the establishment of team and group ministries, pastoral reorganisation and incidental matters². New pastoral committees are established by the Measure, which makes provision for the making of pastoral schemes and orders to carry out (inter alia) their recommendations³. Redundant churches are also dealt with by the Measure⁴.

The Measure extends to the whole of the provinces of Canterbury and York, except the Channel Islands and the diocese of Sodor and Man⁵. In general guild churches are also excluded from the operation of the Measure⁶. The Measure came into force on 1st April 1969⁷.

The provisions of the Measure apply to churches provided under any private or local Act⁸ passed before that date, and any provision of such an Act may be amended or revoked by a scheme made under the Measure if it appears to the Church Commissioners to be a provision inconsistent with, or rendered unnecessary by, the scheme or the provisions of the Measure applicable⁹.

1 As to pluralities, see PARA 853 ante.

2 See the Pastoral Measure 1968, Part II (ss. 16-41).

3 Ibid Part I (ss. 1-15).

4 Ibid Part III (ss. 42-66).

5 Ibid s 96 (2). The Measure may, however, be applied to the Channel Islands as defined in the Channel Islands (Church Legislation) Measure 1931 and the Channel Islands (Church Legislation) Measure 1931 (Amendment) Measure 1957 or either of them (see PARA 388 note 4 ante), in accordance with those Measures: Pastoral Measure 1968, s 96 (2). It also enables a scheme, and any Order in Council confirming it, made for the purposes of so applying the Measure to repeal the legislation replaced by the Measure as it applies to the Channel Islands or either of them: s 96 (2).

6 Ibid s 92 (6). As to guild churches, see PARA 597 et seq ante. A declaration of redundancy may, however, be made by pastoral scheme with respect to a guild church (other than St Lawrence Jewry) (s. 92 (1)) and consequential provisions may be made as set out in s 92 (2)-(5).

7 I.e. the day jointly appointed by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York under ibid s 96 (3), and notified in the London Gazette dated 7th February 1969.

8 Any reference in the Pastoral Measure 1968 to any Act or Measure is to be construed as a reference to it as subsequently amended: s 90 (4).

9 Ibid s 93. Where it appears to the commissioners that a proposed pastoral or redundancy scheme will affect the rights (other than the patronage rights) of any person under such an Act, a copy of the draft scheme must in each case be served on him together with a notice under s 5 (1) inviting representations (see PARA 878 post): s 93 proviso. In the case of a pastoral scheme, he is then deemed to be an interested party in relation to the scheme: s 93 proviso. For the meaning of 'interested party', see PARA 862 note 2 post.

The subjects now covered by the Pastoral Measure 1968 were previously covered by the Pluralities Act 1838¹, the Pluralities Act 1887² and the Pluralities Measure 1930³, which all restricted the holding of benefices in plurality. The Pluralities Act 1838 also dealt with the disunion of united benefices and its provisions concerning both that and pluralities have now been repealed, although other parts of the Act being of general application remain. The procedure for union of benefices was found in the Union of Benefices Acts 1860 and 1898 and the Union of Benefices Measures 1923 to 1952⁴, now all repealed⁵. After 1943 the creation of new parishes was governed by the New Parishes Measure 1943⁶, which simplified the previous law.

The Diocesan Reorganisation Committees Measure 1941⁷ and the Reorganisation Areas Measure 1944⁷ set up diocesan reorganisation committees to deal initially with war damage to churches and, under the later Measure, to make proposals concerning the reorganisation, endowment and staffing of parishes in certain areas, notably those in which there had been extensive war damage or a marked change in population. The Pastoral Reorganisation Measure 1949⁷ established in every diocese a pastoral committee, whose composition might be the same as that of the diocesan reorganisation committee, to make recommendations after a general survey of the diocese with particular regard to the matter of union of benefices.

- 1 The Pluralities Act 1838, ss 2-27, 95 (part), 106, were repealed by the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 95, Sch. 9.
- 2 The Pluralities Act 1887 was repealed in its entirety by the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 95, Sch. 9.
- 3 The Pluralities Measure 1930 was repealed in its entirety by the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 95, Sch. 9.
- 4 The Acts cited by this collective title were the Union of Benefices Measure 1923; Union of Benefices (Amendment) Measure 1936 (see s 18); and Union of Benefices (Disused Churches) Measure 1952 (see s 4 (2)).
- 5 Pastoral Measure 1968, s 95, Sch. 9.
- 6 The New Parishes Measure 1943, ss 1-12, 22-27, 30 (which dealt with the formation of new parishes and related matters, as to which see PARA 788 ante) were repealed by the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 95, Sch. 9.
- 7 These Measures were all repealed in their entirety by ibid s 95, Sch. 9.

858. Savings.

Any scheme, order or instrument made or sealed before 1st April 1969¹, or afterwards by virtue of the transitional provisions², under the Reorganisation Areas Measure 1944³, the Pastoral Reorganisation Measure 1949 or the New Parishes Measure 1943⁴, continues to have effect, insofar as it is not revoked or spent⁵. The Pastoral Measure 1968 applies to such schemes, orders or instruments as though they had been made under that Measure, subject to necessary modifications⁶ and to any express provision of the scheme or order⁷.

1 I.e. the date of the coming into force of the Pastoral Measure 1968: see PARA 856 ante.

2 See ibid s 94, Sch. 8 para 1, and PARA 859 post.

3 The Reorganisation Areas Measure 1944, s 15, continues to apply to annuities granted thereunder before 1st April 1969: Pastoral Measure 1968, s 94, Sch. 8 para 7.

4 I.e. under the New Parishes Measure 1943, s 22.

5 See the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 94, Sch. 8 paras 1, 2. Generally, any licence, direction, designation, consent, notice or other thing given or done under the repealed provisions continues to have effect notwithstanding the repeal: Sch. 8 para 10. Any right of patronage created under any repealed provision is incapable of sale and any transfer of it for valuable consideration is void: Sch. 8 para 13. As to the saving of the Interpretation Act 1889, as applied by the Interpretation Measure 1925, see the Pastoral Measure 1968, Sch. 8 para 15.

6 Ibid Sch. 8 para 2. Any difficulty or question arising as to the application of the Measure, or to the effect of anything given or done under the repealed legislation, is determined by the directions of the Church Commissioners given under their seal: Sch. 8 para 12 (2). Where any scheme or part of a scheme made or pending under repealed legislation provides for the closure, demolition or appropriation to any use or uses of any church or part of a church, it is considered a redundancy scheme for the purposes of the application of the Measure (Sch. 8 para 3), save that s 61 (1) (see PARA 1076 post) does not apply unless a redundancy scheme so provides (Sch. 8 para 3 proviso). Where Sch. 8 para 3, applies, Sch. 8 para 2, does not: see Sch. 8 para 2 proviso. Any scheme under the Union of Benefices Act 1860, s 26, or the Union of Benefices Measure 1923, s 30, made by a bishop and approved by the Charity Commissioners before 1st April 1969, with respect to endowed lectureships, is also considered as a redundancy scheme: Pastoral Measure 1968, Sch. 8 para 5.

7 Ibid Sch. 8 para 12 (1). Despite this certain provisions postponing the creation of a new parish under the New Parishes Measure 1943, s 1, may be overridden: see the Pastoral Measure 1968, Sch. 8 para 4.

Where a scheme or order was pending¹ on 1st April 1969 under any repealed legislation the latter continues to apply, to the exclusion of the Pastoral Measure 1968, for the purposes of completing the proceedings, up to and including publication of notice of the scheme or order². Any duties which would have been performed in relation to the pending scheme or order by a committee constituted under any repealed legislation are carried out by the pastoral committee³ of the diocese concerned⁴.

Where an existing scheme or order was not in operation on 1st April 1969 because its operation depended upon the occurrence of a vacancy in any benefice and the incumbent of the benefice concerned agreed with the pastoral committee that if he resigned the benefice compensation would be payable for any loss suffered by him in consequence of his resignation, he is entitled to compensation if he resigns⁵.

1 As to whether a scheme or order was 'pending', see the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 94, Sch. 8 para 14. The operation of Sch. 8 is not affected by any repeals made by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1974, s 1, Schedule, Part VII: Part VII, note.

860. Pastoral orders.

Certain, although not all, of the powers exercisable under the Pastoral Measure 1968 are exercisable by pastoral order as well as by pastoral scheme¹. There are some procedural differences where a pastoral order is made. In both cases, it falls to the Church Commissioners to consider proposals emanating from the pastoral committee and submitted to the bishop². If it appears to them that the proposals, or some of them, could be implemented by the exercise of powers by a pastoral order, the commissioners must, or where part of the proposals only are concerned may, prepare a draft order to give effect to them³. Otherwise a draft scheme is prepared⁴. Ultimately the commissioners must obtain the bishop's consent to a draft scheme, after which they seal it and submit it for confirmation by Order in Council⁵, whereas in the case of a pastoral order the commissioners seal a copy of the draft order and submit it to the bishop who may, by applying his seal to it, make the order⁶.

861. Duties of diocesan pastoral committees.

The pastoral committee¹ of a diocese must from time to time, as may be directed by or agreed with the bishop², review the arrangements for pastoral supervision in the diocese and, where it considers it desirable, make recommendations to the bishop³ for any of the matters for which provision may be made⁴ by a pastoral scheme or order⁵, including recommendations affecting other dioceses⁶.

The committee must at all times have particular regard to the making of provision for the cure of souls in the diocese as a whole⁷ and have regard to the traditions, needs and characteristics of individual parishes⁸. The committee may consider representations made to it by any person, hold such consultations and interviews and make such inquiries as it thinks fit⁹.

1 As to the appointment and constitution of pastoral committees, see PARA 521 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'bishop', see PARA 813 note 3 ante.

3 In accordance with the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 3: see PARA 862 post.

4 In accordance with ibid Part II (ss. 16-41) (other than s 36, which relates to the alteration of diocesan boundaries), under Part III (ss. 42-66), or under the Sharing of Church Buildings Measure 1970, s 1. These matters include changes in benefices, parishes, extra-parochial places, archdeaconries and rural deaneries; team and group ministries; churches, churchyards and parsonage houses; patronage; endowments, stipends and other remuneration; sinecures; redundant churches; and the sharing of church buildings.

5 Pastoral Measure 1968, s 2 (1); Sharing of Church Buildings Measure 1970, s 1 (1) (a). The main changes for which the authority of a scheme (as distinct from an order) is required are the creation of new benefices and parishes; the dissolution of existing ones (see the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 16); the establishment and termination of team and group ministries (see ss 19-21); the declaring of churches to be redundant (see s 28); and the making of sharing agreements in respect of consecrated churches and parsonage houses (see the Sharing of Buildings Measure 1970, s 1). For observations, in an appeal against a redundancy scheme, on the weight the Privy Council attaches to the recommendations of pastoral committees, bishops and the Church Commissioners, see Elphick v Church Comrs [1974] AC 562, PC, and PARA 881 post.

6 Thus the recommendations may include such recommendations affecting another diocese or other dioceses as can be implemented under the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 35 (see PARA 866 post), and such recommendations and a scheme or order implementing them may be proceeded with, made and (in the case of a scheme) confirmed under that Measure (s. 11 (1), (2)), although (1) before ascertaining the views of interested parties in another diocese the pastoral committee must obtain the consent of the bishop of that diocese, who must consult his pastoral committee before consenting (s. 11 (1) (a)); and (2) the bishop of the first diocese must not submit draft proposals to the Church Commissioners under s 3 (6) without the consent of the other bishop and of the archbishop or, if both provinces are concerned, both archbishops (s. 11 (1) (b)).

7 Ibid s 2 (2) (a). This includes the provision of appropriate spheres of work and conditions of service for all persons engaged in the cure of souls and the provision for them of reasonable remuneration: s 2 (2) (a).

862. Draft proposals.

Before deciding to make any recommendations to the bishop¹ the pastoral committee, so far as is practicable, must ascertain the views of the interested parties² and, in the case of a recommendation that a church be declared redundant, of the Council for Places of Worship³. Where the interested parties are incumbents or vicars in a team ministry or parochial church councils the committee must, before reaching its decision, afford each incumbent or vicar and each council or its representatives an opportunity, if desired, of meeting the committee or a sub-committee or its representatives⁴.

The committee must then formulate its recommendations in draft proposals and submit them to the bishop, together with any comments and information furnished by the Council for Places of Worship⁵.

If the bishop approves the draft proposals he must, having obtained the necessary consents if other dioceses are involved⁶, submit the proposals to the Church Commissioners⁷, who must send copies to the interested parties informing them that, if the commissioners proceed to prepare a draft scheme or order, they will be given an opportunity of making representations⁸.

1 For the meaning of 'bishop', see PARA 813 note 3 ante.

2 Pastoral Measure 1968, s 3 (1). In relation to any recommendations, proposals or draft scheme or order 'interested parties' means the incumbents and patrons of any benefices affected, including vicars in a team ministry; the parochial church councils of any parishes affected; the archdeacons and rural deans of any archdeaconries and rural deaneries affected or to which any such benefices or parishes belong; and (save in the case of proposals and orders under s 13 (see PARAS 537, 538, 854 ante)) any local planning authorities concerned: ss 3 (2), 90 (1). For the meaning of 'patron', see PARA 813 note 5 ante; for the meaning of 'benefice', see PARA 768 note 1 ante; and for the meaning of 'parish', see PARA 534 ante. 'Local planning authority' means, outside Greater London, the district planning authority (ie the district council), and in Greater London, the Greater London Council and (in relation to the City of London) the Common Council or (in relation to a London borough) the council of that borough: s 90 (1); Town and Country Planning Act 1971, s 1 (1); Local Government Act 1972, ss 182 (1), 251, Sch. 29 para 39. If the recommendations etc. are limited to creating, naming, altering or dissolving archdeaconries and rural deaneries, no patrons count as interested parties: Pastoral Measure 1968, s 3 (2) proviso. For the purpose of s 2 (2) a change in the patronage of the benefice is deemed to affect that benefice and its parish or parishes: s 3 (2). For the position where planning legislation applies to any land whose development is regulated by the Pastoral Measure 1968, see s 91; Redundant Churches and other Religious Buildings Act 1969, s 7 (3); and PARA 1122 post. Incumbents, vicars in team ministries and parochial church councils must be given an opportunity to meet the committee or its representative: Pastoral Measure 1968, s 3 (3). As to interested parties in the case of a pastoral scheme affecting a guild church, see PARA 608 note 3 ante.

3 Ibid s 3 (4). As to the council, see PARA 1321 note 8 post.

In the case of a recommendation for a union of benefices or otherwise for the dissolution of a benefice, for the holding of benefices in plurality, for the establishment of a team or group ministry, or for the abolition of the office of vicar in a team ministry, the incumbent of the benefice or each benefice or the vicar must if he so desires have an opportunity of meeting the full committee: s 3 (3) proviso.

5 Ibid s 3 (5). The bishop may, with the committee's agreement, amend the draft proposals: s 3 (5).

6 See ibid s 11 (1) (b), and PARA 861 ante.

7 He must also send the commissioners any comments and information furnished by the Council for Places of Worship: s 3 (6).

862 Draft proposals

TEXT AND NOTES--Replaced.

Before deciding to make any recommendations to the bishop, the pastoral committee must so far as may be practicable ascertain the views of the interested parties¹ or, in the case of interested parties being local planning authorities, invite them to express their views².

In the case of interested parties, being incumbents or vicars in a team ministry, the pastoral committee must, before reaching its decision, afford to each incumbent or vicar, if he so desires, an opportunity of meeting the committee or sub-committee or representative, but, in the case of a recommendation for a union of benefices or otherwise for the dissolution of any benefice or the holding in plurality of any benefice or benefices, or the establishment of a team or group ministry for any benefice or benefices, or the abolition of any office of vicar in a team ministry, the incumbent of the benefice or each of the benefices or the holder of the office of vicar must have an opportunity of meeting the committee itself, as distinct from a sub-committee or representative, if he so desires³. In the case of interested parties, being parochial church councils, the committee must, before reaching its decision, afford to each council or its representative, if the council so requests, an opportunity of meeting the committee or, if the committee so decides, a sub-committee or, with the council's consent, a representative of the committee⁴.

Before deciding to make a recommendation that a declaration of redundancy be made in respect of any church the committee must (a) ascertain the views of any local planning authority or authorities concerned; (b) notify the Council for Places of Worship of the church or churches in respect of which the committee might decide to make such a recommendation and obtain from it a copy of the report which the Council is required⁵ to prepare⁶. As soon as practicable after receiving a notice⁷ the Council must prepare a report about the historic and architectural qualities of each church mentioned in the notice and of other churches in the area, the historic and aesthetic qualities of the contents of that and those churches and any special features of any churchyard or burial ground annexed to any of them, and send a copy of it to the commissioners, the diocesan board of finance and the pastoral committee⁸.

When the committee has decided to make recommendations, it must formulate them in draft proposals and submit them to the bishop, and the bishop may, with the committee's agreement, make such amendments of the draft proposals as appear to him desirable⁹. The committee must annexe to the draft proposals a statement of the views of the interested parties and, if those proposals include a proposal that a declaration of redundancy be made in respect of any church, it must annexe a copy of the report prepared by the Council¹⁰ to the draft proposals¹¹.

If the bishop approves, either with or without amendments, draft proposals submitted to him¹², he must submit the proposals as approved by the commissioners and inform the pastoral committee that he has done so¹³. The pastoral committee must send a copy of the proposals as approved by the bishop to every interested party with a notice informing him that if the Commissioners prepare a draft scheme or order to give effect to the proposals he will be given an opportunity of making representations with respect thereto¹⁴.

1 'Interested parties', in relation to any recommendations, proposals or draft scheme or order, means (a) incumbents of any benefices which would be affected by the implementing thereof, including vicars in a team ministry established for the area of any such benefice; (b) the patrons of any such benefices; (c) the parochial church councils of any parishes which would be so affected; (d) the priests in charge of any conventional districts wholly or partly within the area of any benefices which would be so affected and the parochial church councils of such districts; (e) the archdeacons and rural deans of any archdeaconries and rural deaneries which would be so affected or to which any such benefices or parishes belong and the lay chairmen of the deanery synods of any such deaneries; and (f) the local planning authority or authorities concerned: Pastoral Measure 1983 s 3(2). For these purposes a change in the patronage of a benefice is deemed to affect that benefice and the parish or parishes thereof: s 3(2). 'Incumbent', in relation to a benefice in respect of which a suspension period has been declared and is for the time being in force means the priest in charge thereof: s 3(11).

'Interested parties', in relation to any recommendations, proposals, draft scheme or order which are or is limited to creating, altering or dissolving archdeaconries or rural deaneries, or altering the name of any archdeaconry or rural deanery, means (a) the parochial church councils of any parishes for which a change of archdeaconry or rural deanery, or an alteration of the name thereof, is contemplated or proposed and the parochial church councils of any conventional districts wholly or partly within such parishes; (b) the incumbents of benefices to which such parishes belong and the priests in charge of such districts; and (c) the archdeacons and rural deans of the archdeaconries and deaneries affected and the lay chairmen of the deanery synods of such deaneries: s 3(3). Where a team ministry (see PARA 870) is established for the area of a benefice, the reference in (b) to the incumbents of benefices is construed, in relation to that benefice, as a reference to all the persons who constitute the team: s 3(3); Church of England (Legal Aid and Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1988 s 11.

In the case of recommendations under the 1983 Measure s 2A (see PARA 540), and proposals and orders under s 14 (see PARAS 537, 538, 854), the local planning authority or authority is not included among the interested parties: s 3(4) (amended by the Synodical Government (Amendment) Measure 2003 s 2(3)).

2 1983 Measure s 3(1). See also s 3(7)(a), TEXT AND NOTE 6. The 1983 Measure s 3(1), (2), (10) is amended and s 3(4), (7), (8) is omitted in relation to pastoral schemes which do not contain a declaration of closure of a church for regular public worship and to pastoral orders by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 ss 23(1), (3), 24, 25. 863. Recommendations by joint pastoral committees.

A joint pastoral committee is constituted¹ where it appears to bishops of two or more dioceses desirable in order to consider diocesan boundaries and the pastoral arrangements in adjacent areas². Such a committee may make recommendations to the bishops of the dioceses concerned³, and the same provisions⁴ apply to those recommendations and their formulation and submission as draft proposals as apply to recommendations and draft proposals of a pastoral committee, and the same proceedings may be taken on them⁵, save that the bishops or registrars of the dioceses concerned act in place of the bishop or registrar⁶.

1 As to the constitution of joint pastoral committees, see the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 12 (2), and PARA 457 ante.

2 Ibid s 12 (1): see PARA 457 ante.

3 Ibid s 12 (5). The recommendations are such the implementing of which would require the exercise of powers under s 36 (alteration of diocesan boundaries: see PARA 457 ante): s 12 (1).

4 Ie the provisions of ibid s 3: see PARA 862 ante.

5 Ie under ibid ss 3-9: see PARA 878 et seq post.

6 Ibid s 12 (5) (a). Further, the limitation of s 4 (3) to powers exercisable other than under s 36 clearly does not apply, and so much of s 4 (3) as relates to the preparation of a draft order does not apply: s 12 (5) (b). For s 4 (3), see PARA 878 post.

864. Changes in benefices and parishes.

A pastoral scheme¹ may provide for the creation, whether by union or otherwise, of new benefices or parishes², for the dissolution of existing benefices or parishes³, for the alteration of the areas of existing benefices or parishes (including the transfer of a parish from one benefice to another)⁴ or the definition of their boundaries⁵, or for the creation of new extra-parochial places, the incorporation in parishes of existing extra-parochial places or the alteration or definition of the boundaries of existing extra-parochial places⁶. A pastoral scheme must name every new benefice and new parish created by the scheme, and a pastoral scheme or order may alter the name of any benefice or parish⁷.

A pastoral scheme providing for the union of two or more benefices may provide for uniting all the parishes within the area of the new benefice or for uniting some but not all those parishes, or may leave them as separate parishes⁸. A scheme may also provide for the creation of a new parish with full parochial status, notwithstanding that the parish so created will have no parish church when the provision comes into operation⁹.

⁵ See ibid s 16 (1) (c). This power may also be exercised by pastoral order, but not so as to transfer from any benefice or parish any church used for public worship: s 38 (a).

⁶ See ibid s 16 (1) (d). This power may also be exercised by pastoral order, but not so as to transfer from any benefice or parish any church used for public worship: s 38 (a). As to the alteration of diocesan boundaries by a pastoral scheme, see s 36, and PARA 457 ante.

⁹ Ibid s 16 (4). Where a parish has no parish church the bishop must make provision for public worship by licensing one or more buildings for such worship: s 29 (1). He may designate any building so licensed as the parish centre of worship: s 29 (2); see further PARA 539 ante. For the meaning of 'bishop', see PARA 813 note 3 ante. NOTES--Consolidated in Pastoral Measure 1983; see s 17. Although a pastoral scheme cannot be made under the 1983 Measure in order to deprive an incumbent of his benefice or to punish him, the Church Commissioners may approve a scheme under the 1983 Measure, if it is justified thereunder, even though different relief could be obtained by recourse to the Incumbents (Vacation of Benefice) Measure 1977 (see PARA 733A): Cheesman v Church Comrs [1999] 3 WLR 630, PC.

865. Churches and church buildings.

A pastoral scheme may provide for a new church¹ and for it to become, after its approval by the Church Commissioners as suitable for a parish church and once it has been consecrated², a parish church in the parish³ in which it is situated either in substitution for an existing parish church or otherwise⁴.

A pastoral scheme may authorise the making of sharing agreements on behalf of the Church of England in respect of consecrated churches and parsonage houses⁵ which under the agreement will be in the joint ownership of that and any other church⁶. A scheme authorising the making of such an agreement must specify the church or parsonage house to which it relates and may specify terms and conditions subject to which the authority is given⁷.

1 'Church' means a church or chapel which has been consecrated for the purpose of public worship according to the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England, and includes a building used or intended to be used partly for the purpose of such public worship and partly for the purpose of a church hall, whether the whole building is consecrated or only the part of it to be used for worship: Pastoral Measure 1968, s 90 (1).

2 Any reference in the Pastoral Measure 1968 to the consecration of a church is to be construed, in the case of a building used partly for worship and partly as a church hall, as including a reference to the consecration of the part to be used for worship: s 90 (1).

3 For the meaning of 'parish', see PARA 534 ante.

4 Pastoral Measure 1968, s 27 (5). Where a pastoral scheme creates a new parish or alters a parish, special provisions apply in relation to parish churches and consequential matters: see s 27, and PARA 538 ante. A pastoral scheme may also make a declaration of redundancy in respect of a church: see s 28, and PARA 1119 post. Unless this has been done, the scheme may make provision for the use of a churchyard or other land annexed or belonging to a church or a burial ground vested in the incumbent of the benefice: see s 30, and PARA 1074 post.

Where a benefice is dissolved by a pastoral scheme and the Church Commissioners hold money for expenditure on capital purposes in connection with a parsonage house for the benefice, or money arising in connection with its disposal, the Parsonages Measure 1938 applies to such money as it applies to that arising from the sale of property of the benefice thereunder, with necessary modifications: Pastoral Measure 1968, s 33 (5). The scheme may, however, provide that such money or any part of it be paid into the diocesan pastoral account: s 33 (5) Proviso.

5 For the meaning of 'parsonage house', see PARA 814 note 5 ante, applied by the Sharing of Church Buildings Measure 1970, s 3.

6 Ibid s 1 (1) (b). The provisions of the Pastoral Measure 1968 apply to such schemes, recommendations leading to them and proceedings to be taken on them as they apply to those relating to other matters contained in Part II (ss. 16-41): Sharing of Church Buildings Measure 1970, s 1 (1) (c).

Notwithstanding anything in the 1938 Measure s 5 (see PARA 1162), a pastoral scheme or order may provide that any money arising from any sale or exchange under the 1938 Measure of any part of the property of a benefice specified in the scheme or order, or so much of that money as may be so specified, must (a) be held by the commissioners for the benefit of any other benefice so specified; or (b) be paid into the capital account of the diocesan stipends fund; or (c) be paid into the diocesan pastoral account; or (d) be applied towards the provision, restoration, improvement or repair of a church or a place of worship within the meaning of 1983 Measure s 46 (see PARA 1120) or a parsonage house or a house for a vicar in a team ministry or an assistant curate: ss 33(5), 37(1)(i) (renumbered by the Team and Group Ministries Measure 1995 s 5).

866. Other dioceses.

A pastoral scheme may, with the necessary consents¹, apply to a diocese other than the one in which the proposals for it originated, to the extent that it may provide for (1) the union of benefices or parishes comprising one or more benefices or parishes from each of the two dioceses²; (2) creating a new benefice (otherwise than by union) for an area comprising areas from both dioceses³; (3) the transfer of a parish from a benefice in one diocese to a benefice in the other⁴; (4) creating a new extraparochial place comprising areas from both dioceses or transferring such a place from one diocese to the other, whether by means of incorporation in a parish or otherwise⁵; (5) altering the boundaries between a parish or extra-parochial place in one diocese and a parish or extra-parochial place in the other⁶; (6) the holding in plurality of benefices comprising one or more benefices from each diocese⁷; and (7) establishing a group ministry⁸ for a group of benefices comprising one or more benefices from each diocese⁹. In relation to any benefice, parish or extra-parochial place affected by any of the above provisions, provision may also be made by the provide in relation to any one of them when wholly comprised in one diocese, subject to necessary or expedient modifications¹⁰.

The above powers may be exercised in relation to more than one diocese other than that in which the proposals for the scheme originated, in which case they include power to create a benefice or parish (by union or otherwise) or an extra-parochial place comprising benefices, parishes or areas from all the dioceses concerned, to alter a benefice, parish or extra-parochial place so as to comprise areas from all those dioceses or to establish a group ministry for benefices from all those dioceses¹¹.

A pastoral scheme to which these provisions¹² apply must allocate any benefice, parish or extra-parochial place which includes areas from two or more dioceses to such one of those dioceses and, within it, to such archdeaconry and rural deanery as may be designated by the scheme¹³. Where any such entity is transferred from one diocese to another by a pastoral scheme, special supplementary provisions apply¹⁴.

When provisions as to patronage are made by a pastoral scheme¹, regard must be had to the interests of persons whose rights of patronage cease to exist by virtue of the scheme² and the interests of patrons of benefices to be held in plurality³. Where there are pastoral or practical objections, however, the scheme need not provide for conferring new patronage rights on the first-mentioned persons, or on all of them, or for sharing the exercise of the patronage rights of the benefices to be held in plurality among the patrons of those benefices or all of them⁴.
